JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Nixon crime war is a dismal failure; Convictions down in most categories; Hazards on wheels head down highways.

Water Problem Solution

BENTON — One way to help solve rural water problems is to pump water from water surplus areas to the rural communities, Jim Green told the Scott County Mayors Association last night.

He said the county court should form water districts that would allow rural areas to buy water from larger communities. This would save the rural areas the cost of building a water plant, and would give the town selling the water an extra source of revenue.

Green said the water district plan has been used elsewhere with success.

The mayors discussed the possibility of county planning and zoning. Mayor Louie Hirschowitz of Oran suggested establishing building codes in the county that would apply to construction outside city limits. He said this would prevent uncontrolled growth in the county.

Charity Gambling Defeated

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri House today defeated a proposed constitutional amendment that would have authorized charity gambling and created a state lottery. The vote was 63-89.

Last year the voters soundly defeated another constitutional change that would have allowed parimutuel gambling on horse races. It was sponsored in the legislature last year by the same man who sponsored the gambling proposal today, Rep. Earl Schlef, D-Dellwood.

He said a state lottery would produce about $14 million a year for public education, mental health and a property tax exemption for older Missourians.

Other supporters said bingo and charity gambling already are conducted across the state and the proposal would just change the Constitution to make it legal.

But opponents said it would attract organized crime and would take food out of the mouths of the children of poor persons.

The House passed and sent to the Senate another proposed constitutional change that would let any Missouri county vote on whether to adopt a charter form of government. An election on the proposal would be called by 10 per cent of the voters.

Also sent to the Senate was a constitutional change to exempt household goods, clothes and jewelry from the personal property tax. It also would let second, third and fourth class counties levy a property tax of up to 75 cents on each $100 of assessed valuation. The limit is 50 cents.

Marriage And Divorce Bill

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri House of Representatives wrangled for nearly two hours Tuesday over a so-called uniform marriage and divorce bill, then killed it 52-74.

Sponsors said it would modernize the laws on marraige and divorce but opponents said it would make divorce too easy. Another "no fault" divorce bill died in the House last year.

The House advanced a bill setting up a statewide milk inspection for Grade "A" milk, the kind that is sold for home consumption.

It would grant a 12-man board authority to contract with inspectors for local health units. The House defeated an effort to put the system under the Department of Agriculture.

Also advanced was a bill reducing from .15 of 1 per cent to .10 of 1 per cent the amount of alcohol in the driver's blood denoting intoxication. There was no debate as the House approved that one. It is similar to one advanced in the Senate Tuesday.

Peace Talks To Start Again

PARIS (AP)- The Communist delegations to the Vietnam peace talks agreed today to a U. S. South Vietnamese proposal to meet Thursday for the first time in three weeks.

The United States refused to meet on Feb. 17 because of anti-American Vietnam peace meeting being held that week at Versailles. As soon as the conference resumed Feb. 24, the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong walked out in protest against American bombing of North Vietnam.

The United States and South Vietnam refused to meet for the next two weeks because of the Communist walkout and "the tone and content of recent official announcements from Hanoi," which were sharply critical of President Nixon.

Man Charged in Crash

ADVANCE — A Daisy man was charged by the highway patrol with following too closely in a two-vehicle mishap at 8:10 a.m. Tuesday at the junction of highways 25 and 91 in Advance.

A 1972 Ford traveling south, driven by Marline Wiseman, 37, of Advance, had stopped for a red light, the patrol said, and was struck in the rear by a southbound 1963 Chevrolet truck driven by Carl J. McCauley, 70, of Daisy, who was arrested.

Arrested For Trespassing

Charleston HUD Arrangement

CHARLESTON — Elmer Smith, director of the Kansas City region of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, will be in Charleston Thursday to sign an annual arrangement with the city.

Charleston is one of a few towns in the country to be designated an Annual Arrangement City. Under the annual arrangement designation, Charleston will sign yearly agreements for financing the HUD programs it needs. The arrangement will permit coordination of urban renewal, public housing, and water and sewer improvement programs.

In addition to the formal signing of the annual arrangements contract, Charleston officials and citizens will officially kick-off their $4.3 million urban renewal project. There will be a ribbon cutting and demolition of the first sub-standard structure in the project at 2 p.m. Thursday.

Gov. and Mrs. Warren E. Hearnes are expected to attend.

Following the activities in Charleston, Smith will attend the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission meeting at the Holiday Inn in Sikeston at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

Free Book Bill

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Free textbooks would be provided by the state for all students in public, private or parochial schools under a bill passed by the Missouri Senate today and sent to the House.

Although the bill caused a long argument earlier, it was passed today on a 24-8 vote with no debate.

Also passed and sent to the House, 24-7, was a bill that would permit a circuit judge to transfer an incorrigible juvenile from the boys or girls state training schools at Boonville and Chillicothe to adult penal institutions.

Sen. Ike Skelton, D&Lexington, said such transfers are essential to prevent incorrigible inmates from disrupting the institutions. He said assaults, escapes and disciplinary problems have increased tremendously since the Supreme Court ruled last year the Board of Training Schools could not authorize such transfers without a court hearing.

An emergency clause to make the bill effective immediately on enactment failed to pass by one vote.

Other bills passed and sent to the House today included measures to:

Let 18-year-olds and others vote for president and vice president after 30 days residence in the state instead of the present 60 days.

Cut the interest on delinquent sales tax accounts from 3 per cent to 1 per cent a month.

Add kidnaping of hostages to the general kidnaping law, with penalties ranging up to life in prison or death.

Increase the "fate pay" of released state prisoners from $25 to $100 plus a new suit and a bus ticket home.

Raise the pay of second class county sheriffs $2,000 a year to $16,000 and cut out some of the present fees.

Let Jackson and St. Louis County levy a single tax to use for either public hospitals or community health services, without increasing the present 38-cent total rate.

Urban Renewal

CHARLESTON — Prior to the meeting of the city council last night, a public hearing on the Neighborhood Development program was held with Tanna Parish, Urban Renewal director, explaining the program to 20 residents, who either live in or own property in the five sections of the city which have been designated as areas for the program.

Parish told the group an estimated $185,000 will be available through the Department of Housing and Urban Development this year for the acquisition and tearing down of vacant and condemned structures in the five sections.

Under this program property owners can receive three per cent loans on up to $12,000 with a 20-year limitation for rehabilitation of their property. In addition, owner- occupants with incomes of under $3,000 may receive a $3,500 grant to rehabilitate their homes.

A resolution to advertise the 1972 street paving program was adopted by the council. Included will be portions of Carroll, Davis, Helena, Lafayette, Ninth, Sherman, Shelby, Tom Brown, and Warren streets. Two blocks of Bird Avenue from Main Street to the city limits will be included in the advertisement for bids.

An ordinance amending the election polling places was passed. Voting in the April 4 election will not be by precincts. Ballots may be cast at the armory or city hall.

A request from the Molly French Garden club for the annual Spring Clean Up March 27 - April 7 was granted.

A bid of $685 for a Master's compactor was accepted as was a $727 bid from Carson's for a fogger.

The council accepted a bid of $13,944, less trade-in,

Classroom Space Sought By Board

An expected increase of 78 students next year at the junior high school has forced the school board to search for extra classrooms space.

The board discussed renting the Walker supermarket building on Moore street, yesterday, but will wait until next month to make a final decision. The building is owned by Richard McDougal, himself a candidate for the school board.

Board members said they would wait until the lease meets their specifications and until refurbishing costs are known. The board is seeking a one-year lease with four one-year options. The rent will be nearly $3,000 per year with the cost of renovation about $2,000. The renovation will include the addition of one washroom and temporary partitions to create classroom space.

Sam Harbin, superintendent of schools, told the board that a mobile classroom now at the school will be moved to Lee Hunter school. Thirty-three students within Lee Hunter's district are attending Southwest school this year, Harbin said. The mobile classroom will give Lee Hunter the extra space needed to bring the students back to Lee Hunter, he added.

The board adopted a code of conduct for students, faculty and staff. The code is a complication of existing rules and regulations that attempts to remove confusion from existing school rules.

Roger Sherman principal of the high school, told the board the north Central evaluation committee report on the Sikeston school system has been received. The report will not be released to public until the middle of April, after the board meets with Neil Aslin, head of the north central committee.

Sherman said, however, that he was pleased with the report. He said it showed the school's strengths and weaknesses. He added the committee's recommendations are sound, although some probably will not be followed for lack of finances.

The board also reset the last day of school from June 3 to May 26. The calendar adjustment was made because the school did not close as many days as usual this year. Graduation will be May 29.

Five Seek School Posts

NEW MADRID — Five candidates have filed to fill two positions on the New Madrid County R-1 enlarged school board in the April 4 school election.

Filing deadline was 6 p.m. Tuesday.

Eaves is awaiting circuit court action on two additional charges of burglary and larceny in connection with breakins and thefts in January of Tip's Hardware and Sickrey's Department Store in Lilbourn.

Assessed $15 fines each were John Newton Crockett, operating vehicle with expired truck license; and Bonds Welding Supply Co., illegal inter-state hauling.

Missouri Farmers Association was granted $456.45 judgment in civil suit filed against R. T. McGee. Missouri Delta Community Hospital of Sikeston dismissed without prejudice civil suit against Louie B. Wolfe.

George Wallace Landslide Win

Miami Primary

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The Democratic presidential campaign has been scrambled by a Florida primary in which Gov. George C. Wallace won by a landslide, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey claimed victory in second place and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie suffered a drubbing.

Humphrey said today that Wallace is now "a formidable opponent ... no doubt about that" but predicted the governor would never win the Democratic presidential nomination.

"I'll get it," Humphrey said in an interview on NBC's "Today" show.

Wallace, who rode to victory on his opposition to school busing and his pledges to bear down on crime and tax the wealthy, also appeared on the show and said he felt the small showing of his Democratic rivals in the primary was "a blow" to all of them.

School busing was the top issue of the campaign. The Florida voters, in a straw ballot which has no legal effect, overwhelmingly registered opposition to court-ordered school busing to achieve integration. They also voted strongly in support of quality education for all.

Wallace's victory of 42 per cent of the Democratic vote gave him 75 of the state's 81 delegates to the party's national convention; Humphrey won 6 with his 18 per cent.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington finished third with 13 per cent, ahead of Muskie with his 9 per cent, and vowed to win the April 4 Wisconsin primary.

New York Mayor John V. Lindsay won 7 per cent—barely edging Sen. George S. McGovern for fifth place after a heavy investment here in time and money. McGovern took 6 per cent.

In the Republican primary, President Nixon swept to victory with 87 per cent of the vote and easily won all 40 delegates to the GOP National Convention.

—Muskie: The preprimary frontrunner, he suffered a second successive blow after last week's lackluster victory in New Hampshire. The primaries in Illinois next Tuesday and later in Wisconsin now loom as crucial.

—Humphrey: Fighting to overcome a "loser" image, the former vice president got the boost he sought when he bypassed New Hampshire to concentrate here. He appears to be Muskie's main rival in Wisconsin.

—Wallace: The Alabama governor got the heavy vote he sought and will now enter many other primaries, both in the South and in Northern states such as Wisconsin, Indiana and Maryland.

"I believe I have as good a chance as anyone to win the party nomination," he said at his Orlando headquarters.

Humphrey won his six delegates in a district including heavily Jewish Miami Beach, where half the population is over 65. "Among the progressive Democrats," the 1968 nominee said, "I am the leader."

The top six Democrats who ran in Florida, including Wallace, are entered in the Wisconsin primary. McGovern is challenging Muskie for many Illinois delegates, while former Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota opposes the Maine senator in that state's presidential preference vote.

More than 1.6 million Floridians, three-fourths of them Democrats, voted in the state's first presidential preference primary. Previous contests have been for delegates only.

Wallace swept ahead with the first votes from his rural, north Florida strongholds and captured every one of the state's 67 counties, including populous Dade which encompasses the city of Miami and surrounding suburbs.

"This is my message to the national politicians," the Alabamian said as he hailed his larger-than-expected victory and the massive vote, nearly 3 to 1, for the antibusing proposal.

The proposal had been fought by Florida Gov. Reubin Askew and opposed by presidential candidates Humphrey, Muskie, Lindsay and McGovern.

Muskie, in a somber mood, assailed Wallace as "a demagogue of the worst sort" and vowed to fight him elsewhere around the nation. "We'll win some battles, we'll lose some battles," the Maine senator said.

His crushing defeat seemed certain to spur a reassessment, already under way, of his campaign plan of running in most of the 24 primaries, a strategy which Muskie has said in recent days may have spread him too thin while his opponents selected their best opportunities.

He is committed to the Illinois and Wisconsin races as well as the next major tests April 25 in Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, and May 2 in Ohio. Aides have indicated he may limit some of his later primary activities.

Lindsay, calling Wallace's victory "deeply disturbing," said he will run in Wisconsin and Massachusetts and "in every state where Wallace is an issue or a threat."

McGovern, who never figured to do very well here, spent only limited funds and time while preparing for the Illinois and Wisconsin races.

In the GOP contest, Nixon polled 87 per cent of the vote to 9 per cent for Conservative Rep. John Ashbrook of Ohio and 4 per cent for Liberal Rep. Paul N. McCloskey of California.

$40 Taken In Holdup

WARDELL — An attendant at the West End service station was held up at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday by a young man with a .22 caliber pistol, the highway patrol said.

The patrol said the armed robber took about $40 from the attendant and escaped in a car with other companions.

Employ Counsel Time Granted To Nesby

CHARLESTON -- Clifford Nesby, 36, Charleston, was given until Thursday to employ counsel to represent him on a manslaughter charge by Magistrate T. J. Brown, Jr.

The charge was filed in connection with the March 4 death of Charles Desmute, 87, Charleston. Nesby is being held in the Mississippi county jail in lieu of $2,500 bond.

Jerry Woodrow Warren was given a five- day suspended sentence and placed on six month probation on a common assault charge. Condition of his probation is that he obey the law and pay costs of $16.50.

Fines of $36 each were assessed Charles Lee McMillan and Benny Joe Evans on a charge of going beyond 25 miles on a local license.

Speeding charges and fines included Floyd Mason, $26; Gary Wayne Scott, $29; and Donald Lee Hubbard, $26.

Kenneth Ray Moore, charged with public intoxication and improper registration, paid $10 fines on each charge together with $14.50 costs.

Warren Gene Spiva paid a $21 fine for improper parking, involved in accident.

Wayne Lee Turner and Roberta Coleman each paid $21 fines for failure to have an operator's license. $16 fines each were levied against John Michael Horn, Mo. resident with out of state operator's license and Frances O. Fox, out- of-state vehicle license while a Missouri resident. A $27.75 fine was given Richard E. Layton for having an out of state operator's license. Phillip Wayne McCuiston paid a $21 fine for out- of -state license.

Eugene H. Hooper paid a $16 fine and Calvin Lynn Presley paid a $21 fine for expired truck license. A $16 fine was assessed Guyland Sam Dean for expired vehicle license.

Judge Brown ruled Winford Leon Rutledge had been properly charged with the commissinon of crime in Illinois and had fled from Justice. Rutledge told the court he no longer desired to avoid extradition and was returned to Illinois in custody of the sheriff of Pulaski county.

Judgment of $105.91 at six percent interest and $10 costs was awarded Willard and James Bomar, doing business as Bomar Equipment Company in an account suit brought against Donnie Ditto.

Household Finance Corporation was given judgment in a promissory note suit seeking $981.86 at six percent interest from date of judgment and court costs of $15 from Willie D. and Betty Menzies.

UNITED IRELAND

An organization has been formed in New York called United Ireland. Its purpose is to win civil rights for the Catholic minority there through peaceful means, and to work for the ultimate reunification of the country.

Head of the organization is a well known Catholic writer, the Rev. Daniel Lyons, S. J. He can be contacted by writing to him at 86 Riverside Drive, New York, N.Y. 10024.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY

Every country has its saint, under whose care it is supposed to be. Not really, you know, but that is what is called tradition. The English call theirs St. George, the Welsch have St. David, the Scot clings to St. Andrew, the French call it St. Denys, and the saint dearest to the Irish people is St. Patrick.

His day is March seventeenth. It is not known wether he was born in Scotland or in a country known as Armoric Gaul. The year of his birth is unknown. He is thought to be the son of a man named Calpurnius.

When St. Patrick was sixteen, about the year 403, he was taken captive with several others, conveyed in a boat to Ireland, and sold as a slave. He worked hard, and was a great religious man. There were many snakes in Ireland, and he drove them out of the land.

He died a very old man on March 17, 465, and for his good work he has become the patron saint of Ireland.

JACKSON'S PLACE IN HISTORY

Andrew Jackson holds such a special place in American history that the counties, cities and streets bearing his name are beyond count.

He was born 205 years ago today and Memphis, celebrating the 153rd anniversary of its founding, is calling attention to the anniversary with good reason. He was literally a founder, one of three partners who owned the land and laid off the frontier town in 1819.

He was also a founder as one of the two representatives of the United States in purchasing from the Chicasaw Nation title to North Mississippi, West Tennessee and Western Kentucky the year before.

One of the most familiar works of fine art in Memphis is the marble bust which was placed in Court Square, in the heart of the city, more than a century ago. It was moved out of the weather to the main corridor of the courthouse in 1910, where a wreath was placed yesterday.

His is a name that stands especially for opportunity open to the common man under methods established by. the United States. He was born in such obscurity that there is still an argument about the location. He was an orphan at 14 and worked in a saddlery shop, but he lifted himself to the status of school teacher and then to the legal profession, and eventually to the Tennessee Supreme Court.

His place in history is based on this same rise from humble beginnings, for he was the first president elected from outside of the upper classes of Virginia and Massachusetts.

Another part of his standing as a spokesman for the "West" of his day is the often overlooked fact that Andrew Jackson was the first member of the House from Tennessee.

This was the man who had first-hand knowledge of the Indian country and who considered the bluff against the big river as the most likely site for a metropolis. We honor his memorable accomplishments today.

VIEWPOINT: THE GAMES LEADERS PLAY

By Jack Stapleton Jr.

Two weeks ago, I had 800 million enemies.

Now, I have 800 million friends.

And I am angry.

The anger has been growing more intense during the past few days as picture followed picture from far-away China; a beaming Nixon shaking hands with a beaming Mao Tse-tung; a smiling Nixon toasting a graciously bowing Chou En-lai — the papers, the news magazines and my television set seemed crowded with laughing Nixons, chuckling Maos and wryly grinning Chou En-lais.

How warm and witty and friendly they all were.

And the Chinese people! How friendly and kind and thoughtful and dedicated and happy with their lot.

That's fine. To tell you the truth, I'm glad to have 800 million new friends. I am grateful to Mr. Nixon for having the courage to give them to me — and me to them. And I am delighted that Mao and Chou went along with the deal.

How easy it all was.

Yet for 20 years I have been taught to hate and fear the Chinese people and their leaders. The people were automatons drudging away in a backward ant-like society led by power-mad dictators who dreamed of sweeping across Asia with their hordes and bringing America to her knees.

For 20 years my leaders have been teaching me that. With my own ears, I have heard American Presidents warn of the Chinese Communists; I have heard Secretaries of State speak almost hysterically of the dangers of China; and I have heard members of the United States Congress warn of the evil designs of the People's Republic of China. And these same leaders have led me into wars in Korea and Vietnam to preserve democracy and contain these bloody-handed Red tyrants.

For the same 200 years, Mao and Chou were teaching their 800 million people to hate and fear me. I was a running dog of imperialism, bent on destroying their revolution and ruling them again through corrupt capitalist warlords like Chiang Kai-shek. So they marched off into battle to kill me and mine.

And how easy all that was, too.

But now, overnight, our leaders have decided that I and a quarter of the human race will be friends again.

Primarily because it suits their purposes.

I'm not positive what their purposes are. I would guess that Mao and Chou want my friendship to worry Taiwan and Japan and to make the Russians think twice before attacking China from the west.

I would guess that Mr. Nixon is giving them my friendship in hopes of playing off Peking against Moscow, thus maintaining the split in the Communist bloc. I'm not sure, but he might even be thinking of next November's election.

But these are the games leaders play. Containment, encirclement, blocs, splits — the fascinating game of geopolitics. And, being leaders, they play to win. I believe they play for themselves to win — not for me.

For if I die on some unpronounceable battlefield, I have lost forever. But they have only lost another of their millions of pawns. For them, the game goes on and on and on.

Yet this is not so much what angers me. I understand the fascination of the game. If I were a leader, I would probably play it, too.

What angers me is how easy it was.

How easily they manipulated me into hating and fearing when that served their purpose. How easily they now maneuver me into liking and admiring when that serves their purpose. How easily — almost contemptuously — they turn my emotions on and off like hot and cold water faucets.

So I am angry with myself. Okay, this time I'll play. This time I'll give and accept goodwill and friendship. But when they again ask for my hatred and fear, God give me the spirit to reject their games.

How very hard that will be.

—Daily Dunklin Democrat

MORE VANISHING AMERICANA

Hundreds of years ago the English bulldog was bred for bull-baiting, in which the dog would provoke the bull by biting its ear and holding on for dear life. But bull-baiting has long since vanished, and the bulldog survives only as a house pet. Something similar may be happening to the sturdy sled dogs of the Artic. Visitors to Alaska and northern Canada who expect to see sleds pulled by teams of huskies are likely to be disappointed. To an ever-increasing extent, the dog sled is being replaced by the snowmobile.

Ned Nusunginya, 73, used to deliver mail by dog sled between Barrow and Kotzebue, Alaska -- a trip of 340 miles that took about a month, including stops along the way. Asked if he still had a dog team, Nusunginya told a National Geographic reporter (October 1971): "No, I get around by snowmobile now. I've seen enough dogs in my life, and almost always from the wrong end."

So it appears that the dog sled is going the way of the stagecoach. Before long, the only way to see the dogs in action may be to attend the North American Dog Sled Championship, to be held this year in Fairbanks starting Friday, March 17. Memories of the sled dog are being kept alive in other ways, too. Is it possible to love a husband too much? It was said of a woman that she loved her husband so much that she was at his heels all the time, deluging him with attentions. It was a question which was to be pitied more: he for the attentions at times out of place, or she for the rebuffs.

WHAT TAX LAWS TELL US

In the House a group of Democrats is preparing a tax reform bill that would produce seven billion dollars in revenues and in the Senate four Democrats, including Missouri's Eagleton, are sponsoring a bill that would add 15 billion to the federal treasury. Neither of these measures would raise taxes for most Americans; rather, they would end the more egregious tax favoritism that has been bestowed on corporations and wealthy individuals.

This is an endeavor that ought to attract support readily from both sides of the aisles and from the Administration, too. After all, the elimination of favoritism would be equitable, it would help restore confidence in government, it would produce badly-needed revenues and it would help control inflation. Notwithstanding all those attractive features, tax reform has not been endorsed by the White House; if anything it appears to oppose efforts to correct inequities.

But any tax system that permits 112 Americans to have incomes in excess of $200,000 each and yet pay no income taxes, that makes special concessions to the extractive industries, that treats income from investments more generously than earned income and that provides corporations with handy devices, such as the investment tax credit and the accelerated depreciation allowance by which to reduce tax liability substantially is plainly in need of reform. Tax favoritism, rather than so-called full employment spending, helps run the federal budget up to a deficit of 25 billion dollars.

Our tax code, especially as amended in 1969 and again in 1971, stands as a voluminous testament to the triumph of special interests over the public interest, and as an index of sources of power in this country. Is Congress willing to let such a record be the measure of our system? — Post-Dispatch.

WARNING TO MISSOURI

The stunning defeat of a 2.5 billion dollar transportation bond issue in New York on Tuesday is a portent that Missouri backers of a proposed bond issue for roads, rapid transit, and airports must take into serious account in their planning. The New York issue for highways and mass transit, lost 2,400,000 to 1,500,000. It had the all-out support of Gov. Rockefeller, Mayor Lindsay, both major political parties, chambers of commerce, good government groups and labor unions.

Early analysis suggested the voters rebelled against The Establishment. The principal opponent, labor mediator Theodore Kheel, said the issue was rejected because voters opposed the earmarking of 1.5 billion dollars for highways. A majority of New York City voters turned against the proposal even though part of the money would have been used to save the 30-cent subway fare, which now may rise to 45 cents.

Mr. Rockefeller, who staked his prestige on the outcome, said the defeat had struck "a mortal blow at mass transit and highwav projects," and no doubt Gov. Hearnes and other Missourians will be inquiring into just what happened, with the objective of avoiding a similar result in this state. That should be a first assignment for Frank P. Begley, who has been appointed to direct the drive for the Missouri proposal.

Mr. Hearnes apparently has not decided whether to take the Missouri proposal to the Legislature in January or begin an inititative petition campaign, or how to put the matter before the state's voters (it could be at a special election, the August primary or the general election next November). We tend to favor the initiative route, and submission at the November balloting when a large turnout of voters can be expected.

The $700,000,000 Missouri proposal would provide $475,000,000 for highways, $150,000,000 for rapid transit and smaller amounts for busses, bridges and airports. It is a lot of money, and backers throughout the state should complete plans and start an educational campaign as soon as feasible. After all, the state gave overwhelming approval to a $150,000,000 water pollution control bond issue a few weeks ago. That success ought to be the model for the new campaign, not the defeat in New York.—Post-Dispatch.

IRREPLACEABLE ASSET

When we read about the population explosion, the first thought that comes to mind is what affect additional tens of millions of people will have on the environment. Will there be enough air, water and soil to go around? Other important questions, that have received far less thought, concern expanded production and distribution facilities and provision for millions of new jobs every year -- jobs ready and waiting for young adults as they turn to making a living. These are the tasks of what we are pleased to call "business". It is up to business to produce and distribute the luxuries and necessities required by a growing population -- and business is the primary source of jobs.

In the midst of this gigantic cycle is the modern mass retail distribution system – a system that has grown with the country from the open cracker - barrel days to the complex, computerized, highly - competitive merchandising marvel of today. The house organ of one of the largest retail institutions in the country, a chain store concern operating hundreds of stores throughout the nation, devoted a considerable portion of a year - end issue to the changes in its operations during the past decade. During the 60's, competition, changing consumer tastes and the urge to improve service led the company into widely diversified merchandising innovations. These changes in the company's operations have resulted in almost doubling its size. The number of "associates" -- the people working for the company -- has increased from 40,000 in 1960 to about 100,000 in 1969.

None of this growth and none of the new jobs that were created each year came automatically. They were the result of hard business decisions and risk taking in the hope of a modest profit. Such is the way the competitive, free market system works. This system has demonstrated its ability to grow with the country. It is an irreplaceable asset.

A HOLIDAY ANYHOW

Few Americans were ever taught that George Washington's birthday fell on Feb. 21, but that is when it will be observed this year, as part of the new Monday holiday system enacted by Congress. It is a fine system for purposes of rest and recreation, but perhaps not for historical tradition. More school children learned the date of Washington's birthday from the fact that school was let out than ever learned it from books. Even so, the date is relative. Washington was born on Feb. 11, 1732, under the Julian calendar. The date became Feb. 22 when England and its colonies turned to the Gregorian calendar in 1752. We doubt if the change ever bothered George Washington much but, then, it was not a holiday for him. — Post Dispatch.

TAX MONEY FOR THOUGHT CONTROL

The government is envolved in many areas where it has no business to be. One of the most recent and most alarming of these unjustified activities is research into the control of human begavior.

Congressman Cornelius Gallagher of New Jersey has uncovered evidence that millions of dollars of tax money have been spent for this purpose. The Department of Health, Education and Welfard, for example, has given out 70,000 grants and contracts for behavioral research; an additional 10,000 have come from the Manpower Administration in the Labor Department. According to the General Accounting office, the Defense Department, the National Aerouautics and Space Administration and the Atomic Energy Commission also sponsor behavioral projects.

The dangers in public financing of such projects are clearly shown by the work of B. J. Skinner, who received $283,000 from the National Institutes of Mental Health.

Dr. Skinner is best known for his book 'Beyond Freedom and Dignity,' which denies man's freedom to choose. Dr. Skinner essentially believes that men should be conditioned to behave in certain ways. He has called for government controls over the way men think and live.

The extent of government involvement in behavior control has yet to be uncovered. Congressmen Gallagher and Frank Horton of New York have co-authored legislation to set up a Select Committee on Privacy, Human Values and Democratic Institutions. Its first major undertaking would be to look into the government's involvement in behavior control research.

Then it will be up to the people and their elected representatives to see that government is kept completely out of any attempts at mind control.

NEW YORK (AP) — One never begins to grow up until he learns how to say no—and stick to it.

Until then he merely is a chance-buffeted chip riding the waves of mindless change in life. He matures only when he achieves a sense of self-direction.

You achieve that only by rejecting other directions that lead you the wrong way.

Here are a few invitations which, if accepted, lead usually to nothing but trouble:

"Let's play hooky today. I'll write a note to the teacher to excuse you, and you write one for me."

"Why make a big debate out of it? Why don't we just go ahead and get married—and see for ourselves whether we can get along?"

"If you think there's a robber hiding under the bed, why don't you just look there and see."

"Yes, this is our old family album. Do you want me to tell you what each of my relatives was like?"

"Shall I tell you what I really think of you, Gerald?"

"So this is what a cocktail lounge looks like! You look like a man a girl can trust. Do you want to buy me just a teentsyweentsy drink?"

"This joker must think he can bully you, Bob. Shall I hold your coat while you show him a thing or two?"

"Do you want me to help you do the dishes?"

"Here's an opportunity to show the whole regiment what kind of a man you are, private. Are you ready?"

"Let's just sit here in this grassy spot and look at the clouds sail by, Charlotte. We can rejoin the picnic later."

"Well, then, do you want me to pull all your teeth and get the whole business over with once and for all?"

"I don't see any rocks. Go ahead and dive in."

"I just put in a tiny smidgen of garlic, so eat all you want."

"Would you rather put your money where your mouth is?"

"They say it's good for people like us to talk over their marriage now and then, John. If I tell you why I married you, will you tell me why you married me—truthfully?"

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — President Nixon has often boasted of how he is conquering the crime wave. Unfortunately, the facts are that the conviction rate for federal felons has plummeted during his administration.

Even Nixon's most publicized targets, the drug offenders and draft dodgers, are being convicted at a lesser rate than they were under Lyndon Johnson.

Since 1968, the last year of the Johnson administration, there has been a resounding 20.2 per cent drop in the conviction rate for violators of narcotics laws, and the rate for marijuana pushers and users has fallen 18.9 per cent.

Selective Service Act convictions are off 30.9 per cent.

These are just a few examples from an unpublicized two-volume study, entitled "Federal Crimes and Sentences," by the administrative branch of the federal courts.

The bureaucrats who prepared the review chose the 17 federal crimes which most frequently come before federal judges.

In all cases but one, the conviction rate is down since 1968. Overall, prosecutions are up but a smaller proportionate share of the offenders are being convicted.

The astounding dip in the guilty rates of draft dodgers and drug offenders may be explained by changing public attitudes.

Postal theft convictions, for example, are off 10.1 per cent, bank robbery convictions have fallen 14.6 per cent, and convictions for assaults are down 12.2 per cent.

Experts have offered us a number of theories to explain the falling conviction rates. One suggestion is that the Nixon administration has simply failed to hire enough competent prosecuting attornies.

Three-Day Delay

The Justice Department, after taking three days to come up with their explanation, pointed to a "revolution in defence services."

"We're also bringing more cases than ever before," Associate Deputy Attorney General Donald E. Santarelli told my associate Joseph Spear. "And we're trying the harder cases."

Here is a complete list of the 17 offenses included in the study and the percentage change in the conviction rate for each:

Auto theft, down 7.3 per cent; interstate theft, down 8.9 per cent; transportation of forged securities, down 4.0 per cent; forgery, down 6.5 per cent; counterfeiting, down 5.2 per cent; bank embezzlement, down 7.2 per cent; postal fraud, down 6.5 per cent; postal theft, down 10.1 per cent.

Also bank robbery, down 14.6 per cent; assault, down 12.2 per cent; weapons and firearms, up 2.1 per cent; marijuana tax act, down 18.9 per cent; narcotic drug violations, down 20.2 per cent; escape, down 2.4 per cent; bail jumping, down 12.7 per cent; income tax violations, down 6.6 per cent; selective service acts, down 30,9 per cent.

Junk Parade

Abashed auto makers have had to send out 24.9 million notices recalling potentially unsafe cars since 1966. But ominously, seven million of the autos have never been repaired.

Some of these seven million have been junked since 1966, but the majoritv are still loose on the highways, hazards on wheels.

A new Department of Transportation tally shows that 22.6 million of the cars recalled through 1971 are American- made, and the remaining 2.3 million are imported. In all, Detroit and foreign companies had to advertise 906 different campaigns to get the autos back to the shop.

The parade of clanking, coughing, sputtering autos included cars with stuck accelerators, contaminated brake fluid and exhausts that leaked deadly carbon monoxide into passenger compartments.

By and large, these were fixed and put safely back on the road. But many of the notices never reached the car owners, some warning letters got to motorists who did not heed them, and a few cars came out of the repair shops uncorrected.

Because the recall campaigns haven't been complete and because state inspection systems are inadequate, an estimated 25 per cent of all cars on the road have bad brakes.

Some wonder, therefore, that the number of Americans killed in traffic accidents since 1933 is about to go over the 1.5 million mark, that 52 million have been seriously injured and that property damage now totals $179 billion (b).

Yet, despite this motorized mayhem, the Department of Transportation has ignored a 1966 federal law saying that, by 1968, it "shall establish uniform federal...safety standards applicable to all used motor vehicles."

NASA Decides To Boost Space Shuttle With Solid Propellants

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Aeronautics Space Administration decided today that the booster stage of the Space Shuttle will be powered by solid-propellant rocket motors rather than by liquid propellants.

The agency announced also that the booster stage will be recoverable, and that the chosen design will have engines of both the booster and the orbiter stage firing at launch, rather than in sequence.

Dr. James C. Fletcher, NASA administrator, said the decision means that the shuttle will cost less to develop than was forecast in January.

He said the development cost now is estimated at $5.15 billion, compared to the earlier estimate of $5.5 billion.

The booster decision settled the principal remaining question left open for further study when President Nixon announced in January a decision to proceed with development of the shuttle.

"The decision was based on the lower cost and lower technical risks shown in the studies for the solid rocket system," Fletcher said.

NASA said it will issue invitations to industry later this week to submit proposals for design and development of the space shuttle.

The decision also probably means that the Cape Kennedy, Fla., launch complex will be chosen over other contenders for space shuttle launchings.

NASA previously had decided on the design for the upper stage of the Space Shuttle, called the orbiter, and had awarded a contract for the engines.

However, a company passed over on the engine decision has challenged NASA's choice and the government's General Accounting Office is conducting an investigation.

The Space Shuttle booster will launch the huge vehicle through the earth's atmosphere, after which the booster stage will separate and possibly be lowered to Earth by parachute for use again on other missions.

The orbiter stage, fitted with a delta wing, and about the size of the twin-engine DC9 jet, will carry its two-man crew and two passengers into orbit, deliver personnel and supplies to sky laboratories or other satellites, and return to earth for an airplane-type landing. The shuttle development will take about six years.

The complete shuttle system is to be operational before 1980.

The shuttle, the first reusable space vehicle, will be boosted into space through simultaneous operation of the booster's solid propellant engines and the orbiter's high-pressure liquidoxygen, liquid-hydrogen main engines.

The booster will detach about 25 miles above the Earth and descend into the ocean for recovery and re-use.

Hannibal's Popularity As Tourist Stop Still Strong

HANNIBAL, Mo. (AP) — Sam Clemens made Hannibal the world's best known small town. And now, not quite 100 yards after "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," tourists by the thousands pause each year, perhaps to recapture the flavor of 19th century America.

Hannibalians have been busy in recent years enhancing that flavor, recreating the places where Tom and Huck frolicked and restoring both lumber barons' palatial homes and the "Usinkable" Molly Brown's childhood shanty.

Perched precariously on steep hills cut by the Mississippi, Hannibal is located on U.S. 61 and U.S. 36, about two hours north of St. Louis.

Its popularity as a stop for cross-country travelers is evidenced by tourist registrations from New York and California which consistently follow Missouri, Illinois and Iowa as the top five.

Hannibal, of course, owes its tourist boom to Mark Twain who drew on his childhood and teen-age years here in almost all of his writings.

So that visitors may know a little of where Twin got his inspiration, Hannibal has restored the Mark Twain Historical Area, a sloping half-block on Hill Street, centered by the white frame house where Sam Clemens lived as a boy.

The upper rear bedroom is where young Clemens slept and from which he managed to escape periodically to join the pals whose mishaps provided the plots for "Tom Sawyer."

The boyhood home is entered through the adjoining native stone Free Mark Twain Museum, constructed during the 1930s and crammed with mementoes of Clemens' lifetime. They include yellowed Hannibal newspapers containing his first attempts at humor and 15 original oil paintings by illustrator Norman Rockwell from 1936 editions of "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn."

The law office of Sam Clemens' father, John Marshall Clemens, also stands on Hill Street, moved there a few years ago from its original location. The elder Clemens was a sort of frontier justice of the peace and as prone to financial disaster as Sam Clemens would become in later years.

When John Clemens lost the white frame house, the family moved across the street above Grant's Drugstore. The family's quarters and the drugstore also have been restored.

All the attractions in the Mark Twain Historical Area are free, though times are needed to play recordings which describe the furnishings and some of Clemens' escapades. One tale—that of young Sam's horrified discovery of a corpse the night he slept in his dad's office—was recorded by actor Hal Holbrook impersonating Twain.

A block north of the historical area is a statue of Tom and Huck and the first of the steps leading up Cardiff Hill where a small lighthouse is visible miles up and down the Mississippi. The lighthouse is a tribute to a widow who for years kept lights shining in her home as a guide to steamboat pdots. The hill really is Holiday Hill but Clemens called it Cardiff in his books and the name stuck.

There are other monuments to Clemens and his writings, throughout Hannibal, such as the giant hilltop statue in Riverview Park which commands a sweeping panorama of the Mississippi and its islands.

Less well known, but hunted out by many visitors, are the unobtrustive graves of Clemens' parents and his two brothers in Mt. Olivet Cemetery. Clemens himself is buried in Elmira, N.Y., with his wife and children.

The liveliest day of the year in Hannibal is the 4th of July when the town's Jaycees stage National Tom Sawyer Days, highlighted by the national fence painting contest which draws boys from the 10 states bordering the Mississippi.

Clad in torn jeans, straw hats and speckled with freckles, the youngsters dash toward a temporary white fence erected in front of the boyhood home and splatter it with whitewash. The winner is the boy who paints the swiftest and neatest.

The city's official greeters, Tom and Becky, are chosen on the 4th, too. Tom and Becky must be seventh graders well versed in Mark Twain lore and familiar with his writings.

Independence Day also finds crowds lining Main Street to view the traditional parade and flocking to the riverfront at night for a gigantic fireworks display launched at the edge of the levee.

The holiday weekend includes an annual raft race in which teen-agers row or paddle or sometimes push homemade rafts two miles down the river. And usually there's a frog jumping contest. Last year nearly 200 frogs hopped about a riverfront park under the urgings of their owners of all ages.

Another lively day in Hannibal is the arrival of the Delta Queen, the nation's last overnight passenger steamboat. The stately sternwheeler docks at the riverfront, not far from Sam Clemens' home, a few times each year.

Just south of town is the privately owned Mark Twain Cave where guides lead half-hour tours down well-lit twisting paths and past formations such as the Grand Piano, the Hanging Shoe, the Post Office and the Alligator.

There are museums of several types, including a diorama museum featuring miniature characters in intricate scenes from "Tom Sawyer."

For evening entertainment there's the Ice House Theatre which will open its fifth season of semi professional repertory theatre in July. Professional actors join a student cast recruited from Northeast Missouri State College, the theatre's co-sponsor.

Of the five plays produced each season in the almost 120year-old structure, one traditionally is by Mark Twain, such as "Huckleberry Finn" or "A Connecticut Yankee." The theatre owes its name to the building's past as the first ice house west of the Mississippi, which flows less than a block away.

Like the restored ice house, Hannibal has discovered other uncut gems in the stately Victorian and Italianate homes which line its hilly streets. Many of the older homes are topped by belvederes, an ornate, but tiny, windowed tower which provides a view of the river.

In contrast to the grand mansions is the tiny brick and frame house where Margaret Tobin spent her childhood. She's best known to the world as the "Unsinkable" Molly Brown, the flamboyantly wealthy wife of a Colorado silver miner who became a heroine during the sinking of the Titanic.

Legend has it that Molly nurtured her dream of striking it rich in Colorado while a waitress at a Hannibal hotel where she heard Sam Clemens rave about the wonders of the west as she served him dinner on one of his visits to Hannibal.

Arab Foes Reject Hussein Proposal

AMMAN (AP) — King Hussein of Jordan offered today to set up a semiautonomous state of Palestine on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River once Israeli troops withdrew from the region.

The King's Arab foes joined in rejection of the plan, communicated to the Arab governments Tuesday, before he announced it. Radio and press commentators in Egypt, Syria, Libya and Iraq charged it was the first step toward a separate peace agreement with Israel.

Palestine guerrilla leaders agreed to set up their own government-in-exile in retaliation, guerrilla sources said. A guerrilla statement termed Hussein's proposal "a plot designed to kill the commando movement and liquidate the Palestine cause for ever."

There was no immediate official reaction from the Israeli government, but an Israeli Arab leader cautiously welcomed the proposal as a possible step toward peace. However, a conservative opposition leader who opposes the return of any of the occupied territories said, "Israel's reaction should be to immediately extend Israeli law to all parts of the territories."

Hussein announced his plan to a meeting of some 500 prominent Jordanians from both sides of the river. He told them the new state would be joined with the rest of Jordan to form the United Arab Kingdom under his reign.

A government spokesman denied a report by Baghdad Radio Tuesday that Israel had agreed to the plan as part of a peace agreement. The spokesman said there had been no discussions between leaders of Israel and Jordan.

The Iraqi broadcast appeared to be an attempt to whip up Arab sentiment in advance against the king's plans by raising the specter of a separate Jordanian-Israeli peace.

Hussein proposed that Jerusalem should be the capital of the "Region of Palestine" and Amman, the present Jordanian capital, would be the capital of both the "Region of Jordan and the United Arab Kingdom." The part of the plan involving Jerusalem was certain of rejection by Israel, which captured the Arab Old City of Jerusalem from Jordan in the 1967 war and has said repeatedly it would never give it up.

The king said the United Arab Kingdom would have a national assembly whose members would be elected by a direct and secret ballot, and membership would be divided equally between the two regions of the country.

As outlined by Baghdad, the plan included the occupied Gaza Strip in the Palestinian state but made no mention of the other Egyptian and Syrian territory occupied by Israel.

Godfrey Yields To Subpoena Demand

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Speaker James E. Godfrey, D-St. Louis, of the Missouri House today yielded four signed subpoena blanks to Rep. Richard Marshall, R-Webster Groves, so Marshall can press his probe into the residency qualifications of some House members.

Godfrey said he would furnish only four blanks to be used in the investigation of the qualifications of Rep. John P. O'Reilly, D-St. Louis.

He said if Marshall wanted more subpoenas issued for challenging other members, he would have to formally specify the case and number of subpoenas wanted.

Marshall has not revealed who he plans to have the subpoenas served on.

Marshall won the right to get the subpoenas from the house speaker Monday in a decision by the Missouri Supreme Court. The court said any legislator may demand and get subpoenas under a law that dates back to 1824, three years after Missouri became a state.

Marshall said he also plans to push investigations into the residency qualifications of other members of the House, including Reps. Thomas A. Walsh, John Conley and Paul J. Simon, all St. Louis Democrats, and Rep. William F. "Buck" Casey, D-Potosi.

"I have watched the flagrant disregard of rules for three terms now," Marshall told The Associated Press, "and finally since no election gimmick is in the issue, maybe it will be exposed."

Marshall is not running for re-election to the House.

"No one can reduce it to a political effort on my part," he said. "This is something I feel the people have a right to know."

Marshall launched a campaign to point out House members he says live outside their legislative districts. He started with House Speaker Pro Tem Patrick J. Hickey, D-St. Ann.

"We got off to a bad start six years ago when he (Hickey) told me to take my seat and I refused," Marshall said.

He said House rules permit a member to stand by his seat if he wants recognition and that is what he wanted.

"Hickey has referred to me as a buck-toothed -----since," Marshall said.

Earlier, he said, he had no bad feelings concerning any of the others he will seek to challenge on residency grounds.

"I feel sorta guilty about O'Reilly," he confided. "Poor ol' guy." O'Reilly served his first term in the House in the 1930's.

Defense Protests Douglas' Arrogance

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Defense attorney Paul O'Dwyer, protesting the "arrogance" of paid FBI informer Boyd Douglas Jr. and the court's failure to reprimand him, said today "it is impossible for the jury to deal fairly" with the Harrisburg 7 conspiracy trial defendants.

O'Dwyer's motion for a mistrial, however, was swiftly rejected by U.S. District Court Judge R. Dixo n Herman withuout comment.

It was a renewal of a similar plea made Tuesday by O'Dwyer who accused the judge of prejudice.

Specifically, in his written motion O'Dwyer objected to "the protective attitude of the court towards the witness and the court's interjection into the cross-examination, which could only be described as paternalism."

O'Dwyer said Douglas' "arrogance ... gave him carte blanche to engage in quarrelsome dialogue with counsel (and) to usurp the function of the court in making what could be regarded as juridical rulings."

O'Dwyer's emotional outburst Tuesday brought charges that Herman was protecting Douglas from answering damaging defense questions aimed at destroying his credibility.

"The examination and the cross-examination have been frustrated by the court," O'Dwyer said. "To permit a witness this liberty is unheard of in jurisprudence. It is highly prejudicial."

Herman quickly denied O'Dwyer's mistrial motion.

O'Dwyer, a New York lawyer, objected to an unrecorded whisper from Douglas, while in the witness box, informing the judge one of the jurors appeared to be in pain. When that occurred Herman called a recess.

The judge said the defense knew the juror had two teeth pulled Monday.

"For a witness to show concern for a juror, in hearing of the entire jury, is unheard of," O'Dwyer complained, and the judge gaveled him to sit down.

"I will be heard," O'Dwyer retorted.

"I don't want to hold you in contempt," Herman responded.

"Your honor may hold me in contempt," O'Dwyer said, "but I will be seated only when I am told I may enlarge on my motion."

That's when Herman agreed O'Dwyer could renew it in writing.

Douglas, who has been on the stand 12 days, testified he possibly offered to get a gun that could not be traced for use in kidnaping White House aide Henry A. Kissinger. Douglas claims such a kidnaping was plotted by antiwar priest Philip Berrigan and his six codefendants.

Eye Clinic At Portage March 30

PORTAGEVILLE — The annual New Madrid County eye clinic will be held at the National Guard Armory March 30 beginning at 9 a.m.

Anyone who would like to attend the clinic, and is a resident of the county, may contact the New Madrid County Welfare Office, 600 Main St., New Madrid, for referral.

Although the clinic is designed primarily for low-income individuals who do not receive public assistance, anyone, including public welfare recipients, who believes that they are in need of a medical eye examination may attend.

The clinic is held under the prevention of blindness program by the Missouri Division of Welfare's bureau for the blind. The clinic is conducted by opthalmologists of the bureau for the blind who are skilled in the care and treatment of eye conditions.

Attending will be representatives of the Bureau of the Blind's vocational rehabilitation program to talk to those individuals who might qualify for blind services under that program.

Due to the large number of individuals expected to attend the clinic a schedule has been set up:

Morning, 9 a.m., last name beginning with A, B, and C; 10 a.m., last name beginning with D, E, F, G, and H; 11 a.m., last name beginning with I, J, K, and L.

Afternoon, 1 p.m., last name beginning with M, N, O, P, and Q; 2 p.m., last name beginning with R, S, T, U, and V; and 3 p.m., last name beginning with W, X, Y, and Z.

Open Meetings Bill Approved

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri House Tuesday gave tentative approval to a battered open meetings bill.

At the end of a morning's efforts to amend it, Rep. R.J. "Bus" King, R&Clayton, asked use to approve it "even in its present bad shape."

Rep. James Mulvaney, DJennings, got the House to accept an amendment requiring public utilities, which are actually private corporations, to hold public meetings in discussing their business.

Rep. Harold Holliday, D-Kansas City, won adoption of an amendment to let legislative committees decide in closed session how to act on individual bills. The vote would have to be made public later, however.

Several unsuccessful efforts were made to hang on other amendments, including one by Rep. Leo W. Schrader, D-Joplin. It would force news media to attend any meeting and stay the full period, producing a verbatim report of the procedure within 24 hours.

Failure on the part of any news medium would mean a fine up to $1,000.

Schrader said "The people have a right to know exactly what's going on." He accused news media of trying to tell the public there "is something sinister going on behind closed doors."

Speaker Pro Tem Patrick J. Hickey, D-St. Ann, declared that one adopted on a voice vote but later on a roll call it failed 50-92.

Rep. E. J. "Lucky" Cantrell, D-Overland, tried in vain to add an amendment to force any news media that might "assail any public official in a derogatory manner" to provide that person with equal time or space to make a reply.

Hughes Leaves Nicaragua

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After a month in a hotel hideaway in Nicaragua and a purported surprise meeting with the Nicaraguan president and the U.S. ambassador there, Howard Hughes is reported to have flown to Los Angeles.

An unidentified spokesman for the Nicaraguan air force told newsmen that Hughes had flown in a private plane early Tuesday to Los Angeles, where he has lived as both a celebrity and a recluse.

A spokesman for the 66-yearold billionaire confirmed Tuesday night that Hughes had left Nicaragua and arrived at an undisclosed destination. However, the spokesman, Richard Hannah, refused to confirm that Hughes was in Los Angeles and said that his whereabouts may not be disclosed for a time.

Before leaving Managua, where he had lived on the seventh floor of the Intercontinental Hotel, Hughes met with President Anastasio Somoza and U.S. Ambassador Turner B. Shelton, the ambassador said.

This would be the first reported time Hughes has met with persons outside his staff since he went into seclusion more than a decade ago. Hannah refused comment on the report.

Shelton said Hughes "met with the president and I was there at the meeting before he left. Just the president, Mr. Hughes, and myself."

Somoza said Hughes told him he was "looking forward with keen anticipation to having the opportunity to return to Nicaragua soon."

Somoza said he had invited Hughes to "visit with me in the near future." But he declined, as did Shelton, to say what had been discussed.

Other sources said the three might have discussed a possible business deal involving Hughes' airline, Hughes Airwest, and Somoza's Lanica airline.

Wyoming Territory passed a law granting woman suffrage in 1869. The World Almanac recalls that adult women in New Jersey could vote in general elections under a constitution adopted in 1776, provided they were "worth 50 Pounds Proclamation money, with clear estate in the same." In 1807, this provision was "reinterpreted" and voting was limited to free white male citizens.

Dear People,

Would you please help me find my Uncle and his two sons. They reportedly moved to your area in late 1968, or early 1969, from El Monte, California.

In June of '68 my father, Henry Clayton, died in ElMonte. The following August my mother's sister, Annie Clayton McEuen died. It is her husband and two young sons that my brother and I are trying to locate. Uncle Raymond remarried before he left Calif., and I think that he felt that we were displeased, but we were and still are not.

This is the information that I can give you. Raymond E McEuen "Mac", born June 17, 1900. Probably has some sort of cash register business. Lost the ends of some of his fingers in an accident. His wife - ?. Son - Bill McEuen, born Aug. 26, 1959. Should be in 7th grade. Son - Raymond McEuen, Jr., born July 22, 1960. Should be in 6th grade.

What Can Moscow Do Now? Open The Door -

By David Lawrence

A brief but significant dispatch the other day from London by the United Press International reads as follows:

"The Soviet Union is highly distrustful of President Nixon's Peking visit but will keep the door open for a continuing dialogue on possible accommodation with the U.S., Communist diplomats said today.

"They said Soviet leaders are visibly disturbed by the Sino-American reconciliation and will not be easily convinced that the Peking results are not directed, at least partly, against the Soviet Union. The Soviet leaders were said to be deeply distrustful of the implications of the Peking developments.

"Nevertheless, or because of this uneasiness, Moscow apparently does not plan to slam the door to a searching exploration of areas of possible accommodation with Washington, to culminate in the Moscow visit by President Nixon in May, they indicated."

There is no doubt that fear of Soviet ambitions has played a part in Peking's desire to be on closer terms with the United States, but President Nixon's mission was in no sense an attempt to set up a new alliance in Asia. The real significance in the visit was the demonstration of a growing understanding between the Chinese and American peoples. When preliminary restrictions were removed, the Americans were given a welcome that made a deep impression on the world.

The view will prevail that there is a basis for friendship between the Chinese on the mainland and the American people, and President Nixon has brought this out during his recent journey to Peking.

It is quite possible that the Soviet leaders are concerned about the scope of the talks with the American President, but they also will have an opportunity to let the people of the Soviet Union see President Nixon and welcome him to their homeland.

Fundamentally, it is the friendship of peoples which eventually influences the relations of governments. Today mainland China has more friends in the United States than before, and the time may not be far distant when the people of the Soviet Union can also develop a more friendly attitude among Americans than they have hitherto had. But this is something which the Government in Moscow has to recognize by "opening the door."

The President will be going to the Soviet capital in May for a discussion of current international problems and undoubtedly will be engaging in a dialogue on ways to promote the cause of peace in Europe. For many years, the United States has maintained a substantial military force on the European continent as part of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. The Soviet Union keeps armies in some of the countries of Eastern Europe. The general feeling has always been that both sides are seeking to protect themselves against a military crisis that may emerge "some day."

But the occasion has come for the Soviet Union and the United States to discuss the possibility of removing fears of such a crisis and elimination the necessity for their having standing armies in Europe.

Some vital points, therefore, can arise in the talks between President Nixon and the Kremlin leaders. If a friendly mood can be brought about between the people of the Soviet Union and the people of the United States, success can be achieved by the conferences of the principal officials of the Government in Moscow and the President of the United States.

The first step unquestionably is to get to know the people of the Soviet Union, and there is an opportunity in the visit which Mr. Nixon will make in May to let the people of Russia demonstrate their friendly attitude toward the people ot the United States, just as the Chinese people did in Peking. Once a spirit of good will is engendered, a period of peace may ensue. This is what the "open door.. can do.

But until there is mutual trust between peoples, not very much can be accomplished in the form of diplomatic exchanges and agreements between the United States and the Soviet Union.

The Red Chinese broke many a precedent during President Nixon's visit, but one in particular interested the American Government. The entire Chinese press, including 800 provincial newspapers, printed the text of the joint communique, and other news about the visit was published and boradcast so that it became known to the people of mainland China. It is this "opening of the door" which means a great deal in the building of a better understanding between the citizens of a country with a controlled press and those of a nation like ours. The real problem in Moscow is to bring the Soviet people and the American people together.

The key to world peace is the same in Moscow as in Peking — to talk frankly about the differences that exist between governments and "open the door."

U.S. News & World Report

Uphill Trek For President

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican strategists say President Nixon must win 10 to 15 per cent of the Democratic vote and about 70 per cent of the independent vote to gain re-election in November.

On paper, registration figures show nothing but an uphill battle for the GOP in putting Nixon back in the White House, according to Republican campaign veterans F. Clifton White, Fred Currier and Robert Teeter.

The facts, they told a recent gathering of county and statelevel Republican workers from across the country, are these:

—Democrats outnumber Republicans 46 per cent to 25 per cent, and 30 per cent of the American electorate considers itself independent of attachment to either party.

—If history is a lesson, Nixon can count on 90 per cent of the Republican vote. He must get 10 to 15 per cent of the Democratic vote and 70 to 75 per cent of the independent vote to win in November.

The Republican workers were told to study, precinct-by-precinct past voting results in an attempt to identify areas with a high proportion of ticket splitters. Those are the voters who will decide whether Nixon will serve a second term, the strategists said.

White, Teeter and Currier told the Republican workers to forget about party rhetoric as they go after the independent vote this year.

Clayton Talks On Community Betterment

MATTHEWS — O. D. Clayton, manager of the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce, spoke to high school seniors today on community betterment problems and opportunities.

Defining community betterment, Clayton told the students that in this program it means increased prosperity, improved educational opportunity, better streets, more attractive buildings, greater opportunities for existing industries and the attraction of new industries and similar efforts to provide a better place in which to live and prosper.

He also explained the why and how behind Missouri's Community Betterment Program, including the Five-Star Community rating system, which specifies standards for education, utilities, transportation, community planning and community services.

Sentencing Held Up In Marijuana Cases

JACKSON — Unusual sentences were handed down yesterday in circuit court for Hugh Marvin Gilmore, 21, of Sikeston and Ronnie Wyatt, 24, of Cape Girardeau who were arrested May 12 on charges of selling drugs.

Circuit Judge W. Osler Statler sentenced Wyatt to five years — minimum sentence for the offense — and ordered him placed on probation under supervision of the state board of probation and parole.

As a condition of the probation, Wyatt is to serve six months in the county jail.

Wyatt had pleaded guilty to the charge before but sentencing had been postponed pending a presentence investigation into the possibility of probation.

Sentencing on a similar charge involving Wyatt and Hugh Marvin Gilmore, 21, of Sikeston was postponed as to Wyatt pending appearance of his court appointed attorney for that charge.

Gilmore received sentences of one- year each on two counts but execution of the sentences was deferred until June 5 for further consideration.

The deferred sentencing, something which is not new here, in effect gives the accused an opportunity for a record clear of criminal charges.

Prosecuting attorney A. J. Seier objected strongly to the sentence. He later explained that a conviction does not appear on a person's record unless there is both a finding of guilt and an imposition of sentence.

Unless the sentence is imposed June 5 when it comes up for consideration again, Seier said a conviction would not appear on Gilmore's record.

Others arrested in the drug raids still face trial or sentencing. James Samuel Vinson of 309 Branum, Sikeston and Linda Lou Smith, 105 North Clark, Cape Girardeau, formerly of Sikeston, will go on trial March 24 in Bollinger County on charges of selling narcotics.

John Adams, 705 Park, Charles Thomas Dye of 134 Marion, Jane Lair of 322 North New Madrid, all of Sikeston; and Judith Ann Ruebush of Cape Girardeau, still face sentencing in Cape Girardeau County Magistrate Court. The original felony charges of possession of narcotics have been dropped and changed to conspiracy to possess narcotics, a misdemeanor. All plead guilty to the charges. A date for sentencing was not set.

Webster Denies Role In Complaint

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Sen. Richard M. Webster, R-Carthage, denied Tuesday that he was responsible for filing a complaint with the Federal Aviation Autority Monday alleging that Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, violated air safety rules in a landing at the Jefferson City Airport.

The complaint was filed by Eugene Ingram, pilot of a plane that was bringing Gene Taylor of Sarcoxie, the Republican national committeeman, to Jefferson City to file for the 7th Congressional District nomination.

In a statement issued today, Webster said "I am afraid that the stress of the campaign may have caused by friend, Earl Blackwell, to over react and to jump to unwarranted and unfounded conclusions...

"I regret that Earl jumped to the erroneous conclusion that a friend and colleague would turn on him in a matter of this importance."

Webster, who also is a pilot, said he did not actually see the Blackwell landing and did not know a complaint had been filed until a reporter told him about it two hours later.

Blackwell said Monday the complaint appeared to be politically motivated and denied that he had violated any air safety rules.

Ann Landers

Pets Nicer At Motel Than People

Dear Ann Landers: I live and work in a motel. I'd like to straighten out that jerk from Kentucky who said we shouldn't admit people with pets.

We've had a lot less trouble with animals than people. Since I've been here I know of only two instances where a pet damaged hotel property. In both cases a little shampoo on the rug remedied the problem. People are another story. They've left us with broken chairs, mirrors, burnt mattresses and food on the wallpaper. One drunk actually put his fist through a TV screen.

With the exception of a beach slipper at the pool, nothing has ever been stolen from us by a pet. Our two-legged guests, on the other hand, have helped themselves to lamps, linen, pillows, pictures off the wall, shower curtains, anything that wasn't riveted to the floor.

No one has ever been injured in our place by a pet, but we've had eight guests hurt in family fights since July,---including one woman who shot her husband.

I read recently about a motel in Manhatten for pets only. No people allowed, I envy them their clientele. --Midwest Reader.

Dear Midwest: What a nice testimonial for man's best friend. Too bad they can't read.

Dear Ann Landers: I felt sorry for the happily married woman who wrote to say she had done some nude modeling in her younger (and more foolish) days and was haunted by the fear that she might be recognized. I am in a similar predicament so I can understand her anxiety. Only I was innocent.

A certain girl who specializes in pornographic modeling and stag films is a dead ringer for me. Several months ago, when I first saw a picture of her, I was certain someone had superimposed my head on another woman's body. (The dimensions were definitely not mine.) A few days later a man who works with my husband told him he had seen some stag movies at the home of a friend and I was the star. My husband asked if he could arrange to see the film and his wish was granted. He came home in a state of shock and said the girl was my absolute double, except for the body.

He asked me to please cut my blonde hair and dye it dark brown, which I did at once. I still get uncomfortable if someone stares at or says, "Haven't we met before?" but I'm no longer panicked. Please print my letter in case some of your readers think they recognzie a porno queen in the supermarket or at a P.T.A. meeting. Tell them not to jump to conclusions. ---Not Guilty In Buffalo

Dear Buff: Now how in the world would the fine people who read my column KNOW what a porno queen looks like? But here's your letter and my thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: We bought an old house three years ago. All the bedrooms are upstairs. I have not had one good night's slepp since we moved in. It's like sleeping on top of a toadstool. I feel as if I'm on a shelf and if I turn over I'll fall out-into the yard. I want to sell this house and get one with at least one bedroom on the ground floor. My husband says I'm a chronic complainer. He doesn't understand. What can I do?---Bleary -Eyed

Dear Bleary: Your fears are totally irrational, but this doesn't mean they aren't very real to you. I suggest a cot or a roll-away bed on the ground floor. It's easier than selling your home.

Can drugs be a friend in time of stress? If you keep your head together can they be of help? Ann Landers' new booklet, "Straight Dope on Drugs" separates the fact from the fiction. Get it today. For each booklet ordered send a dollar bill , plus a long, self addressed, stamped envelope, with 16 cents worth of stamps to Ann Landers, Box 3346 Chicago, Ill. 60654.

The P.O.W. Wife Is Fictionalized Now

In a new novel, "Limbo," authors Joan Silver and Linda Gottlieb present a story version of the approximately 1,850 women whose husbands have been captured or are still missing in action (MIA) in the Indochina war.

"These are women who are liberated in spite of themselves," explained Mrs. Gottlieb, 32, a writer and former educational film producer. "They are the first wives to be caught in conflict because of the sexual revolution at home and the antiwar protesters. It's a unique pressure on the women."

In the authors' view, that pressure leads to such happenings as romantic love affairs, peace demonstrations and anti-government sentiments. It's not a view that appears popular with the Pentagon.

When presented with the script of a film adaptation of the novel — which Mrs. Silver, 36, wrote, and Mrs. Gottlieb is producing — the Pentagon refused permission to film on an Air Force base or at landing fields. And they said that they would lend no technical advice.

John E. Horton, who represents the movie company in the capital, said he thought the decision was "nothing political — they just didn't agree with the tone of the script as opposed to what they feel the actual situation is." He said that in most cases of movies requiring Pentagon cooperation, "usually they are very helpful."

A Pentagon spokesman, Don Baruch, of the Audio-Visual Branch, said the request had been turned down, but would only say, "We don't feel that we should discuss a property that we are not working with."

In Mrs. Gottlieb's view, "Their reaction is that POW wives are loyal, faithful and pro-administration. That's why they wouldn't help us."

CLEP Tests To Be Given April 1 At Portageville

PORTAGEVILLE — The second testing date for the College-Level Examination Program in the University of Missouri Delta Center in Portageville has been scheduled for April 1 at 8:30 A.M. Those who plan to take this opportunity should notify their University Extension Centers or Mrs. Kathryn Kinnard, Area Continuing Education Programmer, P.O. Box 160, Portageville 63873, phone 379-5431.

The College Level Examination Program is a new program of college credit by examination, offering adults an opportunity to demonstrate what they have learned through independent study and reading, work experience, travel, military service, correspondence and TV courses and other informal education experiences.

Through cooperating institutions and business, examination results may be used for college credit, professional advancement and self-fulfillment. Approximately 350 colleges and universities in the United States presently give credit for satisfactory performance on the CLEP examination. Both Southeast Missouri State College, Cape Girardeau and Three Rivers Junior College, Poplar Bluff in Southeast Missouri grant college credit through CLEP. College-Level Examination Program is a program of the College Entrance Examination Board, endorsed by the United States Armed Forces Institute, the Veteran's Administration, the American Institute of Banking and the Federation of Regional Accrediting Commissions.

In this state, the program has been designated Missouri Circuit Rider. Missouri Circuit Rider is an experimental program of the Extension Division, University of Missouri-St. Louis, designed to bring CLEP to adults in out-state Missouri.

Only in Missouri has such a traveling test program of this nature been authorized by the College Entrance Examination and the Education Testing Service.

The circuit rider program works through University of Missouri Centers with in the state. An individual may register for the tests and have his scores sent to any participation institution he designates Each individual will receive a report of his own scores and a guide to their interpretation.

The CLEP tests are of two varieties: General and Subject matter. The fee for the general examination is $25 which includes five basic liberal arts subjects, English, humanities, social studies, natural sciences and mathematics. Subject matter courses measure achievement in introductory college courses at the cost of $15 for each examination. Examinations are available in 25 subjects.

Advertising In Newspaper Pays

Jewell was introduced by David Bowman, president of the club.

"Advertising is a good lube job and is the lubrication that keeps the wheels of business moving forward," Jewell said.

Jewell told the club that a continuous advertising program based on the buying patterns within the community and the establishment of an advertising sales budget obtains the best advertising results. A "one-shot" ad often results in waste of the advertising dollar.

"A good ad brings cash register results and a poorly composed ad will have little pulling power and only waste the retailers advertising dollar," Jewell said, "that is why we try to create and set up ads that will attract attention and create sales."

Newspaper advertising, a $4.8 billion dollar industry, gets about one-third of the 14 to 15 billion dollars spent annually for advertising.

A survey conducted by the DuPont company on consumer buying patterns in self service stores showed that of the customers who recalled seeing or hearing store advertising 85 per cent of them read about it in the newspaper.

Guests of the club were Jerry Beckner, Boy Scout council exectuve and Jerry Grabtree, both of Cape Girardeau and Lt. Gov. Joe Watson of East Prairie.

Jim Stallings made a report on the progress of Pancake Day March 28. A divisional meeting will be held in Sikeston April 11 and will be a ladies night.

Charleston City Manager Speaks at Caruthersville

"Each city council must know what its town needs in a city manager. His abilities must fit these needs," Martin told the council.

The Charleston official explained that in order to establish a city manager form of government in third class cities such as Caruthersville, voters must pass a referendum asking for the change in city government.

Five councilmen are elected at large, and the mayor is elected from the council for a term of one year. The mayor has the same voting privilege as the councilmen. Aldermen or councilmen serve for three years. The city manager cannot vote, however.

Under the city- manager form of government, aldermen are the only elected city officials. All others, including the city- manager, are appointed.

One of the city manager's responsibilities is the hiring and dismissal of city employees. The Clerk, Assessor, and Treasurer are appointed by the council. The Police and Fire Chiefs and department heads are hired by the city manager.

Martin pointed out that the city council determines policy and it's the city manager's job to carry out the policy.

He mentioned the fact that Charleston has had only five city managers since it went to this form of government in 1947.

"Beginning salary for a manager for a city like Caruthersville would probably be around $12,000 per year," he said, "and a city manager need not have a college degree and may be a local businessman or someone from outside the area."

After a certain number of years, the city- manager form of government may be voted out by the people. Over 300 towns each year are voting in this type of government, however, and less than one town each year votes it out. "this is usually due to the personality of the city manager when a city votes it out," Martin continued.

One big advantage in having a city manager, according to Martin, is getting department heads off the ballot. "It is hard for a police chief to do his job and still try to be elected every two years," he said.

He also stated that a city can operate economically with the mayor- council form of government if the councilmen and mayor have the time to devote to the operation of the city. "It's very hard for a businessman to run his business and the city at the same time," Martin continued.

"A local man hired as city manager can be under a handicap due to people who may not like him but a stranger starts even," said Martin. He went on to say that a city manager could put a computer to good use in helping run a city and bill water users and keep salary records.

The city manager also has the responsibility of preparing a budget each year for the council's approval.

Job Ad Too Good To Be True

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) -- The ad was too good to be true. It offered a "moonlight job" with a starting salary of $38.40 for a weekend's work.

Job seekers flooded the listed number to apply. The number was that of the Army Reserve Headquarters here.

Lt. Col. Joel Wallis, headquarters commandant, said Friday, "The ad was a little erroneous. There should have been a notation that you have to sign up with the reserve."

On Movieland, 1933

WEEKEND '33. By Bob Thomas. Doubleday. $6.95.

In the old days they used to call it movieland. That is the scene of the novel, and the time is Labor Day weekend of 1933, when the talkies were just replacing the silent films and the Depression still was young.

Much of the action takes place at the isolated, super-colossal estate — which outdoes the most colossal movie set — of a wealthy man who heads a newspaper chain, Harrison Clay Stembridge. He has invited an oddly assorted group of guests, most of whom haven't the faintest idea of why they have been invited.

Stembridge knows very well what he is doing. Dazzling his guests with his overdone hospitality, he talks confidentially with them, one by one. He offers to buy out the interests of a man who has built a major studio with a value of millions; to buy a small studio which has been set up by a man who still owes a big debt; a distributing and promoting agency run by a couple of has-been actors; a studio recently taken over by an Eastern banker (interested in its only leading lady) who happens to own a string of movie houses.

His excuse is that he wants to give his mistress, a fading actress, a combination plaything and economic cushion. Making his propositions separately, he secretly plans to put the whole package into a combine that would challenge the young movie industry. But the coup must be executed quickly. One of the victims discovers the scope of the plan and tries to upset the whole deal.

Few readers will have trouble identifying the real life person who served as the model for the fictional Stembridge; they also can guess at some of the other Hollywood types — a sexy starlet, an alcoholic writer, a playwright who hates capitalist oppressors, a leading man who no longer can make the grade, etc.

20 Pct. SS Boost

Mills' Plan to Cost $6.3 Billion a Year

By BRUCE BIOSSAT

WASHINGTON (NEA)

If Congress should adopt House Ways and Means Chairman Wilbur Mills' proposal for a 20 per cent boost this year in basic retirement benefits, the "first year" federal cost of all pending major Social Security revisions would be $9.9 billion—not $8 billion as widely reported at the outset.

The revisions, contained in the House-passed bill called H.R. 1, call for a first year added outlay of $3.6 billion plus, without the new Mills proposal. In their present form, as the Senate Finance Committee considers them, they include only a five per cent boost in basic retirement benefits. Thus the cost of the Mills' suggestions would be $6.3 billion in the initial year of the revised program.

Social security experts confirm that this sizable hike in benefits is "actuarially sound," meaning that anticipated revenues will more than cover the cost of the higher outlays.

H.R. 1 presently provides for a schedule of tax rate increases in the years ahead. It would also widen the tax base, that proportion of the individual's annual income from which the taxes are drawn. Mills suggests the base be raised to $10,200 this year and to $12,000 in 1973. He would delay higher rates.

What is now being proposed, then, fits well within the guidelines on tax contributions recommended last spring by a blue-ribbon advisory council which reported to Congress through HEW Secretary Elliot Richardson.

As a matter of fact, that council said flatly that, so long as U.S. citizens' earning continued to rise in future years as expected, higher and higher retirement benefits for more and more Social Security recipients could be financed entirely from a periodic widening of the tax base. It insisted that no new tax rate increases should be needed before the next century.

The council argued that to embark on a rising schedule of increases in both the tax rate and the tax base would be to build Social Security fund reserves to absurdly astronomical levels.

The council's judgment was that it is safe enough for the federal government to have on hand, at the outset of a given year, only those reserves required to cover the Social Security outlays for the year ahead. Obviously, that would not exhaust the fund, since new taxes would be collected steadily throughout the unfolding 12 months.

For a long time, Mills and others in Congress have resisted this approach and have clung to the "big reserve" philosophy as the only sound one. The suggested 20 per cent benefit boost as of this coming July 1 represents a departure from this concept.

There is no assurance, of course, that the new Mills' proposal will be accepted either by the Senate Finance Committee under Chairman Russell Long, or by the full Senate. But its chances of approval may be enhanced by the fact it is a presidential election year, and by the rumor that President Nixon himself may propose something similar.

32 Coyotes Bite Missouri Dust

PALMYRA, Mo. (AP) — Thirty-two dead coyotes were produced over the weekend at the conclusion of a coyote roundup in northeast Missouri.

The roundup was called by the Mark Twain Cattle men's Association with cash prizes awarded Sunday at the Palmyra Livestock Auction. Coyotes have been blamed for killing livestock in the area, although some conservationists dispute this

Joe Threlkeld of Palmyra received $25 for the largest male coyote—25 pounds. He has a pet coyote of his own, called Charlie, which got loose durimg the roundup and Threlkeld thought it might be killed.

He set a light trap for it and when Charlie was caught it caused him to lose a forepaw. Threlkeld and other coyote hunters use Greyhound dogs to run down the coyotes and kill them.

Dick Perry received $25 for the largest female coyote—40 pounds. A group of Palmyra hunters he was with turned in six pelts. Paul Shaffer with a group from Leonard, Mo., received $50 for turning in 14 pelts.

On hand was John Robinson, executive director of the Missouri Cattlemen's Association. He said livestock losses have been great because of coyotes, especially in southern Missouri. Some conservationists in the northeast Missouri area have called for a thorough investigation of the coyote problem to determine they are in fact responsible for the livestock kills.

It was reported that some of the coyotes taken in the roundup would be examined, including the contents of their stomachs, in at attempt to determine if they had killed any livestock.

Robert Cutsinger of the northeast Missouri Humane Society said "wild dogs" have been responsible for pig and sheep kills in the Saverton area.

Funds for Two Colleges Opposed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A bill to provide full funding for Missouri Western College at St. Joseph and Missouri Southern College at Joplin ran into strong opposition Tuesday and was temporarily shelved.

Sen. Truman Wilson, D-St. Joseph, sponsor of the bill, said operating the four-year colleges under two boards — a junior college district for the first two years and a board of regents for the junior and senior years — is cumbersome and creates administrative headaches.

But Sen. Albert M. Spradling, D-Cape Girardeau, opposed the bill on the grounds that splitfunding was the agreement when the colleges were converted from junior colleges a few years ago.

Sen. William B. Waters, D-Liberty, agreed, He said the bill was passed at that time with the understanding that local tax revenues would be used to support the first two years, and that sponsors of the new measure are reneging on that agreement.

Wilson said the costs of full state funding would range from $916,000 to $1.8 million.

No License For Slayer

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Dr. R. Bernard Finch has been denied a license to practice as an anesthesiologist by the state Board of Healing Arts.

Finch, convicted California wife slayer, was subject to a weekend meeting of the board, according to John A. Hailey, executive secretary.

The board's denial was based on an opinion by Missouri's attorney general holding no one could practice medicine in this state without a state license, which Finch does not have and has not applied for. The board contended the administration of anesthetics is a part of the practice of medicine.

Dog Saves Family, Loses Life

BOURBON, Mo. (AP) — A family was alerted by a dog early Tuesday and escaped a fire, but the dog died in the house.

The family dog, Baron, part German Shepherd—part Huskie, scratched at the bedroom door and awoke Mrs. LaValle about 2:15 a.m.

She rounded up her three children and they escaped the smoke-filled house. Her son Anthony, 9, went back in to get the dog but he was overcome by smoke.

Neighbors rescued the boy and Bourbon firemen helped revive him. But the dog could not be saved.

Damage to the home was moderate.

from Motorola for a base station for the new city hall. City Manager Richard Martin informed the council a 75 per cent fund grant from the Bootheel Law Enforcement Council would be available toward the purchase of the base station. The city's share of the cost would be approximately $3,486.

Martin told the council he was preparing the city budget for presentation at the April meeting. Included in the budget will be two proposals for raising additional revenue, a cigarette tax and an increase in the city vehicle stickers.

Council members were brought up to date on construction progress of the city hall. Martin said they expected to have the building enclosed by the end of the month. He asked for and was granted permission to contact an interior design consultant to coordinate the decorating and furnishings of the interior.

No action was taken on a city employe retirement program. The council instructed Martin to contact a representative of Missouri Local Government Employees Retirement System and arrange to have him meet with it for explanation of the program.

Martin informed the council that contracts for improvement in the industrial park had been signed with McMullins Construction Company and construction of the water tower is expected to begin by April 1.

The council was informed that the bureau of outdoor recreation must have an engineered design for restroom facilities before approval and funding could be granted for the Interstate 57 park.

A resolution authorizing Mayor Sam Story to sign the annual arrangement contract with the Department of Housing and Urban Renewal was adopted.

Solid Waste Bill Provision Opposed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The state Board of Health apparently is not alone in its apprehensions concerning a Senate-passed bill to control solid waste disposal facilities in Missouri.

A lengthy parade of witnesses Monday night opposed an amendment, tacked on to it by Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, which would require a public vote before tax money could be used to finance disposal facilities.

The referendum proposal is so worded, according to the Board of Health, that it would take away Division of Health authority to protect the public health.

Robert M. Robinson, engineer for the division, told the House Puboic Health and Environment Committee of the board's failure to fully endorse the Senate bill with what he called "the crippling amendment."

The amendment "would seriously disrupt" cooperative efforts to plan and implement systems between cities and counties, Robinson said, because they would not be required to provide proper garbage and refuse disposal.

"The suggested amendment," he said of one submitted by the division, "simply requires a city or county to submit a tax levy for solid waste management to a vote of the people. The other provisions of the solid waste bill would remain in effect as proposed."

Representatives of the state Chamber of Commerce, Associated Industries, Missouri Farm Bureau Federation and other interested citizens supported the divison's thinking.

Sikeston, East Prairie Favored

The spotlight falls on the area's track squads this Friday night as 17 district schools coverage on the Sikeston high school field house, in the qualifying round for the indoor track meets at Columbia later this month.

The SHS Bulldogs are favored to win and qualify about eight athletes.

Representing class M are the teams of Chaffee, Malden, Caruthersville, Perryville, Hayti, Lilbourn, East Prairie, Illmo-Scott City, and Cape Notre Dame.

A sample of the kind of action this season has in store, was exhibited in last Friday's opening indoor track meet of the season, when five previous records were severed.

Sikeston's own Curtis Bean surpassed the old mark set in the long jump by Charleston's Wavie Reed of 21-1, by leaping to 21 feet 3½ inches. This mark stand up well beside the mark of 22 feet 7¼ inches set as the high in last year's indoor track and field meet at Columbia in the class L.

Records were set in the mile relay by Poplar Bluff which finished in two seconds less than the old mark set by Paducah, of 3:42.3, This is compared with the class and state record time of 3:28.3, set in the 1971 indoor track and field meet at Columbia.

Caruthersville's Chris Hoskins set a new shot mark after he exceeded his old record of 52-4½ with a throw of 55 feet 11 inches, surpassing the mark set in last year's state meet in class M, which was 55 feet 10¼ inches. Coach Wene's Hoskins is one of the promising thinclads and should go a long way for the Tigers.

Records were also cracked in pole vault and high jumping events by Cape Central's Mike Lee, who went to 12 feet, six inches, in the vault, discrediting his old mark of 12-3. In the high jump he went to six feet to top his old record of 5-10 These records compare favorable with the marks attained in the state meet of last year for class L, of 6 feet, 2 inches reached in the high jump and with a 13-6¼ mark in pole vaulting.

Among the favored teams are East Prairie and Caruthersville.

East Prairie ran all the way to the class M last year title, reigning supreme in the 880 yard relay, and with the Eagle's Henry Franklin also bringing home first in state for his performance in the 60-yard dash, having a time of :06.4 and tying the Class record.

Henry Franklin graduated and Annise Davis has moved in to take his place as the mainstay of the team. The track coach of the Eagles, James Emas, said that he is looking for a really good jump from Davis and he is optimistic that he will place in the top one or two in the long jump in the state, based on last last year's performance.

Davis also is expected to qualify in four other events including the shot put, low hurdles, 880 relays, and the 60-yard dash.

A confident Coach Emas commented, "The team this year is a lot more balanced overall. We have some inexperience, but that doesn't worry us."

Field events begin at 6:00 p.m.: Preliminaries are at 7 p.m. and the final events start at 7:40 p.m.

DAVID NEWBERRY, a standout track and football star for the Sikeston Bulldogs in 1967-69. assists in the opening indoor track meet of the season. Newberry is a student at Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau and is a two-year football letterman.

NEWARK, Del. (AP) — The University of Delaware Athletic Council has voted against allowing freshmen to play either varsity football or basektball, the university announced Tuesday.

CINCINNATI (AP) — A record purse of $40,000—up $10,000 from last year—will be offered at the 85th annual Western Tennis Championships here July 31-Aug. 6.

Allen Walks Out Again

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON Associated Press Sports Writer

Richie Allen wants to be known as Dick but his name may be mud before he ever puts on a Chicago White Sox uniform.

The controversial slugger, who spent 1969 in Philadelphia, 1970 in St. Louis and 1971 in Los Angeles, lasted all of 15 minutes with the White Sox Tuesday.

Alen whizzed in and out of a brief meeting with General Manager Stu Holcomb at the Sox' Sarasota, Fla., spring training headquarters. He showed up 23 days late, turned down an estimated $125,000 contract, asked to be traded and said he was "going home to mother."

"We had a pleasant discussion, but he just wants more than we will pay," reported Holcomb, who traded pitcher Tommy John and infielder Steve Huntz to the Dodgers for Allen during the off-season. "There is no way at this stage we would free him to deal with another club.

"One of his complaints was that over the last few years in St. Louis and Los Angeles he was just being used as a gate attraction to sell tickets. He felt it would be the same way in Chicago."

Holcomb said he told Allen: "We want you as a player and for nothing else. I told him he would be with a professional club that was a good one, that it wasn't a bunch of misfits. The next move is up to him. I don't plan to try and contact him any more."

That sort of left matters at an impasse, because Allen left the Sox' hotel carrying a suitcase and said: "We're miles apart. Nowhere close. I'm not going to talk to Holcomb anymore. There's no use."

With three-hit pitching like the White Sox got from Stan Bahnsen and two relievers in Tuesday's 4-0 exhibition victory over the St. Louis Cardinals, who needs Allen?

And according to the Texas Rangers, no one needs Frank Howard, either. The large slugger returned his estimated $100,000 contract unsigned and owner Bob Short said, "That's it as far as the Rangers are concerned."

Home runs are Howard's department and the Rangers got them from Lenny Randle and Elliott Maddox but still dropped a 6-5 decision to the Baltimore Orioles, who got a three-run shot from rookie Jim Fuller.

The Chicago Cubs scored all their runs in a wild third inning—Ron Santo contributed his second spring homer and a two-run double—and defeated Oakland 7-4. Eleven of the Cubs' 15 hits came off Catfish Hunter.

Slick-fielding Bud Harrelson committed two costly errors— each permitted a run to socre—and the Cincinnati Reds edged the New York Mets 4-3. The New York Yankees dropped a 5-4 decision to Montreal when Mike Marshall put down a ninth-inning uprising.

Mickey Stanley belted a two-run inside-the-park homer and an RBI triple and Ike Brown also homered as the Detroit Tigers downed the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-5. California edged San Francisco 5-4 on Bruce Christensen's sacrifice fly in the 11th inning.

Reggie Smith hit a two-run homer in Boston's 10-5 trouncing of Houston. Steve Carlton hurled five strong innings—one run, two hits—as Philadelphia turned back Kansas City 7-4.

Larry Stahl singled home the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning of San Diego's 3-1 triumph over Milwaukee. George Stone, Jimmy Freeman and Russ Dillon scattered six hits as Atlanta shaded Minnesota 3-1.

The Tokyo Lotte Orions of the Japanese League scored four runs in the eighth inning—the winner crossed on third baseman Kurt Bevacqua's error— and nipped Cleveland 4-3.

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Chamber of Commerce will be on hand next week in Honolulu to make a pitch for the Pro Bowl which matches National Conference and American Conference stars of the National Football League.

Cowboy owner Clint Murchison has said he is not interested in staging the Super Bowl in Texas Stadium because of the conflict with bond holders ticket options.

Good Year Predicted

By JOHN NIMMO

As spring approaches, the Sikeston High School golf squad prepares to get underway and defend its district title. With six of his lettermen returning to compete in this year's sport, Coach Gene Dawson is confident that this will be a good year for the Bulldogs.

Seniors Joe Crenshaw, Tom Dawson, Jeff Porter, and juniors, Dennis Myer, Mark Shaw, and Billy Wake, are the returning lettermen,

Coach Dawson commented that this year's squad is slightly smaller than in previous years but he is expecting them to make a good showing.

The golf season officially opens in the first week of April with the team clashing with such schools as Cape Girardeau, Kennett, Poplar Bluff, Dexter, and Perryville. To date the schedule is incomplete.

The really big one that the SHS golfers are looking forward to are the district playoffs for state advancement at Poplar Bluff, May 8.

Coach Dawson said, "I am expecting this year's squad to be a strong balanced team and we do expect a winning season."

MSHSAA Delays Action On Central

COLUMBIA, Mo. — The Missouri State High School Activities Association MSHSAA Board of Control plans a special meeting to duscuss a disturbance following the Kansas City Central- Raytown South class L basketball tournament game last week.

MSHSAA officials announced today that at its regular meeting last Saturday, the board resolved to conduct the meeting after preliminary investigations have been completed. Reports have since been requested from the tournament manager and the Kansas City and Raytown schools superintendents and boards of education.

Besides those parties, administrators of the schools involved and representatives of Northwest Missouri State College, where the playoff game was held, will be asked to attend the hearing.

Fourteen persons, including four police officers, suffered minor injuries March 8 when scores of Central fans burst across the court after their team lost 52-50 in overtime and began hurling chairs at the Raytown South crowd.

On Monday, Central's student council recommendedto school administrators that the student body be placed on probation for the remainder of the year. Earlier, the northwest section of the MSHSAA proposed thaat Central be suspended from all association activities for the rest of the year.

Mizzou Bucking Odds

COLUMBIA — First-timer Mizzou meets the granddaddy of National Invitation Tournament entries -- St. John's University -- in an opening -round basketball game at 8 p.m. (CST) in Madison Square Garden this Saturday.

The Tigers (21—5) will be matched in their first N.I.T. adventure with a New York entry that has been to the tournament 20 previous times, winning four championships. The Redmen, led by 6-7 Mel Davis, were 17-9 this season.

One of St. John's assistant coaches scouted Missouri's final-season win over Oklahoma here Saturday -- but the Big Eight Tigers will be relying on a scouting service for their "book" on the Easterners. The Redmen averaged 85.3 points a game this winter (against Mizzou's 76.5) so they obviously are not bashful shooters.

"a very imposing ball-club" is Coach Norm Stewart's quick evaluation of St. John's. "They kinda remind me of Kansas State from a size standpoint."

"We're playing an experienced Garden team -- and an experienced N.I.T. team," he continued. "It's the home-town favorite -- and I know we will be bucking some odds. They'll have a little edge."

Two of Coach Frank Mulzoff's standouts have cut an impressive swath nationally. Davis, dubbed "Chairman of the Bards", was the leading scorer with a 21-1 point average -- but the lean jumper really lived up to his monkier by claiming an average of 17 rebounds a game. That mark was fourth-best in the nation last week.

Bill Schaeffer, the 6-5 forward who averaged 16.8 as No. 2 scorer, made 63.1 per cent of his field goals. This was the nation's sixth-best collegiate listing last week. Rounding out the Redmen's front line is 6-9 Greg Cluess at Center, a 16-point shooter.

If Tiger John Brown can neutralize Davis' shotmaking and boardwork, Ol' Mizzou will be off and running in this single - elimination tourney. The 6-7 Missouri standout battled taller foes all season en route to District Five and all-league honors. Brown honors. Brown averaged 21.7 points a game and 10½ rebounds.

Stewart doesn't expect his team to be awed by the "big city", or the Garden.

"Our team has played at Kentucky, UCLA -- and in our own tournament," he points out, "and they know we're not going back there just for the trip."

"It's not that big a deal. I told them a few days ago that they'd all seen tall buildings, ridden in an airplane, and seen a guy in a tie."

"I have not seen that much Eastern basketball," says Norm, "but I think there are probably three areas where we'll see different interpretations.

"They probably will permit more aggressive board play. The charging- blocking call may favor the offensive man. And I don't think traveling will be called quite so strictly as it is out here."

Winner of the Mizzou- St. John's clash will take on the Memphis State-Oral Roberts winner in a 6 o'clock Tuesday night game.

Missouri's travel party flies out of St. Louis Thursday morning for New York. Tiger headquarters will be the American hotel.

Pruitt Tops MIAA Stars

MISSOURI INTERCOLLEGIATE ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

ST. LOUIS -- LaMont Pruitt, 6 foot- 5, 200- pound sophomore from Pittsburgh, Pa., and a key player in Lincoln University's charge to the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association basketball championship, topped the voting of the coaches in the selection of the conference's 1972 All-Star teams.

Pruitt, who averaged 19.9 points a game in Lincoln's 21-7 season, also was named the Most Valuable Player by the league's 7 coaches who convened at Columbia Monday.

St. Louisan Andrew Reid of Southeast Missouri State College, a senior, was the only repeater from the 1971 selections.

Zack Townsend of Southwest Mo. State who led the MIAA in scoring with an average of 24.5 points per game and runner- up John Williams of Missouri U.- Rolla, who averaged 20.1 ppg, also were named to the first five as was Rich Peters of UMR who was on the 1971 second team. Peters also won the Sportsmanship Trophy for the 1972 campaign.

Boyer Looks For Offense

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Former Yankee Stan Bahnsen has joined the list of pitchers bolstering their morale in spring training against the St. Louis Cardinals.

Bahnsen, toiling now for the Chicago White Sox, worked five innings Tuesday and was the winner in a 4-0 game sending the punchless Cards to a fourth straight loss.

The three-hit shutout in which Bahnsen had the heavy hand caused Cards coach Ken Boyer to note, "Any hitting by us from now on will be noticeable."

The Sox added their other runs in the fourth and fifth innings off Al Hrabosky, who relieved Bibby.

Rick Wise, Charlie Hudson and Dennis Higgins were scheduled to pitch today for the Cards in an exhibition at Al Lang Field against the Boston Red Sox.

Schatzley Bolsters Three Rivers Hopes

POPLAR BLUFF — Three Rivers Community College will begin defense of its 1971 baseball conference crown Tuesday when it travels to Jefferson County College for a double header.

If it repeats as conference champions, big shoes must be filled. Lost through graduation were five .300 plus hitters. Three of these made the all-conference and all-regional teams: Steve Coulson, pitcher-outfield; Gaylord Gregory, catcher; and Wilson Strong, shortstop. Two underrated players, Doub Bagby and Mark Ellis, are the other members of this quintet.

Only three lettermen returned from last year's team: Les Schatzley, who made the all-conference and all-regional teams; Ronnie Cude, and Larry Wills. Adding experience are two other sophomores: John McCulloch, a letterman from the 1970 team; and Zack Womack, a transfer from Union University in Jackson, Tennessee.

State Fair Loses Opener

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (AP) — The first round of the National Junior College Basketball Tournament—marked by a couple of upsets Monday—will be completed this afternoon with two games.

Seminole, Okla., will meet Burlington, Iowa, and Tyler, Tex., is matched against Robert Morris of Carthage, Ill., in their first action in the tourney.

In Monday's action, Vincennes, Ind., top-seeded and unbeaten, had a fight on its hands before pulling away from Erie, N.Y., for a 107-83 victory, while second-seeded Dalton, Ga., and third-seeded Arizona Western suffered surprising defeats.

Dalton fell victim to Gulf Coast of Florida, 78-69, and Western dropped an 86-78 decision to Paducah, Ky.

In Monday's other games, it was Casper, Wyo., over State Fair of Sedalia, Mo., 79-65; Southern Idaho beating Ulster County, N.Y., 85-75, and Ferrum, Va., over Hutchinson, Kan., 82-72.

Vincennes had only a fourpoint lead midway through the second half before it rang up 16 straight points to clinch its 30th win of the year.

Dalton hit an eight-minute dry spell in the first half of its game and never recovered, which Paducah outdueled Arizona Western in the closing three minutes of a game that was close all the way.

NBA Returns To Missouri

After 14 seasons in Cincinnati, the National Basketball Association club announced plans Tuesday to move to Kansas City for the 1972-73 season, spreading home games among St. Louis, Omaha and the Municipal Auditorium here.

The decision still awaits approval by the league. But Joe Axelson, the Royals executive vice president and general manager, said the team expects no difficulty in getting it since attendance at Cincinnati has averaged only about 3,500 per game.

However, in Cincinnati, the players said late Tuesday they will refuse to play if the team management splits home dates among the three cities.

Tom Van Arsdale, team captain, called the move "bush" and added, "The players are going to fight it."

Van Arsdale said he had advised National Basketball Association Commissioner Walter Kennedy, through Players' Association attorney Larry Fleisher, of the possibility the players could "refuse to play next season."

The Royals said they would play 21 games in Kansas City and 10 home games in each of the other cities.

"None of us are happy," Van Arsdale said after a team meeting.

Another question still to be answered is the future of Coach Bob Cousy. Royals attorney Ambrose Lindhorst said that no decision has been made on whether the former Boston Celtics star will remain at the Royals helm.

Axelson indicated the club wants to retain Cousy, saying, "I think I can talk him into coming."

The coach himself, however, was noncommittal.

It wasn't any secret that the Royals were looking around. But their choice of Kansas City was surprising. Most talk of a move by the club centered on San Diego.

National Forest

Missouri's million and a half National Forest acres, long a fine home for wildlife, would be moving uptown for sure with the implementation of a bold new plan for wildlife management.

The plan, which stresses increased attention to providing water, food and cover for wildlife on the lands within the Mark Twain and Clark National Forests, administered by the U.S. Forest Service, is considered by conservationists to put Missouri ahead of any other state in federal- state conservation cooperation.

As yet the plan is not a reality, only a proposal. Needed is $418,000 from Congress to finance the first year costs. This is an increase of seven percent above the current budget for the two national forests.

Carl Noren, director of the Missouri Department of Conservation, says, "this change toward a better balanced forest environment is an important move to preserve fundamental ecological links in the Missouri Ozarks."

Key to the plan, devised by the Forest Service in cooperation with the Department of Conservation and the Conservation Federation (the state's largest citizen conservation group), is "diversity" and "edge."

Animals such as wild turkeys need forest openings. Deer need young trees on which they can browse. Most species live on the "edge" or the division between field and forest.

"Each animal has its own home requirements," says Ray Evans, Department of Conservation biologist headquartered in West Plains, who has worked closely with the Forest Service on the plan.

"There are some 65 fish species, 75 species of amphibians and reptiles, 175 bird species and 50 mammal species. The solution we've worked out will meet as many requirements as possible among these species," Evans said.

"Within each land unit of about 1,000 acres," he continued, "we'll try for 20 percent in productive forage for animals -- herbs and fruiting shrubs. Another 40 percent should be in mast producing oak and hickory and another 10 percent should be in old- growth trees which provide nest cavities and insects for food."

The plan becomes more complex in that these tree percentages must be scattered over different geological areas -- on south slopes, north slopes, bottoms and ridgetops. And the plan is to be carefully coordinated with timber management in these same lands.

In addition, the plan calls for small lakes and for emphasis on wildlife management.

It calls for protection of endangered and unique wildlife, for maintenance of grasslands and for such specialized recreation areas as walk- in turkey hunting. primitive weapons—only and recreation for wildlife enjoyment.

"This plan has been a three- way effort by the Clark and Mark Twain Forests and the Department of Conservation for 10 years," says Ed Stegner, executive secretary of the 20,000- member Conservation Federation.

Peanut Better A Pleasing Plentiful

Peanut Butter is one of the most flexible, economical and nutritious foods available to any homemaker. The best thing about it is that both children and adults like the flavor.

U. S. Department of Agriculture nutritionists say that the protein in peanut butter is of a higher quality than most vegetable proteins and is therefore a good supplementary food in the diet. Proteins are necessary for proper growth of children, and adults need them every day, too, to rebuild body cells.

Peanut butter also ranks near the top of the food list in food energy, fats necessary for body balance, phosphorus, thiamine and niacine.

This nutritious food is available in two styles: creamy smooth and chunk- style. It can be used in a variety of ways which will tempt everyone in the family.

*To get a little variety in the traditional peanut butter sandwich, try mixing with grated or finely- chopped carrots. Peanut butter with sliced bananas or honey also make good sandwich combinations.

*For a quick vegetable sauce, add two tablespoons of peanut butter to a cup of reconstituted dry milk and stir to blend. Season with salt, pepper and a little grated onion.

*How about a milkshake? Blend 2 tablespoons of peanut butter with 1 teaspoon sugar or honey. Mix in 1 cup of milk and 1 cup ice cream.

*Glaze four ham steaks with a mixture of 1/4 cup peanut butter, 1/4 cup orange marmalade and 2 tablespoons soy sauce. Spread over ham slices and broil about 10 minutes.

*For peanut butter macaroni, stir 2 cups milk gradually into 1/2 cup peanut butter. Cook until mixture thickens slightly, and salt to taste. Pour over cooked and drained macaroni and bake in a moderate oven 15 minutes.

*To satisfy a sweet tooth, try peanut butter marshmallow fudge. cook 1 cup granulated sugar, 1 cup brown sugar, 2 tablespoons butter and 1/2 cup evaporated milk to soft ball stage (234-238 degrees). Add 1 cup miniature marshmallows and 3/4 cup peanut butter just before removing from heat. Do not stir; cool to room temperature. Add 1 tesapoon vanilla and beat until mixture is creamy, thick, and will hold its shape when dropped from a spoon. Pour into well- buttered 8x8x2 inch pan. Cut into 1-inch squares. Makes 36 squares.

Who Was ThatMan With President?

ART BUCHWALD
in the
Commercial Appeal

WASHINGTON — One of the best- kept secrets of the Nixon administration was blown during the President's recent trip to China. The American people discovered that there is a highly confidential organization advising the President on foreign affairs which is called the State Department. The head of this secret apparat is a lawyer named William Rogers, an old friend of President Nixon.

This is how the existence of this undercover agency was revealed. When President Nixon went to China, he was seen in the company of a sandy- haired man who rarely left the President's side. Most reporters on the trip assumed he was a Secret Service man and paid no attention to him.

But then the President went ot visit Chairman Mao Tse-tung, and the newspapermen discovered that the sandy- haired man did not accompany Mr. Nixon. This knocked out the theory that the mysterious person was a Secret Service agent.

When questioned about what the person was doing on the trip, Ron Ziegler reluctantly admitted that the man's name was William Rogers and he held the title of secretary of state, and he had something to do with foreign affairs, though Ziegler refused to go into it any further.

Meanwhile, back in Washington, reporters were trying to find out more about the State Department and where it fitted into the diplomatic picture.

The White House seemed very disturbed about the leak, and J. Edgar Hoover has been ordered to find out who blew Mr. Rogers' cover.

A White House spokesman told me, "It does no good for the security of the nation to talk about the role of the State Department in foreign affairs. The people who revealed the existence of Mr. Rogers and the agency he represents may believe they were reporting news, but in effect they are only giving aid and comfort to the enemy."

"Does the revelation of a State Department mean that Henry Kissinger is not running the entire foreign policy of the United States?"

"It means no such thing. All policies on foreign affairs are still made by the 'Department of Kissinger' or, as we call it here, the DOK. The State Department, and I'm not confirming there is one, mind you, is sort of a backup organization which provides the President with information he might miss from his usual sources."

"If this is true, why all the mystery about the organization? Why hasn't the country heard about the State Department before? And why has the identity of William Rogers, as head of it, been kept a secret?"

"The President believes that there are certain agencies that can operate better if they are not publicized. If people knew what Mr. Rogers did, he would not have the freedom of movement that he has now. He can go anywhere in the world without being recognized. The President can assign him missions that would be impossible for someone as well known as Henry Kissinger to take. The State Department, because of its anonymity, has been able to perform a great service to the nation."

"Will the State Department be dismantled, now that its role is out in the open?"

"That decision is up to Dr. Kissinger."

Historian's Ideas

UNCOMMON SENSE. By James MacGregor Burns. Harper. $6.95.

Historian Burns, the prize-winning biographer of Franklin D. Roosevelt and a reform-minded critic of American politics, presents here his own personal exhortations for a change in the American system, which he believes has failed to meet its goals.

Quite deliberately he has taken a stance like that of Thomas Paine — except that he feels sense must be "uncommon" to get results for the common good.

Being an idealist, he deplores the American tendency to be pragmatic, to value a means or an end if it "works."

One of his key words is "transform." He rejects violence as a means of change because it is destructive and ignores the constructive. He favors transformation rather than gradual reformation. He is for long range planning rather than muddling through.

Burns has some concrete suggestions for changes. Centering his attention on the antiquated, negative-oriented machinery of Congress and on the fragmented nature of government at all levels, right down to the local cemetery district, he proposes a stiffening of the executive branch. His idea is to create federal task forces, responsible directly to the chief executive, that would cross over the boundaries of local jurisdictions, and get on a regional basis some coordinated action to solve pressing problems.

Basically what he is advocating is a new populism, an arousal of thinking people who want action.

Noranda Aluminum Plant's Performance Satisfactory

TORONTO, Canada — The Noranda Aluminum company reduction plant at New Madrid, Mo., a subsidiary of Noranda Mines Limited, reached commercial production in July of 1971 after a three month start-up, and by the fourth quarter was operating at rated capacity, according to the 1971 annual report of Noranda Mines Limited.

The report stated that the aluminum production was 20 percent higher than the original budget of $85 million, but the performance of the plant has been satisfactory.

Construction of the reduction plant was completed in September of 1971 and rated capacity of the plant.

production of primary aluminum totaled 37,000 tons during the year. The start-up of the facilities was accomplished in an efficient manner with metal grade meeting expectations, the report stated. Production during the last six weeks of the year was at the

The aluminum industry suffered during the year from excess supply resulting in a severe downward price movement. Industry inventory levels were at an all time high. Major U.S. primary producers curtailed production and ended the year with an operating rate of approximately 82 per cent of capacity.

Sales of bare conductor products from the wire and cable plant showed improvement in volume and have been well received by several large utilities, the report said.

Competition was intense in the aluminum industry, despite cutbacks by the major producers to offset low production facilities. Product shipments in the U.S. were up six percent, but down over eight percent for ingot, where price discounting was severe. Excess capacity could continue the price pressure in spite of greater activity in construction and transportation.

The decline in demand for most metals which commenced in the second half of 1970 continued through 1971, the report said. The general lack of business confidence and lower rates of capital expenditures were reflected in a worldwide pause in metals consumption in Canada.

Throughout the year, operations were adversely affected by the continuing high value of the Canadian dollar, lower copper prices, and in the last four months, the U.S. surcharge, the report said.

In what was a generally difficult year for mining, manufacturing and forest products, Noranda Mines earnings increased slightly to a record $61.5 million in 1971.

The earnings per share in 1971 compared to 1970 was $2.50 to $2.41.

1970 earnings were considerably below potential due to strikes and government control of the price of copper in Canada.

Reservoir Matter Of Renewed Controversy

WARSAW, Mo. (AP) — With about $64 million already funneled into the Harry S. Truman Reservoir and dam from the taxpayers — and with the project about 23 per cent complete — it suddenly has become a matter of renewed controversy as the result of a court suit.

The Environmental Defense Fund, in conjunction with the Missouri Wildlife Society and seven residents of the reservoir area, filed a petition last Monday in U. S. District Court, Kansas City, for an injunction prohibiting continuation of construction.

EDF, which has halted construction with court orders of two dams in Arkansas, claims the Army Corps of Engineers exaggerated the benefits of the massive project on the Osage River, 100 miles southeast of Kansas City. And if the reservoir is completed, EDF says, it could bring about the extinction in this country of the paddlefish —or spoonbill —which is at home in the area and found outside the country only in China.

"It's a little too late," said Gordon Drake, mayor of the small city of Warsaw which has started a transition from agriculture to tourist-orientation the past six years.

Target date for completion of the Truman Reservoir in June 1979. The estimated cost approaches $300 million.

With the project so far advanced, it is generally been considered a fait accompli. What the suit did was to demonstrate the controversy remained deep-rooted in a sort of dormant state —even though most of the opponents expressed surprise at the development at this stage.

The most vocal opposition to the project was expressed several years ago by some farmers who would be forced to sell their land.

Most of the town will survive the floodpool waters, but some of the outlying districts will not.

Harry Mills, president of the Mo-Ark Basin Association and operator of a Clinton, Mo., insurance office, recalled 90 per cent of the area residents were in opposition to a proposal in 1964, when the Corps of Engineers was considering a 12,000acre lake.

"Then it became obvious that something was going to be done regardless and we'd better see if we could get a restudy and see if we could get some benefits for those of us above the lake," Mils said.

Support was gained for a redesign of the project that included a power project and the larger recreation lake—65,000 acres at normal water level and up to 209,000 acres at flood stage, Mills said.

That will make it the largest federal reservoir in Missouri or Kansas and nearly the size of the Lake of the Ozarks.

Farmers faced with losing their land attempted no legal action because some "just didn't feel that strong about it" and some "just didn't get together," Mayor Drake said.

Any claim that many families would be displaced by the dam is wrong, he said, because "most of the farmers have already sold out. There would be a big problem of what to do with the land."

To date, 330 families have been forced to move from farm homes; 550 from nonfarm homes.

Marion Barnes, a plaintiff in the EDF suit and an Osceola farmer who purchased his land in the Osage valley 30 years ago, said he has yet to negotiate with government agents on the value of his land.

"All they think about is condemning it," he said. "I haven't seen an appraiser in two years. I just want them to be fair."

He views the suit as the last chance to stop the dam, which would take 223 acres of his farm, leaving him with 17 acres and a house.

J. S. Whitaker, a director of the Deepwater State Bank and a fellow plaintiff, said:

"You can always build a dam; you can't build rivers. It will put me out of business in farming and I don't know what it's going to do to the bank."

Whitaker faces the loss of 429 of his 799 acres to the 17,95... reservoir and some of his favorite fishing holes and deer runs.

Mahlon White, editor of the Benton County Enterprise, said the suit might have had some effect if it had been filed before the farmers were displaced. "But the area is becoming tourist-oriented and the twon would be against it," he said.

If necessary, he said he would take an editorial stand against the suit.

O. C. Trudgion, president of the Osage Valley Bank in Warsaw, echoed some of the local sentiment that the suit was "late," and said, "All that money would be down the drain" if construction were halted.

Col. W.R. Needham, Corps district engineer in Kansas City, reviewed expenses on the project to date after the suit was filed:

"We have about $26 million worth of construction in place at the project and another $45 million under contract. We have spent about $27 million to purchase 115,600 acres of land, which represents about one-half of the land acquisition costs required for the project.

"The total investment by the taxpayers to date is approximately $64 million."

Ziegel W. Neff, Warsaw attorney who agrees with the feeling "if the project was going to be stopped it should have been long ago," said:

"I don't think Warsaw is going to benefit as much as most people think. Clinton will be the town that will benefit most. It will be the gateway to the Truman Reservoir."

One of those envisioning a merchant's paradise, Russell Weaver, realtor, said area residents are counting on the reservoir to bring in "missions of people" — a dramatic reversal for Henry County, where the population has dropped from 27,000 in 1890 to 18,000 in 1970.

As for environmental ramifications, people in Warsaw are "insensitive to clean water and wildlife and don't really care about the environment," said Rod Roberts, one of the directors of the area Headwaters Association. But he see no reason to oppose the dam, which he views as a benefit to the city.

M.K. Chapman of Clinton, retired regional supervisor for the Missouri Conservation Department, feels EDF's concern for the paddlefish may be overreaction. The living example of prehistoric existence—with a body like a catfish and a long bill like a swordfish—is in the Warsaw area, he said, but it is also found in the Lake of the Ozarks below Bagnell Dam and in the Upper Osage above Osceola.

Less moved by the possible danger to the paddlefish was State Sen. William J. Cason, DClinton, majority floor leader, who promised the Corps of Engineers to throw his weight against any efforts to beat down the EDF suit.

"The Environmental Defense Fund, Inc., has already done more harm to the morale of your people than their ic paddlefish could make up for in the next 100 years," Cason told Needham in a telegram.

Five Famous Men

Despite a "puerile and one-book cynicism among the campus and postcampus young" and a "acute and obesety materialistic skepticism among the middle-aged and elderly," he says at the opening of his book, there remains that America sometimes is served by "a rare, tough breed of truly responsible politicians."

He calls them "Responsibles' because. even with their faults and weaknesses. and even though they often have been misunderstood and rejected. they have managed to do the right thing at the right time for the future good of the country.

He cites five examples. Harry S. Truman. Robert A. Taft. Dwight D. Eisenhower. John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson, in that order.

His five essays on these men are opinionated in a straightforward way for he writes from a personal viewpoint. having known the five. and he colors his comment with intimate anecdotes.

In essence. he examines the 'Responsibles' for their personality traits and attempts to show what has made them tick. Inevitably. various readers will disagree with some of his evaluations and conclusions. Yet this book is a valuable reading experience for the light it sheds on the psychological makeup of five men he says "have given more than they have taken from the common human fund of the Great Republic."

POTATO PRIMER

Your family probably is quite content to go on feasting on your lovingly whipped-up mashed potatoes, or the easy -on- you baked spuds. But you there in the kitchen -- don't you sometimes wish you could do something different with them? Without too much trouble, of course.

Well, you can ...potatoes are as versatile as the alphabet is long. Perhaps you need just a hint to remind you of an old favorite you've temporarily forgotten. We follow with A to Z ideas -- some new to you, some old favorites -- to prompt you to make more and varied use of potatoes, which the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service says are especially plentiful these days.

B is for Potato Bread -- an old fashioned favorite made with mashed potatoes. Packaged instant mashed potatoes would be handy.

C is for Country-fried -- sliced or diced boiled potatoes fried in butter or drippings; plus a bit of minced onion perhaps.

E is for Escalloped -- vary your standard recipe by using, in place of milk, undiluted evaporated milk or s canned condensed cream soup plus 3/4 can milk.

F is for Fried -- French fried...cottage fried...American fries... you take it from there.

I is for Irish Potato Dumplings -- both grated, uncooked and riced, boiled potatoes in these fluffy dumplings.

J is for potatoes de Jour -- however you decide to fix them, they are the potatoes of the day.

K is for a Kid Pleaser -- hot dogs, split lengthwise and stuffed with mashed potatoes; top with grated cheese and paprika and heat in oven.

L is for Loaf -- mashed potatoes mixed with cooked celery, butter, an egg, seasonings (including a bit of onion) and chopped meat leftover or chopped peanuts; bake.

M is for Mashed potatoes -- perhaps with dairy-soured cream and chives instead of milk and butter.

O is for Omelet -- butter fried, diced, cooked potatoes and a bit of minced onion tucked into the omelet fold.

P is for Patties -- mashed potatoes made into little cakes, dipped in flour, browned in butter. Try egg, then cornflake crumbs for dipping.

Q is for Quick potato products -- the amazing variety of these convenience items will broaden your repertoire greatly.

R is for Roasted -- pared or just scrubbed, but or whole, add to roaster 1 to 1½ hours before meat should be done; baste occasionally.

T is for Twice -baked-baked potatoes scooped out of the skins, mashed and seasoned, then returned to the skins; may be frozen on a cookie sheet and packeged individually in foil.

U is for Unusual -- impress the family with some of the fancy names of ordinary dishes, such as, Gnocchi (a sort of potatoe dumpling), or Lyonnaise (slightly underdone boiled spuds cooked in fat and seasonings and sprinkled with parsley).

V is for Vichyssoise -- a rich cream of potato and leek or onion soup; serve hot or icy-cold.

W is for Whipped cream-topping -- 1/2 cup heavy cream whipped, with 1/2 cup shredded Cheddar cheese folded in, piled atop a casserole of hot mashed potatoes, browned in a quick oven.

X Y Z is for the exciting miscellany -- you'll find once you start collecting and trying our potato recipes!

MERRY EATING!

Stamps In The News

AP Newsfeatures

By SYD KRONISH

The global anniversary of an organization which has won the plaudits of all mankind — because it deals with the welfare of children — is being honored on stamps, too.

The 25th birthday of the establishment of UNICEF is being marked by the issuance of stamps by various countries. One of these nations to join the philatelic tribute is Tunisia with a pair of interesting designs, reports the World Wide Philatelic Agency.

The two stamps hail the stages of UNICEF's program. In its first development cycle, UNICEF's emphasis was on health and nutrition. The second period, now in effect, dwells on education. The Indonesian government has been following this cooperative program and has placed great stress in publicizing its efforts via these stamps.

UNICEF was created by the United Nations General Assembly in 1946 and was originally concerned with youngsters in post-war Europe. Since 1950, however, the work of the agency has gone world-wide, specializing in long-term assistance to some 112 countries in Asia, Africa and Latin America. In 1965 UNICEF received its outstanding tribute — the organizational Nobel Peace Prize.

The U.S. Postal Service will soon announce the issuance of an attractive "mini-album" containing all the U.S. commemorative stamps produced during 1971. The albums will be on sale in all post offices. . . . and this is the first time in history that the annual booklets are being released at the local level.

The albums will contain 24 commemorative stamps, including the two latest Christmas stamps, and sell for $2.50.

There are some 34,715 price changes — mostly upward — in the 1972 Volume II Scott Catalog. Venezuela leads with 2,970 new prices. Russia has 2,746 revisions, all increases.

Others showing many changes are Spain, San Marino, Sweden, Liechtenstein, Switzerland, Luxembourg, Vatican City and Poland.

Topical collectors will be glad to know that nearly 5,000 stamps depicting a variety of topical subjects during 1971 are listed in a new handbook produced by the American Topical Association. The stamps are all arranged alphabetically, first by topics and then by countries under each topic. The valuable 48-page illustrated guide to topical collecting was compiled by Ruth Y. Wetmore and is priced at $2.

Requests for orders of the new book may be obtained directly from the American Topical Association, 3308 North 50th St., Milwaukee, Wis., 53216.

The Indian Ocean Republic of the Maldives which has issued many stamps featuring famous paintings has just produced another such set. This one depicts paintings of well known dance scenes.

MVP ON SPARTAN ICE

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Center Gilles Gagnon of Montreal was chosen as Michigan State's most valuable hockey player last season. He scored 27 goals and 26 assists for the Spartans.

BEETLE BAILEY by Mort Walker

Gambling in America

By MARY COSTELLO
Editorial Research Reports

WASHINGTON -- Gambling is believed to be the biggest business in the United States -- a business in which eight out of ten Americans participate to some extent. There are no exact figurses on how much is wagered each year, but there is unanimous agreement that the amount bet illegally is many times greater than the amount bet legally. The President's Crime Commission estimated in 1967 that up to $50 billion was spent annually in illegal gambling on "numbers," horse racing, sports events and dice games. By contrast, federal officials calculated that in 1970 legal bets totaled $4.7 billion.

It is not surprising then that many financially hard- pressed states are looking to the legalization of gambling as a way of raising new revenues. At the latest count, 34 states allowed some form of gambling – from Nevada where just about anything goes to Kansas where only bingo run by charitable or non- profit organizations is permitted. Legalization measures have been introduced in virtually every state legislature that has met this year. About May 1, Massachusetts will become the sixth state – the third this year-- to start operating a lottery.

New Hampshire in 1964 started a lottery to raise public funds – reviving a practice that disappeared late in the 19th century. Then came New York (1967) and New Jersey (1970), followed this year by Connecticut, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts. The money derived from lotteries -- minus prizes, promotion and other expenses -- is turned over to the state governments where most of it is used for education.

With the possible exception of New Jersey, profits from the first three state lotteries have been far less than initially expected. Richard Metzer, dean of New York University's Graduate School of Public Administration, contends: "You can't expect a lottery to produce vast amounts of money like you get in a broad - based tax like a sales or income tax. Lottery income amounts to about the same as a penny or so rise in a cigarette tax."

A number of states have eagerly been studying offtrack betting since New York City last April opened the nation's first offtrack parlors for placing legal bets on horse racing. The Offtrack Betting Corporation has had to scale down its original estimate of profits that would be turned back to the city. Nonetheless, OTB has tapped a betting market capable of producing tens of millions for the city treasury.

In the past few years, about a dozen states have had bills in their legislatures to legalize casinos. Perhaps the most intensive push for casino legalization has been in New Jersey, where Atlantic City is envisioned as a potential "Las Vegas of the East." Opponents, remembering that Atlantic City was a mecca for illegal casinos in the 1920s, fear that legal ones would be easy targets for mob takeover.

The President's Crime Commission reported that gambling is organized crime's chief source of income. And underworld informer Vincent C. Teresa told a Senate subcommittee last July that gang leaders, with their gambling profits, "have bought their way into police stations and state courts, legitimate businesses and lillicit sidelines such as loan sharking, stolen securities and counterfiet credit cards."

Gambling's propensity for corrupting public officials is used by both sides in the growing debate over legalization. Those in favor of legalized gambling assert that it would remove the incentive for much of the present corruption of policemen -- the need for protection from enforcement of anti- gambling laws. It is further argued that whatever corruption remained after legalization would be easier to ferret out. Finally, there is the argument that even if some corruption remained, the public would receive sizable tax revenues from legalization.

Foes of legalized gambling maintain that it cannot be controlled effectively by public officials and that sooner or later it will corrupt them. Rep. Wright Patman (D Texas), the populist chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee, contends: "Legalized gambling is the greatest form of regressive taxation that can be imposed on people. It socks the poor and lets the rich -- who do their gambling in stocks -- off the hook." Others point out that state revenues from gambling tend to be far less than initially expected.

Despite the opposition, it seems likely that more states will enact laws to legalize gambling. These laws may not provide as much revenue as proponents now project, they may not eliminate corruption and underworld influence, and they may even send some of the poor deeper into poverty. But they now appeal less controversial and more acceptable to both the public and the politicians than increased taxes.

Items Of Rail Nostalgia To Go On Public Sale

PHILADELPHIA (AP) – Items of nostalgia from the early years, the golden years and the declining years of American railroading go on public sale here next Monday.

Among the 1,877 items to be auctioned off at the three-day sale are the rolltop desk once used by rail magnate E.H. Harriman and the steam whistle and a drive wheel from the locomotive John Bull, one of the earliest engines in American rail history.

The John Bull was built for the Camden and Amboy Railroad in 1831 and pulled its duty between Camden and Trenton, N.J., on a line that was the beginning of the rail connection between Philadelphia and New York.

Hundreds of rail buffs from around the country are expected to be on hand as the entire collection of the Pennsylvania Railroad Museum goes on the auction block.

"It is apparently the largest railroad auction and certainly the largest collection of railroadiana ever offered for sale," Lou Pardee, presi-ent of the National Railroad Historical Society, said after viewing the collection at a preview last week.

Sandwiched in between Item No. 1, "Scrapbook of Assorted Special Menus," and Item No. 1,877, "Famed Painting 'Passing Strangers' Signed Atherton," are hundreds of old photographs, a huge collection of official railroad guides and other bits of railroad history.

Many of the items have only a tenuous connection with railroading: cast iron deer heads, five counterfeit bills, and two wooden flag poles.

But most of the dusty pieces are of undoubted interest to rail buffs: Pullman car ladders, railroad headlamps, old telegraph keys, the battered top hat worn by the engineer of the first train into Indianapolis, a 6-foot-long clock that once was in the Newark, N.J., station, lanterns, baggage carts, and a $60 check paid in 1840 to one John Wagner for a month's service as a locomotive engineer.

Mixed Results In Return

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) – Six tax consultants here came up with six different results when asked for help in filling out a federal income tax return.

The maximum difference was $454. One consultant said the taxpayer owed $7. Another said a refund of $377 was due.

An Associated Press writer and his wi fe went to th consultants for advice on filling out their joint return with itemized deductions. The couple pretended to know little about possible deductions but gave the same information to each consultant when asked for it.

Some of the consultants found legitimate deductions, such as damage to the family car that was not covered by collision insurance.

Others listed deductions such as ordinary sunglasses, which the Internal Revenue Service says are only deductible if worn on jobs where they are an absolute necessity.

Some of the consultants say in their advertising that they will appear with the taxpayer if he has to go to court over his return.

David Kestler, chief tax auditor for the IRS office here, noted in an interview that "the person who signs the return is responsible for everything that's in it."

One consultant failed to suggest many legitimate deductions that the couple was entitled to, such as the husband's alimony payments.

Only one of the consultants went beyond the usual question about doctor bills and medicine costs to discover that the newsman was entitled to a deduction for the cost of crutches and special shoe supports needed because of a broken leg.

The deductions and the final figures weren't the only places where the tax experts differed. The fees ranged from $27 to $50.

One firm of a national chain charged $50, while another office of the same chain a mile away charged $35.

One IRS consultant was stumped by a question of whether the newsman's education expenses to better qualify him for his job were deductible.

"Gee," said the consultant. "That's a tough one. Let me ask someone else."

After 14 minutes of reading the IRS instructions and much debate among three consultants, it was decided that the education expenses might be deductible.

Extension Council Reorganized

NEW MADRID -- A reorganizational meeting of the University of Missouri Extension Council of New Madrid county was held Monday afternoon at the University Extension Center.

Dale Geske was elected chairman for the council for 1972. Mrs. Pansy Stafford was elected vice chairman. Clyde Hawes was elected secretary. Arline Avery was elected treasurer.

Regular meetings will be held the second Monday of every other month beginning in April.

Mr. Sam Harbin,
Superintendent of Schools
Sikeston Public Schools

Dear Sir:

On Firday March 3, 1972 a copy of the enclosed letter, concerning the Shrine Circus was brought home by our two elementary age children (one 3rd and one 5th grader). I have given this matter a great deal of thought for over a week. I can not in good conscious let it pass without asking you to explain certain points.

1. Who decided to dismiss that many students from regular classes for a circus?
2. How many of those responsible are Shriners?
3. There are a number of children who receive free milk and lunches, are they expected to have a $1.25 to spend on a circus? If not, will these children be left at school while those who can afford the tickets are enjoying a circus? (This wouldn't be fair would it.) Will there be free tickets available for those who can't afford to pay? If so who will decide who pays and who goes free? Who would pay for the free tickets if they are made available?
4. What arrangements have been made for additional adult supervision? Even if we assumed each room had their own aid, obviously one teacher and one teachers aid to each 25- 30 students would be totally inadequate in case of a fire or other mishap.
5. What is the agenda for children in first - third grades who choose not attend the circus? The teachers and aids will all be at the circus.
6. Will the fourth and fifth graders have regular classes?
7. About how much money will you expect to be collected from this captive audience, does any portion of this money stay in the Sikeston School System?

Please understand, I am not against Shriners or circuses, I do place a very high value on a quality education for my two children. I do feel there should be a proper priority placed on things. I do not mean to insenuate that a few hours of classes being dismissed will cause our Public School system to fall apart at the seams, however, there is something wrong basically when a circus can demand this much time over regular classes for so many students. Quote from letter- "They will be writing stories, drawing pictures, and talking about the circus in classroom activities for days before and after the performance."

Your personal reply would be greatly appreciated.

Respectfully,
Mrs. Tommy Fraser, Jr.
Concerned Parent

PS: We plan to attend the Saturday afternoon performance of the circus with our two children.

SIKESTON PUBLIC SCHOOLS
Sikeston, Missouri

Dear Parent:

On Friday and Saturday, March 24th and 25th the SEMO Shrine Circus returns to Sikeston. We feel that it would be a valuable experience for our small children to attend as a group with their teacher. We do not think it wise to attempt to take ALL elementary children, since transportation facilities are not adequate to get all children to the circus in time to see the opening performance and then back to school in time to catch buses for home, etc. It was decided that grades 1, 2, 3, and Special Education students would go to the circus this year with their teachers. This represents a little over half of our total elementary enrollment or approximately 1300 students. These students will attend the afternoon performance on Friday, March 24 from 1:00 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. We hope every student in grades 1, 2, 3, and Special Education will be able to attend.

Tickets for the circus are $1.25 for school children. You may send this amount to your child's teacher. She will write the child's name on the back of his ticket and keep it for him to avoid loss. Children should bring their ticket money to the teacher no later than Friday, March 17th.

It will not be necessary for children to bring extra money, since the concession stand will not be open during this performance. Only programs and circus novelties will be sold. Intermission time will be cut so that the children can get back to school by the regular dismissal time.

Each classroom in grades 1, 2, 3, and Special Education will be accompanied by the teacher and a teacher aide. The students of these grades will sit in reserved areas for their particular school for purposes of safety and crontrol. If you do not want your 1st, 2nd, 3rd, or Special Education child to go to the circus with his classmates, please inform the teacher or principal by phone or note.

Kindergarten children enrolled in the afternoon session will not be counted absent if the parent will call and notify the Kindergarten Office that the child will attend the circus. Students in grades 4 and 5 will be permitted to attend the circus with a parent, an adult relative, or neighbor (and will not be counted absent) on Friday afternoon, March 24th. Fourth and fifth grade students should bring a note to their teachers stating "who" will pick them up at the school between 12:00 and 12:30 a.m. on Friday, March 24th. Tickets for kindergarten students and students of grades 4 and 5 may be obtained from their teachers.

We think this will be an enjoyable experience for children in the primary grades. They will be writing stories, drawing pictures, and talking about the circus in classroom activities for days before and after the performance.

A small number of tickets for parents are also available at each elementary school. Price $2.50 each.

MATTHEW

One of the most colorful disciples, next to St. Peter, was Matthew, son of Alphaeus. Earlier known as Levi, the tax collector, he changed his life and his name to become a disciple of Jesus. As a Jew who had worked for the despised Romans, he was considered a turncoat. Yet the call of Jesus was met with genuine and eager acceptance.

Matthew brought a level of brilliance not matched by the fishermen and tradesmen in the ranks of the Twelve. His education and advanced business experience lead many to believe that he is the author of the first gospel, the Gospel According to Matthew. It is Matthew who preserved some of the most powerful and convincing messages of Christ, like the Sermon on the Mount. As an Apostle, he used his resourcefulness and dedication to bring the life of Christ to a waiting world.

Taylor, 44, managed Hall's first congressional campaign. He formerly was mayor of Sarcoxie and served as Jasper County and 7th District Republican chairman. He is an automobile dealer at Sarcoxie.

He told a group of legislators and southwestern Missouri friends at a luncheon today he hoped to help roll up a big enough majority in the heavily Republican 7th District to carry Missouri for President Nixon and the entire state ticket.

Coffee Corner by Cherie

It's always suppose to be the women who do all the gossiping, who eat too much, and who always take more than they need when packing to go someplace, but that's just simply not true! I never yet have heard a rumor on someone that when I've raced home to inform Charles of some juicy tidbit he's said, "Oh, that's old, the boys and I discussed all this at coffee two weeks ago." Ha, with men its discussions, but with women it's gossip! Anyway, not only do they talk the most, but they also pack the most and I can prove it. This weekend Charles and one of our esteemed doctors took eight little fellas on an overnight camp out and I kid you not, with what they took they could have made a six month safair to Africa and reveled in luxury. For a week they went about gathering tents, sleeping bags, pots and pans, fishing equipment, first-aid equipment, assorted sized flash lights, (I never could figure out why so many of those) and enough food and clothing for Cox's army. Example: for Charles and Lee for one lunch, one dinner and a breakfast they packed twenty-four biscuits, jelly and butter, five lbs. of potatoes, 1 dozen eggs, coffee, potato chips, candy bars, six dozen cookies, 6 ham sandwiches, steaks, mayonnaise, salt and pepper, lettuce and salad trimmings, corn on the cob, sodas, one lb. of bacon and one of sausage, loaf of bread, and that's all I got to see because I begin to laugh so hard they took the rest of the sacks out in the car and wouldn't let me look in them. Anyway, off they went and since Charles had a doctor traveling with him I figured I didn't have to worry cause he could pick Charles up out of the holes he was bound to fall in and take care of sprains, broken bones and burns without resorting to first reading the Red Cross kit. Anyway, they left and all returned exhausted but otherwise in fine shape and after unloading everything the only bit of food they handed me was one potato. Now, the sixty-four dollar question — do you really think they ate all that, or do you think they threw it out so I couldn't say "I told you so" when they returned home with all those groceries. I haven't figured out yet, but with the price of food these days if I find out they pitched it, they're both going on bread and water for a week!

Air Force To Give More Pilot Ground Training

NEW YORK (AP) — There was little surprise in the simulation industry when the Air Force decided to give more of its pilot training on the ground. "It makes sense," was the general reaction.

Sense? How do you teach a man to fly a plane if he doesn't leave the ground? In the same way you teach a man to be at home on the moon or to run a nuclear power plant that hasn't been built. By creating "reality."

This industry has now developed an eerie capacity to produce substitute environments through the use of computers and videotape. So real are they that those exposed to them are often convinced they are involved in the real thing.

While the real thing often is difficult to monitor, the simulation permits a variety of visual and electronic checks.

Little wonder then that with equipment and operating systems becoming more sophisticated and complex, operators of plant equipment, tankers, earth-moving apparatus, locomotives and even automobiles are taught on simulators.

A relatively small industry until World War II, it is now reliably estimated to amount to $250 million of business a year, worldwide. And as space vehicles and larger aircraft are built, its future seems assured.

About one-third of the total is claimed by the Link Division of The Singer Co., with other large segments held by Canadian Aviation Enterprises, Redifon Ltd., of England, and McDonnell Douglas.

The most dramatic demonstration of the value of simulators was given to the world when a malfunctioning Apollo and its three occupants were brought safely to earth.

Unable to experiment with their craft because of an inability to predict results, the astronauts relied on simulators assembled at the Manned Spacecraft Center in Houston and at other points.

Every situation that was likely to confront the malfunctioning ship was worked out on the simulators. Land-based astronauts went through all the possibilities and then relayed their experiences aloft.

However, in more common situation the simulator is also playing a bigger role. At the very time complex pieces of equipment are being designed, a simulator often is being assembled as well.

An exact replica of the control room of a nuclear power plant, for example, was used to train the men who would operate the real thing. The simulator was coupled to a digital computer programmed with mathematic models for nuclear, thermodynamic and electrical phenomena.

Jews Leaving Russia May Approach 30,000

MOSCOW (AP) — About 5,500 Soviet Jews have emigrated to Israel so far this year, informed sources reported today.

They said if the present rate of departures is maintained, an unofficial target of 30,000 for 1972 could nearly be attained. This total was passed on by unofficial Soviet sources to Israeli officials and is believed to reflect the Kremlin's intentions, they said.

In 1970 an estimated 1,000 Soviet Jews were issued exit visas. Last year, replying to pressure from the Jewish community and foreign criticism, the Soviets allowed 13,905 Jews to leave.

Sources in the Jewish community said Soviet officials are maintaining the ban on emigration of Jewish scientists who have worked in defense-related industry or research.

Sources who follow the question closely said the Soviets appear to have several reasons for their present policy on Jewish emigration.

By allowing larger numbers to leave, the Kremlin is attempting to counter damaging criticism of its handling of the "Jewish question."

Yet the Kremlin rids itself of a lot of troublemakers by insuring that the preponderance of the emigrants are the least educated, the most backward and the most recalcitrant of the Soviet Jews who want to leave.

The problem of Taiwan was the main cause of this.

The joint communique said the two governments decided to raise the level of their diplomatic representatives from charge d'affaires to ambassadors as of today.

The communique said: "The government of the United Kingdom, acknowledging the position of the Chinese government that Taiwan is a province of the People's Republic of China, has decided to remove their official representation from Taiwan on March 13, 1972."

The communique also said: "The government of the United Kingdom recognize the government of the People's Republic of China as the sole legal government of China."

The three-paragraph statement was signed by China's deputy foreign minister, Chiao Kuanhua and Charge d'Affaires J. M. Addis of Britain.

The Peking broadcast said Chiao and Addis, "duly authorized by their respective governments, held negotiations and on March 13, 1972, reached an agreement on the exchange of ambassadors between the two countries."

Literary Curiosity

GLORY. By Vladimir Nabokov. McGraw-Hill. $6.95.

Essentially this novel is a literary curiosity.

Nabokov, who later was to become famous for his works in English, wrote nine novels in the Russian language. They were published between 1926 and 1952. "Glory" was the fifth in the series, coming in 1932, but it is the last to be translated into English.

This is a story about a young man named Martin, who is 16 when the narrative opens. Of Swiss descent, he comes from a broken home. He is one of those uncertain young men of no particular talent. He doesn't know what he wants to do and has little confidence in himself.

So far as the plot is concerned, nothing very vital happens to Martin. He gets away from Russia at the time of the Revolution. He is sent to Cambridge for his education. He has a frustrating experience with a flirtatious young woman named Sonia. He flubs around, seeking an occupation, and finally takes off on a pointless mission into Russia.

TOKYO (AP) — China and Britain have agreed to exchange ambassadors, a joint communique broadcast by Peking announced Monday.

CHANGES IN TOMATO HANDLING AND PROCESSING

To keep pace with the changing methods of tomato product handling and processing, the U. S. Department of Agriculture has proposed a revision of U. S. Standards for Grade Evaluation of Tomatoes for Processing.

The proposal was submitted after a year of study and consultation with the National Canners Association, the American Agricultural Marketing Association, and other growers and processors.

The proposal provides for inspection procedures for determining quality on the basis of color measurement and classification of defects. The method of color measurement would be optional, either by use of USDA's tomato colorimeter or by subjective visual evaluation.

Classification of tomatoes would be in three categories — A, B, and Culls – and would be decided on the basis of color, firmness, evidence of freezing injury and freedom from mold or decay and other defects.

To allow time for testing during the next crop season, comments on the proposal will be received through November 30, 1972. Submit comments to: Hearing Clerk, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Room 112, Administration Bldg., Washington, D.C. 20250. Comments will be available for public review during business hours.

Washington Report by Senator Symington

MISSOURI LEADS VETERANS EMPLOYMENT DRIVE

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Missouri has been a leader in providing jobs for its young citizens who are returning from active duty in Vietnam and elsewhere since the Federal government initiated a major campaign to reduce high unemployment among veterans last June.

We are all aware that far too often returning veterans have been unable to find work because of continued high unemployment – almost 20,000 veteran applications are currently on file with the Missouri State Employment Service.

The employment drive for veterans in Missouri is encouraging, however, and could well serve as a model for other states. This success is due in large part to the interest and commitment of Missourians in business and government.

The National Alliance of Businessmen, which has taken on the task at the federal level of finding jobs for 100,000 Vietnam- era veterans, gave particular praise to the enthusiastic local efforts led by United Utilities, Inc. President Paul Henson in Kansas City and Bank of St. Louis President Jack Minton.

These achievements were given national recognition in a letter to the President from Mr. Harry E. Stroud, NAB Vice President for veterans affairs who wrote:

"We are particularly proud of the successes achieved by the Alliance in Missouri. Kansas City was our first Metro to take the leadership in a major job fair. This was also the first NAB organization to add a Vietnam- era veteran to their staff. Approximately 1300 veterans were hired as a result of the job fair. Based on this successful experience, St. Louis followed with 8000 hires recorded."

The Kansas City program received additional recognition in the NAB publication "Onboard" which described the veterans job fair there– the first jobs fair sponsored by NAB – and the community-wide effort which contributed to its success. The NAB has recommended the Kansas City fair as a model for other cities.

In the four- state NAB region of Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas and Iowa, 2200 of the 3000 jobs found by veterans since June are in Missouri, almost half of the total regional goal of 5000 in Fiscal year 1972.

Although much remains to be done in assuring job opportunities for returning veterans, we can be proud of the progress to date in our state.

The Daily Standard, Sikeston, Mo.

Imagine all those seasoned cooks being overshadowed by a 16 year old MALE in the Pillsbury Bakeoffs! This business of liberation seems to work both ways ... it's just that I've never been very good at fishing or car-tinkering or woodworking, and now what with a man in the Bakeoff

At any rate, young Dennis Batich whipped up a main dish that's high in nutrition and low in cost, also easy for aspiring cooks in the household to master.

For those interested in authentic New Mexican cookery, there's a fantastic new book available, authored by Mrs. Fabiola C. Gilbert. During the next several weeks I'll be using some of the goodies. You might want to try such delicacies as homemade tortillas, chile sauces and native corn dishes. Promises to be good reading, at least. Complete instructions for grinding your own meal accompany recipes.

The second annual Daily Standard Cookbook will appear soon, so if you've a favorite you want to see in print, please address correspondence to Cooking Up, Daily Standard, P. O. Box 100, Sikeston, Mo., 63801.

Oily Secrets

BALTIMORE (AP) — When it comes to cars, Mrs. Jackie DePaul knows a thing or two about their oily secrets.

"Men aren't so smart when it comes to automobiles," Mrs. DePaul says.

For the past 18 years, the white-haired auto expert has worked in the traditionally all-male province of the junkyard. She quickly denies that any motive of women's liberation led her there.

"Men will come in here and be surprised to find a woman," Mrs. DePaul said as she explored the innards of a carburetor. "But mostly I don't mind the kidding.

Mrs. DePaul started repairing cars 26 years ago when her husband, Louis, began working in a garage. Later, the couple decided to start their own auto junkyard and sell auto parts and a few used cars. Mrs. DePaul worked beside her husband to get the family enterprise in full gear.

Now Mrs. DePaul spends most of her time in the business office, selling auto parts and handling bookkeeping.

"You've got to be able to look at a wrecked car and figure just how much you can get out of it before you buy it," she explained.

Mrs. DePaul feels her expertise with a wrench has served her well.

"Most people — especially women — know how to drive a car and that's all. So what happens when they break down a hundred miles from nowhere?

"They're helpless."

Civil War Memories

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — Jannie Peppers Carmichael remembers when Abraham Lincoln was president. She was 5 years old then.

No she is 115 years old but she still remembers the days of slavery when, at the age of 6, she was put in the fields to plow.

"In those early days I used to farm, cut grass, plow with mules and cut tobacco," said Mrs. Carmichael, who moved to Yonkers seven years ago.

"It was hard work but without it I wouldn't be here today," she added. "Seems like I plowed those fields every day of my life.

"And when the snows came up to our knees we didn't really mind it too much cause we could play in it and build big snowmen."

Mrs. Carmichael was born Oct 3, 1856, in Lumberton, N.C., and she remembers the Civil War with "fires, ruined land, houses torn down and people getting killed all over the countryside."

"In my day the boys and girls used to stand by the side of the railroad track and as the train was passing by, we would swing onto one of the cars and go for a ride," she said.

When she saw her first automobile, a Model-T in the early 1900's, she thought it was a wagon. "I didn't know where the mule was," she said.

Her husband, "Doc," died "three years before he was 100." Mrs. Carmichael has four children, seven grandchildren, 27 great- great- grandchildren, 26 great-great- great and 15 great- great- great - great - great - grandchildren.

She moved to Yonkers in 1964 to live with her daughter, Mrs. Mary Graham. "But I'm always longing to go back to North Carolina and I really like traveling," she said.

Mrs. Carmichael has lived through 23 presidents, the invention of the airplane, automobile, color photography, dynamite, telegraph, zipper, washing machine and electric stove.

"Things aren't anything like they used to be," she said, "but people are just about the same,"

Does she have a secret for long life?

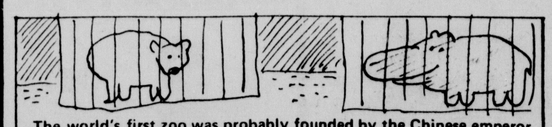
Her age makes her one of the oldest persons living today.

But she is not really old. Every afternoon she walks up and down three flights of stairs to take her daily stroll. In mind and spirit, Mrs. Carmichael is young.



The world's first zoo was probably founded by the Chinese emperor Wu Wang more than 3,000 years ago.

Mrs. Edith Blanton School Board Candidate

March 15, 1922

For a long time the need of a woman on the school board has been felt and many voters have called on Mrs. Edith Blanton, wife of Dr. Frank Blanton, to make the race this time and she has consented. Mrs. Blanton has two small children in school and is deeply interested in school work.

Thirty members of Company K, National Guard of Missouri were "shot" this week for typhoid fever, others will be given their dose later. This is to protect the boys when they are ordered to camp for the maneuvers this summer.

We fail to see why some Democratics papers find fault because the President takes so many trips away from Washington. The Standard has failed to note where he has accomplished anything for the agricultural sections of the country while on duty and we just leave him in Florida or Alaska as in Washington.

Something Must Be Wrong With The Television

in the
Commercial Appeal

WASHINGTON -- It was two days after President Nixon's return from China and the family went into the living room after dinner to watch television.

My wife turned on the set and said, "That's funny. There seems to be something wrong with the TV. I can't get Nixon on the tube."

She switched to another channel and got a private- eye program. "He's not on this channel either."

I rose from my chair and started fiddling with the dials myself. I tried all the channels — no Nixon. "Who has been messing around with this set?" I shouted.

The kids were very defensive. "We didn't touch it," my son said.

My daughters also denied having done anything with it. "Dammit," I said, "we could turn on this set any time day or night on any channel and get a picture of Nixon. Now we can't even get him on educational TV."

Fuming, I called up my TV repairman, George Cury.

George came over with his tool kit. "I can't understand it," I said. "Nixon has been coming in loud and clear on prime time every evening. But tonight all I can get is a movie, Dean Martin and a Lucy rerun."

Mr. Cury said, "Let me try." He flipped the dial back and forth. "You're right. There's something definitely wrong. Maybe it's in the aerial."

Mr. Cury climbed up on the roof and came back down. "The aerial seems to be all right. It's pointing toward China. You say you have had no trouble up until this week?"

POLLY'S POINTERS

Moist Air Cuts Down Static Electricity

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—I am answering Sally's problem regarding a Dacron polyester dress that clings. I have found the following things work satisfactorily for this: Wear a cotton slip under the dress, line a lightweight Dacron with cotton batiste to add body and prevent the cling, use a fabric softener in the final rinse when washing and do not overdry, and try to keep the air moist.

My experience has been that keeping the air moist does the most good. Dacron clings because of static electricity build-up as it rubs itself or a nylon slip and there is less of that in moist air. We have a humidifier on our furnace but, in addition, I keep a pan of water on low heat on the stove all day and night during the winter. As a result we have no more shock from rugs, no clinging clothes, no fly-away hair after washing and fewer colds.—A CHEMISTRY INSTRUCTOR

DEAR GIRLS—If you keep a pan of water on your stove, do set your timer or an alarm clock as a reminder to refill it or there may be a lot of burned pans.—POLLY

Polly's Problem

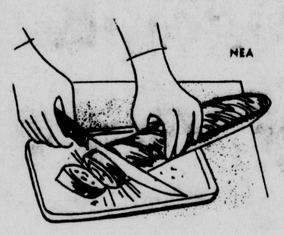
DEAR POLLY—I am giving a bridal shower and would like some ideas for inexpensive souvenirs the girls could pin on their dresses. I bought four dozen little watering cans and ribbon. I do hope some of the readers can help me with suggestions.—MRS. M.

DEAR POLLY—My Pet Peeve is with those companies that send bills without including an addressed return envelope for the payment. It is such a nuisance to have to address an envelope, especially when the needed address is not on the return stub of the bill and you have to look somewhere for it.—MARGARET



DEAR POLLY — I have been using the plastic meat containers that meat is placed in before it is wrapped at the supermarket for throw-away cutting boards. They are great for slicing meat, French bread, etc., and can be thrown away so there is no cleanup afterwards. — J. M. J.

DEAR POLLY — I tried everything that both friends and enemies suggested as a remedy for the terrific odor that developed in my orthopedic shoes but nothing worked. I finally asked my obliging druggist, who gave me some pieces of rock camphor. That night I put some in each shoe, dropped a towel over them and two days later the odor was gone. Hope this helps someone else who might have the same problem.—GENEVIEVE

What's The Law

Tax Bite Takes Priority in Law

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Peter was a firm believer in honesty, but he was too busy embezzling his company's funds to practice it. A real conflict in principals developed, however, when the Internal Revenue Service discovered his predilection for pilfering. Since Peter failed to include the stolen money in his income tax return, he was charged with the federal offense of evading the payment of taxes.

"Under the 16th amendment of the U.S. Constitution," a government attorney pointed out in court, "Congress has the right to levy and collect taxes on income derived from any source whatsoever and to require the reporting of same. And, embezzled funds are taxable."

"That may be true," responded Peter, "but under the 5th Amendment a person can't be compelled to be a witness against himself. If I reported embezzled funds in my income tax returns, not even Perry Mason could save me from going to jail. Consequently, to convict me would be tantamount to finding me guilty of exercising my rights under the 5th Amendment and, obviously, that's unconstitutional."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you jail Peter for being reluctant in reporting embezzled funds in his income tax returns?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that while there may be a conflict in constitutional amendments, it must be resolved, as a practical matter, in favor of the 16th Amendment. For after all, noted the judge, if a person could refuse to report a substantial amount of income under the protection of the 5th Amendment, the income tax system would ultimately fall in shambles with catastrophic effects upon the whole nation. Based upon a 1971 United States District Court Decision)

? Consumer's Question Box ? By Margaret Dana

Q. Having read that common table salt is a deterrent to sleep, I have been trying to cut down on the use of it and substitute monosodium glutamate. Are the properties of MSG much different from sodium chloride? I would be interested to know the chemical formula of MSG -- or is that just a trade name?

A. Monosodium glutamate is not related to sodium chloride. It is derived from a natural compound present in many foods -- its basic name is glutamic acid.

In human bodies monosodium glutamate is produced from glutamic acid in the course of ordinary digestion. The amount used as a seasoning in food preparation, in the home kitchen or commercial kitchen, is only from 1 per cent to 3 per cent of the actual amount normally present in many of our foods, especially meats.

Intensive research by impartial scientists has found MSG not harmful in any way used as a seasoning except to those allergic to it. Other research studies which reported it to be harmful were based on feeding huge does to mice, by injection under the skin. These tests and methods are not valid.

Q. I have been buying hams from a mail order company which states the hams will weigh from 6½ to 8 pounds, and they are all priced the same, no matter how much the actual half- ham finally weighs. This means I often may pay for a pound or so I don't get. Is this legal?

A. I have checked with the Chief of the Office of Weights and Measures at our National Bureau of Standards, and am told the way of selling hams you describe is illegal. Meat must be sold by "net weight." There are no provisions for a range of from 6½ to 8 pounds. Price per "unit," or pound, is also required by the Model Packaging Law.

Q. Since there is so much talk these days of the safety or harm of food additives, and so little agreement, shouldn't there be some way they could be tested so consumers would feel sure they have had impartial and truly scientific evaluation?

This would put a stop to a lot of the guesswork that the news media does, telling us first something is deadly then that it is really O.K.

A. Gaylord Nelson, D. Wisc., has introduced legislation which would do just what you suggest. It would require that food and color additives be tested by a neutral "third-party," competent to study the chemical additives. Testing would not be done by laboratories connected with any firms which developed the chemicals. Any company wanting to introduce a new additive would have to submit its application to the Food and Drug Administration and have it impartially tested before approval.

Consumers who approve of this proposed law might write their Congressmen to tell them so, or write to Sen. Nelson's office, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

Q. What is the difference between salad dressing and mayonnaise? Which has the most calories?

A. Salad dressing is usually a boiled sauce, depending chiefly on flour for thickening with milk and the usual condiments -- mustard, salt, cayenne, etc. (Mayonnaise is not cooked and depends on a large quantity of olive oil for its thickening with egg yolks. Boiled salad dressing is rated as having 25 calories per tablespoon, mayonnaise, 100 per tablespoon.

(Margaret Dana welcomes opinions and questions on buying and will use them in her column as rapidly as research and space permit. Personal answers are impossible due to large volume of mail from readers. Address Margaret Dana Research Center, R.D. 3, Doylestown, Pa. 18901.)

Joe Frazier Story

COME OUT SMOKIN' By Phil Pepe. Coward, McCann & Geoghegan. $6.95.

This is an interesting story on the life of Joe Frazier, the world's heavyweight boxing champion who has won every fight he's had in the professional ring.

Frazier was the champion nobody knew and Pepe pulls no punches in getting across the fact that Joe, before he handed Muhammad Ali his only beating, called Ali, whom he calls Cassius Clay, a loudmouth.

"He (Clay) had it easy in boxing," Frazier tells Pepe. "A white man in his corner, those rich plantation owners to back him and a white lawyer to keep him out of jail and he's going to Uncle Tom me. I have a black man in my corner, my manager and both black and white people backing me."

Pepe goes right through Frazier's career from the time he was the second youngest of 13 children of a sharecropper and his wife in Beaufort, S.C., to his March 8, 1971 victory over Ali.

He tells how Frazier worked out as a youth in a makeshift gym in an old wagon shed, pounding a flour sack filled with sand, and how his subject married at 16 and became the father of a son, and worked eight hours a day in a Philadelphia slaughter house.

The story is one of the most interesting ever written on a boxer.

Water Problem Solution

BENTON — One way to help solve rural water problems is to pump water from water surplus areas to the rural communities, Jim Green told the Scott County Mayors Association last night.

He said the county court should form water districts that would allow rural areas to buy water from larger communities. This would save the rural areas the cost of building a water plant, and would give the town selling the water an extra source of revenue.

Green said the water district plan has been used elsewhere with success.

The mayors discussed the possibility of county planning and zoning. Mayor Louie Hirschowitz of Oran suggested establishing building codes in the county that would apply to construction outside city limits. He said this would prevent uncontrolled growth in the county.

Charity Gambling Defeated

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri House today defeated a proposed constitutional amendment that would have authorized charity gambling and created a state lottery. The vote was 63-89.

Last year the voters soundly defeated another constitutional change that would have allowed parimutuel gambling on horse races. It was sponsored in the legislature last year by the same man who sponsored the gambling proposal today, Rep. Earl Schlef, D-Dellwood.

He said a state lottery would produce about $14 million a year for public education, mental health and a property tax exemption for older Missourians.

Other supporters said bingo and charity gambling already are conducted across the state and the proposal would just change the Constitution to make it legal.

But opponents said it would attract organized crime and would take food out of the mouths of the children of poor persons.

The House passed and sent to the Senate another proposed constitutional change that would let any Missouri county vote on whether to adopt a charter form of government. An election on the proposal would be called by 10 per cent of the voters.

Also sent to the Senate was a constitutional change to exempt household goods, clothes and jewelry from the personal property tax. It also would let second, third and fourth class counties levy a property tax of up to 75 cents on each $100 of assessed valuation. The limit is 50 cents.

Marriage And Divorce Bill

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri House of Representatives wrangled for nearly two hours Tuesday over a so-called uniform marriage and divorce bill, then killed it 52-74.

Sponsors said it would modernize the laws on marraige and divorce but opponents said it would make divorce too easy. Another "no fault" divorce bill died in the House last year.

The House advanced a bill setting up a statewide milk inspection for Grade "A" milk, the kind that is sold for home consumption.

It would grant a 12-man board authority to contract with inspectors for local health units. The House defeated an effort to put the system under the Department of Agriculture.

Also advanced was a bill reducing from .15 of 1 per cent to .10 of 1 per cent the amount of alcohol in the driver's blood denoting intoxication. There was no debate as the House approved that one. It is similar to one advanced in the Senate Tuesday.

Peace Talks To Start Again

PARIS (AP)- The Communist delegations to the Vietnam peace talks agreed today to a U. S. South Vietnamese proposal to meet Thursday for the first time in three weeks.

The United States refused to meet on Feb. 17 because of anti-American Vietnam peace meeting being held that week at Versailles. As soon as the conference resumed Feb. 24, the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong walked out in protest against American bombing of North Vietnam.

The United States and South Vietnam refused to meet for the next two weeks because of the Communist walkout and "the tone and content of recent official announcements from Hanoi," which were sharply critical of President Nixon.

Man Charged in Crash

ADVANCE — A Daisy man was charged by the highway patrol with following too closely in a two-vehicle mishap at 8:10 a.m. Tuesday at the junction of highways 25 and 91 in Advance.

A 1972 Ford traveling south, driven by Marline Wiseman, 37, of Advance, had stopped for a red light, the patrol said, and was struck in the rear by a southbound 1963 Chevrolet truck driven by Carl J. McCauley, 70, of Daisy, who was arrested.

Arrested For Trespassing

New Madrid Aldermen Races

NEW MADRID — Jonathan "John Gordon" Brown has declared his candidacy for ward one alderman in the April 4 city election opposing Jackson Clay Hunter.

Incumbent Bob Blom has filed for re-election as ward two alderman. He is opposed by Samuel "Bo" Hunt.

It is reported Mayor Robert Riley is expected to file today for re-election. No candidates have filed for the ward three alderman seat held by W. R. Phillips Jr.

Charleston HUD Arrangement

CHARLESTON — Elmer Smith, director of the Kansas City region of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, will be in Charleston Thursday to sign an annual arrangement with the city.

Charleston is one of a few towns in the country to be designated an Annual Arrangement City. Under the annual arrangement designation, Charleston will sign yearly agreements for financing the HUD programs it needs. The arrangement will permit coordination of urban renewal, public housing, and water and sewer improvement programs.

In addition to the formal signing of the annual arrangements contract, Charleston officials and citizens will officially kick-off their $4.3 million urban renewal project. There will be a ribbon cutting and demolition of the first sub-standard structure in the project at 2 p.m. Thursday.

Gov. and Mrs. Warren E. Hearnes are expected to attend.

Following the activities in Charleston, Smith will attend the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission meeting at the Holiday Inn in Sikeston at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

Free Book Bill

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Free textbooks would be provided by the state for all students in public, private or parochial schools under a bill passed by the Missouri Senate today and sent to the House.

Although the bill caused a long argument earlier, it was passed today on a 24-8 vote with no debate.

Also passed and sent to the House, 24-7, was a bill that would permit a circuit judge to transfer an incorrigible juvenile from the boys or girls state training schools at Boonville and Chillicothe to adult penal institutions.

Sen. Ike Skelton, D&Lexington, said such transfers are essential to prevent incorrigible inmates from disrupting the institutions. He said assaults, escapes and disciplinary problems have increased tremendously since the Supreme Court ruled last year the Board of Training Schools could not authorize such transfers without a court hearing.

An emergency clause to make the bill effective immediately on enactment failed to pass by one vote.

Other bills passed and sent to the House today included measures to:

Let 18-year-olds and others vote for president and vice president after 30 days residence in the state instead of the present 60 days.

Cut the interest on delinquent sales tax accounts from 3 per cent to 1 per cent a month.

Add kidnaping of hostages to the general kidnaping law, with penalties ranging up to life in prison or death.

Increase the "fate pay" of released state prisoners from $25 to $100 plus a new suit and a bus ticket home.

Raise the pay of second class county sheriffs $2,000 a year to $16,000 and cut out some of the present fees.

Let Jackson and St. Louis County levy a single tax to use for either public hospitals or community health services, without increasing the present 38-cent total rate.

Urban Renewal

CHARLESTON — Prior to the meeting of the city council last night, a public hearing on the Neighborhood Development program was held with Tanna Parish, Urban Renewal director, explaining the program to 20 residents, who either live in or own property in the five sections of the city which have been designated as areas for the program.

Parish told the group an estimated $185,000 will be available through the Department of Housing and Urban Development this year for the acquisition and tearing down of vacant and condemned structures in the five sections.

Under this program property owners can receive three per cent loans on up to $12,000 with a 20-year limitation for rehabilitation of their property. In addition, owner- occupants with incomes of under $3,000 may receive a $3,500 grant to rehabilitate their homes.

A resolution to advertise the 1972 street paving program was adopted by the council. Included will be portions of Carroll, Davis, Helena, Lafayette, Ninth, Sherman, Shelby, Tom Brown, and Warren streets. Two blocks of Bird Avenue from Main Street to the city limits will be included in the advertisement for bids.

An ordinance amending the election polling places was passed. Voting in the April 4 election will not be by precincts. Ballots may be cast at the armory or city hall.

A request from the Molly French Garden club for the annual Spring Clean Up March 27 - April 7 was granted.

A bid of $685 for a Master's compactor was accepted as was a $727 bid from Carson's for a fogger.

Classroom Space Sought By Board

An expected increase of 78 students next year at the junior high school has forced the school board to search for extra classrooms space.

The board discussed renting the Walker supermarket building on Moore street, yesterday, but will wait until next month to make a final decision. The building is owned by Richard McDougal, himself a candidate for the school board.

Board members said they would wait until the lease meets their specifications and until refurbishing costs are known. The board is seeking a one-year lease with four one-year options. The rent will be nearly $3,000 per year with the cost of renovation about $2,000. The renovation will include the addition of one washroom and temporary partitions to create classroom space.

Sam Harbin, superintendent of schools, told the board that a mobile classroom now at the school will be moved to Lee Hunter school. Thirty-three students within Lee Hunter's district are attending Southwest school this year, Harbin said. The mobile classroom will give Lee Hunter the extra space needed to bring the students back to Lee Hunter, he added.

The board adopted a code of conduct for students, faculty and staff. The code is a complication of existing rules and regulations that attempts to remove confusion from existing school rules.

Roger Sherman principal of the high school, told the board the north Central evaluation committee report on the Sikeston school system has been received. The report will not be released to public until the middle of April, after the board meets with Neil Aslin, head of the north central committee.

Sherman said, however, that he was pleased with the report. He said it showed the school's strengths and weaknesses. He added the committee's recommendations are sound, although some probably will not be followed for lack of finances.

The board also reset the last day of school from June 3 to May 26. The calendar adjustment was made because the school did not close as many days as usual this year. Graduation will be May 29.

Five Seek School Posts

NEW MADRID — Five candidates have filed to fill two positions on the New Madrid County R-1 enlarged school board in the April 4 school election.

Filing deadline was 6 p.m. Tuesday.

Board members seeking re-election for a three- year term are Paul "Jack" Mahar, of Marston, and Hoyte Butler, of Parma. They are opposed by Dick Spitzer Jr., of Parma, T. B. Howard, of Howardville, and Metts Hawkins, of Portageville.

Seven Named To Delta Board

Seven have been elected to represent Scott county on the board of directors of the Missouri Delta Council.

They were Charles D. Matthews, Clem Beal, and Jackson Hunter, all of Sikeston; Jimmie Emerson, Morley; Presiding County board Judge Les Lankford of Chaffee; Roy Procter, Jr., Benton and K.M. Streeter of Painton.

These directors will join representatives from 10 other counties on the board.

Burglary Charge

NEW MADRID — John H. Eaves, 18, rural Lilbourn, was bound over to circuit court under $500 bond after waiving preliminary hearing on burglary and larceny charges, before Magistrate Judge Leo Hedgepeth.

Eaves is charged with breaking into Twister Noe's Store in Lilbourn March 1 and stealing six rolls of pennies, other change and one knife, with a total value of $10.

Eaves is awaiting circuit court action on two additional charges of burglary and larceny in connection with breakins and thefts in January of Tip's Hardware and Sickrey's Department Store in Lilbourn.

Ricky Lewis was given 30 days suspended jail sentence and placed on six months probation in addition to $45 fine on common assault charge.

Kim Stucker charged with destruction of property was fined $25, ordered to make restitution and given 30 days suspended jail sentence with six months probation.

Paying fines for speeding were Julius Jackson, $75; Michael Allen Barnes, $35; Ronald Ray Lowman, $35; and Billy Gene Edgar, $25.

Wendell Johnnie Lentz was levied $36 fine on charges of careless and imprudent driving and no Missouri chauffeur license.

Levied $35 fines each were Rufus Arnett Ayers, failure to stop at stop signal; Benjamin Manes, careless and imprudent driving; Richard Doyle Richmond, careless and imprudent driving; and Cora Lee Smith, failure to yield right-of-way. Marvin Hayes Jr. forfeited $25 bond on careless and imprudent driving charge.

Assessed $15 fines each were John Newton Crockett, operating vehicle with expired truck license; and Bonds Welding Supply Co., illegal inter-state hauling.

George Wallace Landslide Win

Miami Primary

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The Democratic presidential campaign has been scrambled by a Florida primary in which Gov. George C. Wallace won by a landslide, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey claimed victory in second place and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie suffered a drubbing.

Humphrey said today that Wallace is now "a formidable opponent ... no doubt about that" but predicted the governor would never win the Democratic presidential nomination.

"I'll get it," Humphrey said in an interview on NBC's "Today" show.

Wallace, who rode to victory on his opposition to school busing and his pledges to bear down on crime and tax the wealthy, also appeared on the show and said he felt the small showing of his Democratic rivals in the primary was "a blow" to all of them.

School busing was the top issue of the campaign. The Florida voters, in a straw ballot which has no legal effect, overwhelmingly registered opposition to court-ordered school busing to achieve integration. They also voted strongly in support of quality education for all.

Wallace's victory of 42 per cent of the Democratic vote gave him 75 of the state's 81 delegates to the party's national convention; Humphrey won 6 with his 18 per cent.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington finished third with 13 per cent, ahead of Muskie with his 9 per cent, and vowed to win the April 4 Wisconsin primary.

New York Mayor John V. Lindsay won 7 per cent—barely edging Sen. George S. McGovern for fifth place after a heavy investment here in time and money. McGovern took 6 per cent.

In the Republican primary, President Nixon swept to victory with 87 per cent of the vote and easily won all 40 delegates to the GOP National Convention.

—Muskie: The preprimary frontrunner, he suffered a second successive blow after last week's lackluster victory in New Hampshire. The primaries in Illinois next Tuesday and later in Wisconsin now loom as crucial.

—Humphrey: Fighting to overcome a "loser" image, the former vice president got the boost he sought when he bypassed New Hampshire to concentrate here. He appears to be Muskie's main rival in Wisconsin.

—Wallace: The Alabama governor got the heavy vote he sought and will now enter many other primaries, both in the South and in Northern states such as Wisconsin, Indiana and Maryland.

"I believe I have as good a chance as anyone to win the party nomination," he said at his Orlando headquarters.

Humphrey won his six delegates in a district including heavily Jewish Miami Beach, where half the population is over 65. "Among the progressive Democrats," the 1968 nominee said, "I am the leader."

The top six Democrats who ran in Florida, including Wallace, are entered in the Wisconsin primary. McGovern is challenging Muskie for many Illinois delegates, while former Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota opposes the Maine senator in that state's presidential preference vote.

More than 1.6 million Floridians, three-fourths of them Democrats, voted in the state's first presidential preference primary. Previous contests have been for delegates only.

Wallace swept ahead with the first votes from his rural, north Florida strongholds and captured every one of the state's 67 counties, including populous Dade which encompasses the city of Miami and surrounding suburbs.

"This is my message to the national politicians," the Alabamian said as he hailed his larger-than-expected victory and the massive vote, nearly 3 to 1, for the antibusing proposal.

The proposal had been fought by Florida Gov. Reubin Askew and opposed by presidential candidates Humphrey, Muskie, Lindsay and McGovern.

Muskie, in a somber mood, assailed Wallace as "a demagogue of the worst sort" and vowed to fight him elsewhere around the nation. "We'll win some battles, we'll lose some battles," the Maine senator said.

His crushing defeat seemed certain to spur a reassessment, already under way, of his campaign plan of running in most of the 24 primaries, a strategy which Muskie has said in recent days may have spread him too thin while his opponents selected their best opportunities.

He is committed to the Illinois and Wisconsin races as well as the next major tests April 25 in Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, and May 2 in Ohio. Aides have indicated he may limit some of his later primary activities.

Lindsay, calling Wallace's victory "deeply disturbing," said he will run in Wisconsin and Massachusetts and "in every state where Wallace is an issue or a threat."

McGovern, who never figured to do very well here, spent only limited funds and time while preparing for the Illinois and Wisconsin races.

In the GOP contest, Nixon polled 87 per cent of the vote to 9 per cent for Conservative Rep. John Ashbrook of Ohio and 4 per cent for Liberal Rep. Paul N. McCloskey of California.

File For Congress

$40 Taken In Holdup

WARDELL — An attendant at the West End service station was held up at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday by a young man with a .22 caliber pistol, the highway patrol said.

The patrol said the armed robber took about $40 from the attendant and escaped in a car with other companions.

Employ Counsel Time Granted To Nesby

CHARLESTON -- Clifford Nesby, 36, Charleston, was given until Thursday to employ counsel to represent him on a manslaughter charge by Magistrate T. J. Brown, Jr.

The charge was filed in connection with the March 4 death of Charles Desmute, 87, Charleston. Nesby is being held in the Mississippi county jail in lieu of $2,500 bond.

Jerry Woodrow Warren was given a five- day suspended sentence and placed on six month probation on a common assault charge. Condition of his probation is that he obey the law and pay costs of $16.50.

Fines of $36 each were assessed Charles Lee McMillan and Benny Joe Evans on a charge of going beyond 25 miles on a local license.

Speeding charges and fines included Floyd Mason, $26; Gary Wayne Scott, $29; and Donald Lee Hubbard, $26.

Kenneth Ray Moore, charged with public intoxication and improper registration, paid $10 fines on each charge together with $14.50 costs.

Warren Gene Spiva paid a $21 fine for improper parking, involved in accident.

Wayne Lee Turner and Roberta Coleman each paid $21 fines for failure to have an operator's license. $16 fines each were levied against John Michael Horn, Mo. resident with out of state operator's license and Frances O. Fox, out- of-state vehicle license while a Missouri resident. A $27.75 fine was given Richard E. Layton for having an out of state operator's license. Phillip Wayne McCuiston paid a $21 fine for out- of -state license.

Eugene H. Hooper paid a $16 fine and Calvin Lynn Presley paid a $21 fine for expired truck license. A $16 fine was assessed Guyland Sam Dean for expired vehicle license.

Judge Brown ruled Winford Leon Rutledge had been properly charged with the commissinon of crime in Illinois and had fled from Justice. Rutledge told the court he no longer desired to avoid extradition and was returned to Illinois in custody of the sheriff of Pulaski county.

Judgment of $105.91 at six percent interest and $10 costs was awarded Willard and James Bomar, doing business as Bomar Equipment Company in an account suit brought against Donnie Ditto.

Household Finance Corporation was given judgment in a promissory note suit seeking $981.86 at six percent interest from date of judgment and court costs of $15 from Willie D. and Betty Menzies.

Deadline Set for Saturday

The election will be April 4.

Five candidates have filed for two open seats. They are Mrs. Paul "Claudette" Holden, Richard McDougal, Louis Wiggins, Lee Shell, and incumbant Phil Barkett. A sixth candidate, incumbant Lee Austin Bowman, filed earlier, but has since withdrawn.

UNITED IRELAND

An organization has been formed in New York called United Ireland. Its purpose is to win civil rights for the Catholic minority there through peaceful means, and to work for the ultimate reunification of the country.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY

Every country has its saint, under whose care it is supposed to be. Not really, you know, but that is what is called tradition. The English call theirs St. George, the Welsch have St. David, the Scot clings to St. Andrew, the French call it St. Denys, and the saint dearest to the Irish people is St. Patrick.

His day is March seventeenth. It is not known wether he was born in Scotland or in a country known as Armoric Gaul. The year of his birth is unknown. He is thought to be the son of a man named Calpurnius.

When St. Patrick was sixteen, about the year 403, he was taken captive with several others, conveyed in a boat to Ireland, and sold as a slave. He worked hard, and was a great religious man. There were many snakes in Ireland, and he drove them out of the land.

He died a very old man on March 17, 465, and for his good work he has become the patron saint of Ireland.

JACKSON'S PLACE IN HISTORY

Andrew Jackson holds such a special place in American history that the counties, cities and streets bearing his name are beyond count.

He was born 205 years ago today and Memphis, celebrating the 153rd anniversary of its founding, is calling attention to the anniversary with good reason. He was literally a founder, one of three partners who owned the land and laid off the frontier town in 1819.

He was also a founder as one of the two representatives of the United States in purchasing from the Chicasaw Nation title to North Mississippi, West Tennessee and Western Kentucky the year before.

One of the most familiar works of fine art in Memphis is the marble bust which was placed in Court Square, in the heart of the city, more than a century ago. It was moved out of the weather to the main corridor of the courthouse in 1910, where a wreath was placed yesterday.

His is a name that stands especially for opportunity open to the common man under methods established by. the United States. He was born in such obscurity that there is still an argument about the location. He was an orphan at 14 and worked in a saddlery shop, but he lifted himself to the status of school teacher and then to the legal profession, and eventually to the Tennessee Supreme Court.

His place in history is based on this same rise from humble beginnings, for he was the first president elected from outside of the upper classes of Virginia and Massachusetts.

This was the man who had first-hand knowledge of the Indian country and who considered the bluff against the big river as the most likely site for a metropolis. We honor his memorable accomplishments today.

VIEWPOINT: THE GAMES LEADERS PLAY

By Jack Stapleton Jr.

Two weeks ago, I had 800 million enemies.

Now, I have 800 million friends.

And I am angry.

The anger has been growing more intense during the past few days as picture followed picture from far-away China; a beaming Nixon shaking hands with a beaming Mao Tse-tung; a smiling Nixon toasting a graciously bowing Chou En-lai — the papers, the news magazines and my television set seemed crowded with laughing Nixons, chuckling Maos and wryly grinning Chou En-lais.

How warm and witty and friendly they all were.

And the Chinese people! How friendly and kind and thoughtful and dedicated and happy with their lot.

That's fine. To tell you the truth, I'm glad to have 800 million new friends. I am grateful to Mr. Nixon for having the courage to give them to me — and me to them. And I am delighted that Mao and Chou went along with the deal.

How easy it all was.

Yet for 20 years I have been taught to hate and fear the Chinese people and their leaders. The people were automatons drudging away in a backward ant-like society led by power-mad dictators who dreamed of sweeping across Asia with their hordes and bringing America to her knees.

For 20 years my leaders have been teaching me that. With my own ears, I have heard American Presidents warn of the Chinese Communists; I have heard Secretaries of State speak almost hysterically of the dangers of China; and I have heard members of the United States Congress warn of the evil designs of the People's Republic of China. And these same leaders have led me into wars in Korea and Vietnam to preserve democracy and contain these bloody-handed Red tyrants.

For the same 200 years, Mao and Chou were teaching their 800 million people to hate and fear me. I was a running dog of imperialism, bent on destroying their revolution and ruling them again through corrupt capitalist warlords like Chiang Kai-shek. So they marched off into battle to kill me and mine.

And how easy all that was, too.

But now, overnight, our leaders have decided that I and a quarter of the human race will be friends again.

Primarily because it suits their purposes.

I'm not positive what their purposes are. I would guess that Mao and Chou want my friendship to worry Taiwan and Japan and to make the Russians think twice before attacking China from the west.

I would guess that Mr. Nixon is giving them my friendship in hopes of playing off Peking against Moscow, thus maintaining the split in the Communist bloc. I'm not sure, but he might even be thinking of next November's election.

But these are the games leaders play. Containment, encirclement, blocs, splits — the fascinating game of geopolitics. And, being leaders, they play to win. I believe they play for themselves to win — not for me.

For if I die on some unpronounceable battlefield, I have lost forever. But they have only lost another of their millions of pawns. For them, the game goes on and on and on.

Yet this is not so much what angers me. I understand the fascination of the game. If I were a leader, I would probably play it, too.

What angers me is how easy it was.

How easily they manipulated me into hating and fearing when that served their purpose. How easily they now maneuver me into liking and admiring when that serves their purpose. How easily — almost contemptuously — they turn my emotions on and off like hot and cold water faucets.

So I am angry with myself. Okay, this time I'll play. This time I'll give and accept goodwill and friendship. But when they again ask for my hatred and fear, God give me the spirit to reject their games.

How very hard that will be.

MORE VANISHING AMERICANA

Hundreds of years ago the English bulldog was bred for bull-baiting, in which the dog would provoke the bull by biting its ear and holding on for dear life. But bull-baiting has long since vanished, and the bulldog survives only as a house pet. Something similar may be happening to the sturdy sled dogs of the Artic. Visitors to Alaska and northern Canada who expect to see sleds pulled by teams of huskies are likely to be disappointed. To an ever-increasing extent, the dog sled is being replaced by the snowmobile.

Ned Nusunginya, 73, used to deliver mail by dog sled between Barrow and Kotzebue, Alaska -- a trip of 340 miles that took about a month, including stops along the way. Asked if he still had a dog team, Nusunginya told a National Geographic reporter (October 1971): "No, I get around by snowmobile now. I've seen enough dogs in my life, and almost always from the wrong end."

So it appears that the dog sled is going the way of the stagecoach. Before long, the only way to see the dogs in action may be to attend the North American Dog Sled Championship, to be held this year in Fairbanks starting Friday, March 17. Memories of the sled dog are being kept alive in other ways, too. At the Arctic Village, Alaska, school, "Dick and Jane" readers were scrapped because the Eskimo children were unfamiliar with the urban scenes they depicted. Now they read about parka-clad Bill -- "Run, Bill, run!" -- pursued by a husky.

Lentils and split peas may be boiled or baked without soaking, if desired, according to U. S. Department of Agriculture home economists. Use 2-1/2 cups of water for each cup of lentils. Oven cooking is recommended for split peas, unless they are to be pureed, because they break up easily when cooked by other methods. For each cup of split peas, add 1-1/2 cups water. WHAT TAX LAWS TELL US

In the House a group of Democrats is preparing a tax reform bill that would produce seven billion dollars in revenues and in the Senate four Democrats, including Missouri's Eagleton, are sponsoring a bill that would add 15 billion to the federal treasury. Neither of these measures would raise taxes for most Americans; rather, they would end the more egregious tax favoritism that has been bestowed on corporations and wealthy individuals.

This is an endeavor that ought to attract support readily from both sides of the aisles and from the Administration, too. After all, the elimination of favoritism would be equitable, it would help restore confidence in government, it would produce badly-needed revenues and it would help control inflation. Notwithstanding all those attractive features, tax reform has not been endorsed by the White House; if anything it appears to oppose efforts to correct inequities.

But any tax system that permits 112 Americans to have incomes in excess of $200,000 each and yet pay no income taxes, that makes special concessions to the extractive industries, that treats income from investments more generously than earned income and that provides corporations with handy devices, such as the investment tax credit and the accelerated depreciation allowance by which to reduce tax liability substantially is plainly in need of reform. Tax favoritism, rather than so-called full employment spending, helps run the federal budget up to a deficit of 25 billion dollars.

Our tax code, especially as amended in 1969 and again in 1971, stands as a voluminous testament to the triumph of special interests over the public interest, and as an index of sources of power in this country. Is Congress willing to let such a record be the measure of our system? — Post-Dispatch.

WARNING TO MISSOURI

The stunning defeat of a 2.5 billion dollar transportation bond issue in New York on Tuesday is a portent that Missouri backers of a proposed bond issue for roads, rapid transit, and airports must take into serious account in their planning. The New York issue for highways and mass transit, lost 2,400,000 to 1,500,000. It had the all-out support of Gov. Rockefeller, Mayor Lindsay, both major politicai parties, chambers of commerce, good government groups and labor unions.

Early analysis suggested the voters rebelled against The Establishment. The principal opponent, labor mediator Theodore Kheel, said the issue was rejected because voters opposed the earmarking of 1.5 billion dollars for highways. A majority of New York City voters turned against the proposal even though part of the money would have been used to save the 30-cent subway fare, which now may rise to 45 cents.

Mr. Rockefeller, who staked his prestige on the outcome, said the defeat had struck "a mortal blow at mass transit and highwav projects," and no doubt Gov. Hearnes and other Missourians will be inquiring into just what happened, with the objective of avoiding a similar result in this state. That should be a first assignment for Frank P. Begley, who has been appointed to direct the drive for the Missouri proposal.

Mr. Hearnes apparently has not decided whether to take the Missouri proposal to the Legislature in January or begin an inititative petition campaign, or how to put the matter before the state's voters (it could be at a special election, the August primary or the general election next November). We tend to favor the initiative route, and submission at the November balloting when a large turnout of voters can be expected.

The $700,000,000 Missouri proposal would provide $475,000,000 for highways, $150,000,000 for rapid transit and smaller amounts for busses, bridges and airports. It is a lot of money, and backers throughout the state should complete plans and start an educational campaign as soon as feasible. After all, the state gave overwhelming approval to a $150,000,000 water pollution control bond issue a few weeks ago. That success ought to be the model for the new campaign, not the defeat in New York.—Post-Dispatch.

IRREPLACEABLE ASSET

When we read about the population explosion, the first thought that comes to mind is what affect additional tens of millions of people will have on the environment. Will there be enough air, water and soil to go around? Other important questions, that have received far less thought, concern expanded production and distribution facilities and provision for millions of new jobs every year -- jobs ready and waiting for young adults as they turn to making a living. These are the tasks of what we are pleased to call "business". It is up to business to produce and distribute the luxuries and necessities required by a growing population -- and business is the primary source of jobs.

In the midst of this gigantic cycle is the modern mass retail distribution system – a system that has grown with the country from the open cracker - barrel days to the complex, computerized, highly - competitive merchandising marvel of today. The house organ of one of the largest retail institutions in the country, a chain store concern operating hundreds of stores throughout the nation, devoted a considerable portion of a year - end issue to the changes in its operations during the past decade. During the 60's, competition, changing consumer tastes and the urge to improve service led the company into widely diversified merchandising innovations. These changes in the company's operations have resulted in almost doubling its size. The number of "associates" -- the people working for the company -- has increased from 40,000 in 1960 to about 100,000 in 1969.

None of this growth and none of the new jobs that were created each year came automatically. They were the result of hard business decisions and risk taking in the hope of a modest profit. Such is the way the competitive, free market system works. This system has demonstrated its ability to grow with the country. It is an irreplaceable asset.

A HOLIDAY ANYHOW

Few Americans were ever taught that George Washington's birthday fell on Feb. 21, but that is when it will be observed this year, as part of the new Monday holiday system enacted by Congress. It is a fine system for purposes of rest and recreation, but perhaps not for historical tradition. More school children learned the date of Washington's birthday from the fact that school was let out than ever learned it from books. Even so, the date is relative. Washington was born on Feb. 11, 1732, under the Julian calendar. The date became Feb. 22 when England and its colonies turned to the Gregorian calendar in 1752. We doubt if the change ever bothered George Washington much but, then, it was not a holiday for him. — Post Dispatch.

TAX MONEY FOR THOUGHT CONTROL

The government is envolved in many areas where it has no business to be. One of the most recent and most alarming of these unjustified activities is research into the control of human begavior.

Congressman Cornelius Gallagher of New Jersey has uncovered evidence that millions of dollars of tax money have been spent for this purpose. The Department of Health, Education and Welfard, for example, has given out 70,000 grants and contracts for behavioral research; an additional 10,000 have come from the Manpower Administration in the Labor Department. According to the General Accounting office, the Defense Department, the National Aerouautics and Space Administration and the Atomic Energy Commission also sponsor behavioral projects.

The dangers in public financing of such projects are clearly shown by the work of B. J. Skinner, who received $283,000 from the National Institutes of Mental Health.

Dr. Skinner is best known for his book 'Beyond Freedom and Dignity,' which denies man's freedom to choose. Dr. Skinner essentially believes that men should be conditioned to behave in certain ways. He has called for government controls over the way men think and live.

The extent of government involvement in behavior control has yet to be uncovered. Congressmen Gallagher and Frank Horton of New York have co-authored legislation to set up a Select Committee on Privacy, Human Values and Democratic Institutions. Its first major undertaking would be to look into the government's involvement in behavior control research.

Then it will be up to the people and their elected representatives to see that government is kept completely out of any attempts at mind control.

NEW YORK (AP) — One never begins to grow up until he learns how to say no—and stick to it.

Until then he merely is a chance-buffeted chip riding the waves of mindless change in life. He matures only when he achieves a sense of self-direction.

You achieve that only by rejecting other directions that lead you the wrong way.

Here are a few invitations which, if accepted, lead usually to nothing but trouble:

"Let's play hooky today. I'll write a note to the teacher to excuse you, and you write one for me."

"Why make a big debate out of it? Why don't we just go ahead and get married—and see for ourselves whether we can get along?"

"If you think there's a robber hiding under the bed, why don't you just look there and see."

"Yes, this is our old family album. Do you want me to tell you what each of my relatives was like?"

"Shall I tell you what I really think of you, Gerald?"

"So this is what a cocktail lounge looks like! You look like a man a girl can trust. Do you want to buy me just a teentsyweentsy drink?"

"This joker must think he can bully you, Bob. Shall I hold your coat while you show him a thing or two?"

"Do you want me to help you do the dishes?"

"Here's an opportunity to show the whole regiment what kind of a man you are, private. Are you ready?"

"Well, then, do you want me to pull all your teeth and get the whole business over with once and for all?"

"I don't see any rocks. Go ahead and dive in."

"I just put in a tiny smidgen of garlic, so eat all you want."

"Would you rather put your money where your mouth is?"

"They say it's good for people like us to talk over their marriage now and then, John. If I tell you why I married you, will you tell me why you married me—truthfully?"

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — President Nixon has often boasted of how he is conquering the crime wave. Unfortunately, the facts are that the conviction rate for federal felons has plummeted during his administration.

Even Nixon's most publicized targets, the drug offenders and draft dodgers, are being convicted at a lesser rate than they were under Lyndon Johnson.

Since 1968, the last year of the Johnson administration, there has been a resounding 20.2 per cent drop in the conviction rate for violators of narcotics laws, and the rate for marijuana pushers and users has fallen 18.9 per cent.

Selective Service Act convictions are off 30.9 per cent.

These are just a few examples from an unpublicized two-volume study, entitled "Federal Crimes and Sentences," by the administrative branch of the federal courts.

The bureaucrats who prepared the review chose the 17 federal crimes which most frequently come before federal judges.

In all cases but one, the conviction rate is down since 1968. Overall, prosecutions are up but a smaller proportionate share of the offenders are being convicted.

The astounding dip in the guilty rates of draft dodgers and drug offenders may be explained by changing public attitudes.

Postal theft convictions, for example, are off 10.1 per cent, bank robbery convictions have fallen 14.6 per cent, and convictions for assaults are down 12.2 per cent.

Experts have offered us a number of theories to explain the falling conviction rates. One suggestion is that the Nixon administration has simply failed to hire enough competent prosecuting attornies.

Three-Day Delay

The Justice Department, after taking three days to come up with their explanation, pointed to a "revolution in defence services."

"We're also bringing more cases than ever before," Associate Deputy Attorney General Donald E. Santarelli told my associate Joseph Spear. "And we're trying the harder cases."

Here is a complete list of the 17 offenses included in the study and the percentage change in the conviction rate for each:

Auto theft, down 7.3 per cent; interstate theft, down 8.9 per cent; transportation of forged securities, down 4.0 per cent; forgery, down 6.5 per cent; counterfeiting, down 5.2 per cent; bank embezzlement, down 7.2 per cent; postal fraud, down 6.5 per cent; postal theft, down 10.1 per cent.

Also bank robbery, down 14.6 per cent; assault, down 12.2 per cent; weapons and firearms, up 2.1 per cent; marijuana tax act, down 18.9 per cent; narcotic drug violations, down 20.2 per cent; escape, down 2.4 per cent; bail jumping, down 12.7 per cent; income tax violations, down 6.6 per cent; selective service acts, down 30,9 per cent.

Junk Parade

Abashed auto makers have had to send out 24.9 million notices recalling potentially unsafe cars since 1966. But ominously, seven million of the autos have never been repaired.

Some of these seven million have been junked since 1966, but the maioritv are still loose on the highways, hazards on wheels.

A new Department of Transportation tally shows that 22.6 million of the cars recalled through 1971 are American- made, and the remaining 2.3 million are imported. In all, Detroit and foreign companies had to advertise 906 different campaigns to get the autos back to the shop.

The parade of clanking, coughing, sputtering autos included cars with stuck accelerators, contaminated brake fluid and exhausts that leaked deadly carbon monoxide into passenger compartments.

By and large, these were fixed and put safely back on the road. But many of the notices never reached the car owners, some warning letters got to motorists who did not heed them, and a few cars came out of the repair shops uncorrected.

Because the recall campaigns haven't been complete and because state inspection systems are inadequate, an estimated 25 per cent of all cars on the road have bad brakes.

Some wonder, therefore, that the number of Americans killed in traffic accidents since 1933 is about to go over the 1.5 million mark, that 52 million have been seriously injured and that property damage now totals $179 billion (b).

Yet, despite this motorized mayhem, the Department of Transportation has ignored a 1966 federal law saying that, by 1968, it "shall establish uniform federal...safety standards applicable to all used motor vehicles."

NASA Decides To Boost Space Shuttle With Solid Propellants

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Aeronautics Space Administration decided today that the booster stage of the Space Shuttle will be powered by solid-propellant rocket motors rather than by liquid propellants.

The agency announced also that the booster stage will be recoverable, and that the chosen design will have engines of both the booster and the orbiter stage firing at launch, rather than in sequence.

Dr. James C. Fletcher, NASA administrator, said the decision means that the shuttle will cost less to develop than was forecast in January.

He said the development cost now is estimated at $5.15 billion, compared to the earlier estimate of $5.5 billion.

The booster decision settled the principal remaining question left open for further study when President Nixon announced in January a decision to proceed with development of the shuttle.

"The decision was based on the lower cost and lower technical risks shown in the studies for the solid rocket system," Fletcher said.

NASA said it will issue invitations to industry later this week to submit proposals for design and development of the space shuttle.

The decision also probably means that the Cape Kennedy, Fla., launch complex will be chosen over other contenders for space shuttle launchings.

NASA previously had decided on the design for the upper stage of the Space Shuttle, called the orbiter, and had awarded a contract for the engines.

However, a company passed over on the engine decision has challenged NASA's choice and the government's General Accounting Office is conducting an investigation.

The Space Shuttle booster will launch the huge vehicle through the earth's atmosphere, after which the booster stage will separate and possibly be lowered to Earth by parachute for use again on other missions.

The orbiter stage, fitted with a delta wing, and about the size of the twin-engine DC9 jet, will carry its two-man crew and two passengers into orbit, deliver personnel and supplies to sky laboratories or other satellites, and return to earth for an airplane-type landing. The shuttle development will take about six years.

The complete shuttle system is to be operational before 1980.

The shuttle, the first reusable space vehicle, will be boosted into space through simultaneous operation of the booster's solid propellant engines and the orbiter's high-pressure liquidoxygen, liquid-hydrogen main engines.

The booster will detach about 25 miles above the Earth and descend into the ocean for recovery and re-use.

Hannibal's Popularity As Tourist Stop Still Strong

HANNIBAL, Mo. (AP) — Sam Clemens made Hannibal the world's best known small town. And now, not quite 100 yards after "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," tourists by the thousands pause each year, perhaps to recapture the flavor of 19th century America.

Hannibalians have been busy in recent years enhancing that flavor, recreating the places where Tom and Huck frolicked and restoring both lumber barons' palatial homes and the "Usinkable" Molly Brown's childhood shanty.

Perched precariously on steep hills cut by the Mississippi, Hannibal is located on U.S. 61 and U.S. 36, about two hours north of St. Louis.

Its popularity as a stop for cross-country travelers is evidenced by tourist registrations from New York and California which consistently follow Missouri, Illinois and Iowa as the top five.

Hannibal, of course, owes its tourist boom to Mark Twain who drew on his childhood and teen-age years here in almost all of his writings.

So that visitors may know a little of where Twin got his inspiration, Hannibal has restored the Mark Twain Historical Area, a sloping half-block on Hill Street, centered by the white frame house where Sam Clemens lived as a boy.

The upper rear bedroom is where young Clemens slept and from which he managed to escape periodically to join the pals whose mishaps provided the plots for "Tom Sawyer."

The boyhood home is entered through the adjoining native stone Free Mark Twain Museum, constructed during the 1930s and crammed with mementoes of Clemens' lifetime. They include yellowed Hannibal newspapers containing his first attempts at humor and 15 original oil paintings by illustrator Norman Rockwell from 1936 editions of "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn."

The law office of Sam Clemens' father, John Marshall Clemens, also stands on Hill Street, moved there a few years ago from its original location. The elder Clemens was a sort of frontier justice of the peace and as prone to financial disaster as Sam Clemens would become in later years.

When John Clemens lost the white frame house, the family moved across the street above Grant's Drugstore. The family's quarters and the drugstore also have been restored.

All the attractions in the Mark Twain Historical Area are free, though times are needed to play recordings which describe the furnishings and some of Clemens' escapades. One tale—that of young Sam's horrified discovery of a corpse the night he slept in his dad's office—was recorded by actor Hal Holbrook impersonating Twain.

A block north of the historical area is a statue of Tom and Huck and the first of the steps leading up Cardiff Hill where a small lighthouse is visible miles up and down the Mississippi. The lighthouse is a tribute to a widow who for years kept lights shining in her home as a guide to steamboat pilots. The hill really is Holiday Hill but Clemens called it Cardiff in his books and the name stuck.

There are other monuments to Clemens and his writings, throughout Hannibal, such as the giant hilltop statue in Riverview Park which commands a sweeping panorama of the Mississippi and its islands.

Less well known, but hunted out by many visitors, are the unobtrustive graves of Clemens' parents and his two brothers in Mt. Olivet Cemetery. Clemens himself is buried in Elmira, N.Y., with his wife and children.

The liveliest day of the year in Hannibal is the 4th of July when the town's Jaycees stage National Tom Sawyer Days, highlighted by the national fence painting contest which draws boys from the 10 states bordering the Mississippi.

Clad in torn jeans, straw hats and speckled with freckles, the youngsters dash toward a temporary white fence erected in front of the boyhood home and splatter it with whitewash. The winner is the boy who paints the swiftest and neatest.

The city's official greeters, Tom and Becky, are chosen on the 4th, too. Tom and Becky must be seventh graders well versed in Mark Twain lore and familiar with his writings.

Independence Day also finds crowds lining Main Street to view the traditional parade and flocking to the riverfront at night for a gigantic fireworks display launched at the edge of the levee.

The holiday weekend includes an annual raft race in which teen-agers row or paddle or sometimes push homemade rafts two miles down the river. And usually there's a frog jumping contest. Last year nearly 200 frogs hopped about a riverfront park under the urgings of their owners of all ages.

Another lively day in Hannibal is the arrival of the Delta Queen, the nation's last overnight passenger steamboat. The stately sternwheeler docks at the riverfront, not far from Sam Clemens' home, a few times each year.

Just south of town is the privately owned Mark Twain Cave where guides lead half-hour tours down well-lit twisting paths and past formations such as the Grand Piano, the Hanging Shoe, the Post Office and the Alligator.

There are museums of several types, including a diorama museum featuring miniature characters in intricate scenes from "Tom Sawyer."

For evening entertainment there's the Ice House Theatre which will open its fifth season of semi professional repertory theatre in July. Professional actors join a student cast recruited from Northeast Missouri State College, the theatre's co-sponsor.

Of the five plays produced each season in the almost 120 year-old structure, one traditionally is by Mark Twain, such as "Huckleberry Finn" or "A Connecticut Yankee." The theatre owes its name to the building's past as the first ice house west of the Mississippi, which flows less than a block away.

Like the restored ice house, Hannibal has discovered other uncut gems in the stately Victorian and Italianate homes which line its hilly streets. Many of the older homes are topped by belvederes, an ornate, but tiny, windowed tower which provides a view of the river.

In contrast to the grand mansions is the tiny brick and frame house where Margaret Tobin spent her childhood. She's best known to the world as the "Unsinkable" Molly Brown, the flamboyantly wealthy wife of a Colorado silver miner who became a heroine during the sinking of the Titanic.

Legend has it that Molly nurtured her dream of striking it rich in Colorado while a waitress at a Hannibal hotel where she heard Sam Clemens rave about the wonders of the west as she served him dinner on one of his visits to Hannibal.

Arab Foes Reject Hussein Proposal

AMMAN (AP) — King Hussein of Jordan offered today to set up a semiautonomous state of Palestine on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River once Israeli troops withdrew from the region.

The King's Arab foes joined in rejection of the plan, communicated to the Arab governments Tuesday, before he announced it. Radio and press commentators in Egypt, Syria, Libya and Iraq charged it was the first step toward a separate peace agreement with Israel.

Palestine guerrilla leaders agreed to set up their own government-in-exile in retaliation, guerrilla sources said. A guerrilla statement termed Hussein's proposal "a plot designed to kill the commando movement and liquidate the Palestine cause for ever."

There was no immediate official reaction from the Israeli government, but an Israeli Arab leader cautiously welcomed the proposal as a possible step toward peace. However, a conservative opposition leader who opposes the return of any of the occupied territories said, "Israel's reaction should be to immediately extend Israeli law to all parts of the territories."

Hussein announced his plan to a meeting of some 500 prominent Jordanians from both sides of the river. He told them the new state would be joined with the rest of Jordan to form the United Arab Kingdom under his reign.

A government spokesman denied a report by Baghdad Radio Tuesday that Israel had agreed to the plan as part of a peace agreement. The spokesman said there had been no discussions between leaders of Israel and Jordan.

The Iraqi broadcast appeared to be an attempt to whip up Arab sentiment in advance against the king's plans by raising the specter of a separate Jordanian-Israeli peace.

Hussein proposed that Jerusalem should be the capital of the "Region of Palestine" and Amman, the present Jordanian capital, would be the capital of both the "Region of Jordan and the United Arab Kingdom." The part of the plan involving Jerusalem was certain of rejection by Israel, which captured the Arab Old City of Jerusalem from Jordan in the 1967 war and has said repeatedly it would never give it up.

The king said the United Arab Kingdom would have a national assembly whose members would be elected by a direct and secret ballot, and membership would be divided equally between the two regions of the country.

As outlined by Baghdad, the plan included the occupied Gaza Strip in the Palestinian state but made no mention of the other Egyptian and Syrian territory occupied by Israel.

Godfrey Yields To Subpoena Demand

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Speaker James E. Godfrey, D-St. Louis, of the Missouri House today yielded four signed subpoena blanks to Rep. Richard Marshall, R-Webster Groves, so Marshall can press his probe into the residency qualifications of some House members.

Godfrey said he would furnish only four blanks to be used in the investigation of the qualifications of Rep. John P. O'Reilly, D-St. Louis.

He said if Marshall wanted more subpoenas issued for challenging other members, he would have to formally specify the case and number of subpoenas wanted.

Marshall has not revealed who he plans to have the subpoenas served on.

Marshall won the right to get the subpoenas from the house speaker Monday in a decision by the Missouri Supreme Court. The court said any legislator may demand and get subpoenas under a law that dates back to 1824, three years after Missouri became a state.

Marshall said he also plans to push investigations into the residency qualifications of other members of the House, including Reps. Thomas A. Walsh, John Conley and Paul J. Simon, all St. Louis Democrats, and Rep. William F. "Buck" Casey, D-Potosi.

"I have watched the flagrant disregard of rules for three terms now," Marshall told The Associated Press, "and finally since no election gimmick is in the issue, maybe it will be exposed."

Marshall is not running for re-election to the House.

"No one can reduce it to a political effort on my part," he said. "This is something I feel the people have a right to know."

Marshall launched a campaign to point out House members he says live outside their legislative districts. He started with House Speaker Pro Tem Patrick J. Hickey, D-St. Ann.

"We got off to a bad start six years ago when he (Hickey) told me to take my seat and I refused," Marshall said.

He said House rules permit a member to stand by his seat if he wants recognition and that is what he wanted.

"Hickey has referred to me as a buck-toothed -----since," Marshall said.

Earlier, he said, he had no bad feelings concerning any of the others he will seek to challenge on residency grounds.

"I feel sorta guilty about O'Reilly," he confided. "Poor ol' guy." O'Reilly served his first term in the House in the 1930's.

Defense Protests Douglas' Arrogance

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Defense attorney Paul O'Dwyer, protesting the "arrogance" of paid FBI informer Boyd Douglas Jr. and the court's failure to reprimand him, said today "it is impossible for the jury to deal fairly" with the Harrisburg 7 conspiracy trial defendants.

O'Dwyer's motion for a mistrial, however, was swiftly rejected by U.S. District Court Judge R. Dixon Herman withuout comment.

It was a renewal of a similar plea made Tuesday by O'Dwyer who accused the judge of prejudice.

Specifically, in his written motion O'Dwyer objected to "the protective attitude of the court towards the witness and the court's interjection into the cross-examination, which could only be described as paternalism."

O'Dwyer said Douglas' "arrogance ... gave him carte blanche to engage in quarrelsome dialogue with counsel (and) to usurp the function of the court in making what could be regarded as juridical rulings."

O'Dwyer's emotional outburst Tuesday brought charges that Herman was protecting Douglas from answering damaging defense questions aimed at destroying his credibility.

"The examination and the cross-examination have been frustrated by the court," O'Dwyer said. "To permit a witness this liberty is unheard of in jurisprudence. It is highly prejudicial."

Herman quickly denied O'Dwyer's mistrial motion.

O'Dwyer, a New York lawyer, objected to an unrecorded whisper from Douglas, while in the witness box, informing the judge one of the jurors appeared to be in pain. When that occurred Herman called a recess.

The judge said the defense knew the juror had two teeth pulled Monday.

"For a witness to show concern for a juror, in hearing of the entire jury, is unheard of," O'Dwyer complained, and the judge gaveled him to sit down.

"I will be heard," O'Dwyer retorted.

"I don't want to hold you in contempt," Herman responded.

"Your honor may hold me in contempt," O'Dwyer said, "but I will be seated only when I am told I may enlarge on my motion."

That's when Herman agreed O'Dwyer could renew it in writing.

Douglas, who has been on the stand 12 days, testified he possibly offered to get a gun that could not be traced for use in kidnaping White House aide Henry A. Kissinger. Douglas claims such a kidnaping was plotted by antiwar priest Philip Berrigan and his six codefendants.

Eye Clinic At Portage March 30

PORTAGEVILLE — The annual New Madrid County eye clinic will be held at the National Guard Armory March 30 beginning at 9 a.m.

Anyone who would like to attend the clinic, and is a resident of the county, may contact the New Madrid County Welfare Office, 600 Main St., New Madrid, for referral.

The clinic is held under the prevention of blindness program by the Missouri Division of Welfare's bureau for the blind. The clinic is conducted by opthalmologists of the bureau for the blind who are skilled in the care and treatment of eye conditions.

Attending will be representatives of the Bureau of the Blind's vocational rehabilitation program to talk to those individuals who might qualify for blind services under that program.

Due to the large number of individuals expected to attend the clinic a schedule has been set up:

Open Meetings Bill Approved

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri House Tuesday gave tentative approval to a battered open meetings bill.

At the end of a morning's efforts to amend it, Rep. R.J "Bus" King, R&Clayton, asked use to approve it "even in its present bad shape."

Rep. James Mulvaney, DJennings, got the House to accept an amendment requiring public utilities, which are actually private corporations, to hold public meetings in discussing their business.

Rep. Harold Holliday, D-Kansas City, won adoption of an amendment to let legislative committees decide in closed session how to act on individual bills. The vote would have to be made public later, however.

Several unsuccesful efforts were made to hang on other amendments, including one by Rep. Leo W. Schrader, D-Joplin. It would force news media to attend any meeting and stay the full period, producing a verbatim report of the procedure within 24 hours.

Failure on the part of any news medium would mean a fine up to $1,000.

Schrader said "The people have a right to know exactly what's going on." He accused news media of trying to tell the public there "is something sinister going on behind closed doors."

Speaker Pro Tem Patrick J. Hickey, D-St. Ann, declared that one adopted on a voice vote but later on a roll call it failed 80-92.

Rep. E. J. "Lucky" Cantrell, D-Overland, tried in vain to add an amendment to force any news media that might "assail any public official in a derogatory manner" to provide that person with equal time or space to make a reply.

Hughes Leaves Nicaragua

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After a month in a hideaway in Nicaragua and a purported surprise meeting with the Nicaraguan president and the U.S. ambassador there, Howard Hughes is reported to have flown to Los Angeles.

An unidentified spokesman for the Nicaraguan air force told newsmen that Hughes had flown in a private plane early Tuesday to Los Angeles, where he has lived as both a celebrity and a recluse.

A spokesman for the 66-yearold billionaire confirmed Tuesday night that Hughes had left Nicaragua and arrived at an undisclosed destination. However, the spokesman, Richard Hannah, refused to confirm that Hughes was in Los Angeles and said that his whereabouts may not be disclosed for a time.

Before leaving Managua, where he had lived on the seventh floor of the Intercontinental Hotel, Hughes met with President Anastasio Somoza and U.S. Ambassador Turner B. Shelton, the ambassador said.

This would be the first reported time Hughes has met with persons outside his staff since he went into seclusion more than a decade ago. Hannah refused comment on the report.

Shelton said Hughes "met with the president and I was there at the meeting before he left. Just the president, Mr. Hughes, and myself."

Somoza said Hughes told him he was "looking forward with keen anticipation to having the opportunity to return to Nicaragua soon."

Somoza said he had invited Hughes to "visit with me in the near future." But he declined, as did Shelton, to say what had been discussed.

Other sources said the three might have discussed a possible business deal involving Hughes' airline, Hughes Airwest, and Somoza's Lanica airline.

Wyoming Territory passed a law granting woman suffrage in 1869. The World Almanac recalls that adult women in New Jersey could vote in general elections under a constitution adopted in 1776, provided they were "worth 50 Pounds Proclamation money, with clear estate in the same." In 1807, this provision was "reinterpreted" and voting was limited to free white male citizens.

What Can Moscow Do Now? Open The Door -

By David Lawrence

A brief but significant dispatch the other day from London by the United Press International reads as follows:

"The Soviet Union is highly distrustful of President Nixon's Peking visit but will keep the door open for a continuing dialogue on possible accommodation with the U.S., Communist diplomats said today.

"They said Soviet leaders are visibly disturbed by the Sino-American reconciliation and will not be easily convinced that the Peking moves are not directed, at least partly, against the Soviet Union. The Soviet leaders were said to be deeply distrustful of the implications of the Peking developments.

"Nevertheless, or because of this uneasiness, Moscow apparently does not plan to slam the door to a searching exploration of areas of possible accommodation with Washington, to culminate in the Moscow visit by President Nixon in May, they indicated."

There is no doubt that fear of Soviet ambitions has played a part in Peking's desire to be on closer terms with the United States, but President Nixon's mission was in no sense an attempt to set up a new alliance in Asia. The real significance in the visit was the demonstration of a growing understanding between the Chinese and American peoples. When preliminary restrictions were removed, the Americans were given a welcome that made a deep impression on the world.

The view will prevail that there is a basis for friendship between the Chinese on the mainland and the American people, and President Nixon brought this out during his recent journey to Peking.

It is quite possible that the Soviet leaders are concerned about the scope of the talks with the American President, but they also will have an opportunity to let the people of the Soviet Union see President Nixon and welcome him to their homeland.

Fundamentally, it is the friendship of peoples which eventually influences the relations of governments. Today mainland China has more friends in the United States than before, and the time may not be far distant when the people of the Soviet Union can also develop a more friendly attitude among Americans than they have hitherto had. But this is something which the Government in Moscow has to recognize by "opening the door."

The President will be going to the Soviet capital in May for a discussion of current international problems and undoubtedly will be engaging in a dialogue on ways to promote the cause of peace in Europe. For many years, the United States has maintained a substantial military force on the European continent as part of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. The Soviet Union keeps armies in some of the countries of Eastern Europe. The general feeling has always been that both sides are seeking to protect themselves against a military crisis that may emerge "some day."

But the occasion has come for the Soviet Union and the United States to discuss the possibility of removing fears of such a crisis and elimination the necessity for their having standing armies in Europe.

Some vital points, therefore, can arise in the talks between President Nixon and the Kremlin leaders. If a friendly mood can be brought about between the people of the Soviet Union and the people of the United States, success can be achieved by the conferences of the principal officials of the Government in Moscow and the President of the United States.

The first step unquestionably is to get to know the people of the Soviet Union, and there is an opportunity in the visit which Mr. Nixon will make in May to let the people of Russia demonstrate their friendly attitude toward the people ot the United States, just as the Chinese people did in Peking. Once a spirit of good will is engendered, a period of peace may ensue. This is what the "open door" can do.

But until there is mutual trust between peoples, not very much can be accomplished in the form of diplomatic exchanges and agreements between the United States and the Soviet Union.

The Red Chinese broke many a precedent during President Nixon's visit, but one in particular interested the American Government. The entire Chinese press, including 900 provincial newspapers, printed the text of the joint communique, and other news about the visit was published and boradcast so that it became known to the people of mainland China. It is this "opening of the door" which means a great deal in the building of a better understanding between the citizens of a country with a controlled press and those of a nation like ours. The real problem in Moscow is to bring the Soviet people and the American people together.

The key to world peace is the same in Moscow as in Peking — to talk frankly about differences that exist between governments and "open the door."

Uphill Trek For President

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican strategists say President Nixon must win 10 to 15 per cent of the Democratic vote and about 75 per cent of the independent vote to gain re-election in November.

On paper, registration figures show nothing but an uphill battle for the GOP in putting Nixon back in the White House, according to Republican campaign veterans F. Clifton White, Fred Currier and Robert Teeter.

The facts, they told a recent gathering of county and statelevel Republican workers from across the country, are these:

—Democrats outnumber Republicans 45 per cent to 25 per cent, and 30 per cent of the American electorate considers itself independent of attachment to either party.

—If history is a lesson, Nixon can count on 90 per cent of the Republican vote. He must get 10 to 15 per cent of the Democratic vote and 70 to 75 per cent of the independent vote to win in November.

The Republican workers were told to study, precinct-by-precinct past voting results in an attempt to identify areas with a high proportion of ticket splitters. Those are the voters who will decide whether Nixon will serve a second term, the strategists said.

White, Teeter and Currier told the Republican workers to forget about party rhetoric as they go after the independent vote this year.

Clayton Talks On Community Betterment

MATTHEWS — O. D. Clayton, manager of the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce, spoke to high school seniors today on community betterment problems and opportunities.

Defining community betterment, Clayton told the students that in this program it means increased prosperity, improved educational opportunity, better streets, more attractive buildings, greater opportunities for existing industries and the attraction of new industries and similar efforts to provide a better place in which to live and prosper.

He also explained the why and how behind Missouri's Community Betterment Program, including the Five-Star Community rating system, which specifies standards for education, utilities, transportation, community planning and community services.

Sentencing Held Up In Marijuana Cases

JACKSON — Unusual sentences were handed down yesterday in circuit court for Hugh Marvin Gilmore, 21, of Sikeston and Ronnie Wyatt, 24, of Cape Girardeau who were arrested May 12 on charges of selling drugs.

Circuit Judge W. Osler Statler sentenced Wyatt to five years — minimum sentence for the offense — and ordered him placed on probation under supervision of the state board of probation and parole.

As a condition of the probation, Wyatt is to serve six months in the county jail.

Wyatt had pleaded guilty to the charge before but sentencing had been postponed pending a presentence investigation into the possibility of probation.

Sentencing on a similar charge involving Wyatt and Hugh Marvin Gilmore, 21, of Sikeston was postponed as to Wyatt pending appearance of his court appointed attorney for that charge.

Gilmore received sentences of one- year each on two counts but execution of the sentences was deferred until June 5 for further consideration.

The deferred sentencing, something which is not new here, in effect gives the accused an opportunity for a record clear of criminal charges.

Prosecuting attorney A. J. Seier objected strongly to the sentence. He later explained that a conviction does not appear on a person's record unless there is both a finding of guilt and an imposition of sentence.

Unless the sentence is imposed June 5 when it comes up for consideration again, Seier said a conviction would not appear on Gilmore's record.

Others arrested in the drug raids still face trial or sentencing. James Samuel Vinson of 309 Branum, Sikeston and Linda Lou Smith, 105 North Clark, Cape Girardeau, formerly of Sikeston, will go on trial March 24 in Bollinger County on charges of selling narcotics.

John Adams, 705 Park, Charles Thomas Dye of 134 Marion, Jane Lair of 322 North New Madrid, all of Sikeston; and Judith Ann Ruebush of Cape Girardeau, still face sentencing in Cape Girardeau County Magistrate Court. The original felony charges of possession of narcotics have been dropped and changed to conspiracy to possess narcotics, a misdemeanor. All plead guilty to the charges. A date for sentencing was not set.

Four Plead Guilty And Are Sentenced

NEW MADRID — Four were sentenced in circuit court Tuesday after entering guilty pleas. One probation was revoked and a pre- sentence investigation was ordered by Judge William L. Ragland.

Leroy Johnson was given a two- year sentence on a felonious stealing charge, after an earlier sentence of five years and probation without supervision was set aside. ## Webster Denies Role In Complaint

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Sen. Richard M. Webster, R-Carthage, denied Tuesday that he was responsible for filing a complaint with the Federal Aviation Autority Monday alleging that Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, violated air safety rules in a landing at the Jefferson City Airport.

The complaint was filed by Eugene Ingram, pilot of a plane that was bringing Gene Taylor of Sarcoxie, the Republican national committeeman, to Jefferson City to file for the 7th Congressional District nomination.

In a statement issued today, Webster said "I am afraid that the stress of the campaign may have caused by friend, Earl Blackwell, to over react and to jump to unwarranted and unfounded conclusions...

"I regret that Earl jumped to the erroneous conclusion that a friend and colleague would turn on him in a matter of this importance."

Webster, who also is a pilot, said he did not actually see the Blackwell landing and did not know a complaint had been filed until a reporter told him about it two hours later.

Blackwell said Monday the complaint appeared to be politically motivated and denied that he had violated any air safety rules.

Ann Landers

Pets Nicer At Motel Than People

Dear Ann Landers: I live and work in a motel. I'd like to straighten out that jerk from Kentucky who said we shouldn't admit people with pets.

We've had a lot less trouble with animals than people. Since I've been here I know of only two instances where a pet damaged hotel property. In both cases a little shampoo on the rug remedied the problem. People are another story. They've left us with broken chairs, mirrors, burnt mattresses and food on the wallpaper. One drunk actually put his fist through a TV screen.

With the exception of a beach slipper at the pool, nothing has ever been stolen from us by a pet. Our two-legged guests, on the other hand, have helped themselves to lamps, linen, pillows, pictures off the wall, shower curtains, anything that wasn't riveted to the floor.

No one has ever been injured in our place by a pet, but we've had eight guests hurt in family fights since July,---including one woman who shot her husband.

I read recently about a motel in Manhatten for pets only. No people allowed, I envy them their clientele. --Midwest Reader.

Dear Midwest: What a nice testimonial for man's best friend. Too bad they can't read.

Dear Ann Landers: I felt sorry for the happily married woman who wrote to say she had done some nude modeling in her younger (and more foolish) days and was haunted by the fear that she might be recognized. I am in a similar predicament so I can understand her anxiety. Only I was innocent.

A certain girl who specializes in pornographic modeling and stag films is a dead ringer for me. Several months ago, when I first saw a picture of her, I was certain someone had superimposed my head on another woman's body. (The dimensions were definitely not mine.) A few days later a man who works with my husband told him he had seen some stag movies at the home of a friend and I was the star. My husband asked if he could arrange to see the film and his wish was granted. He came home in a state of shock and said the girl was my absolute double, except for the body.

He asked me to please cut my blonde hair and dye it dark brown, which I did at once. I still get uncomfortable if someone stares at or says, "Haven't we met before?" but I'm no longer panicked. Please print my letter in case some of your readers think they recognzie a porno queen in the supermarket or at a P.T.A. meeting. Tell them not to jump to conclusions. ---Not Guilty In Buffalo

Dear Buff: Now how in the world would the fine people who read my column KNOW what a porno queen looks like? But here's your letter and my thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: We bought an old house three years ago. All the bedrooms are upstairs. I have not had one good night's slepp since we moved in. It's like sleeping on top of a toadstool. I feel as if I'm on a shelf and if I turn over I'll fall out-into the yard. I want to sell this house and get one with at least one bedroom on the ground floor. My husband says I'm a chronic complainer. He doesn't understand. What can I do?---Bleary -Eyed

Dear Bleary: Your fears are totally irrational, but this doesn't mean they aren't very real to you. I suggest a cot or a roll-away bed on the ground floor. It's easier than selling your home.

Can drugs be a friend in time of stress? If you keep your head together can they be of help? Ann Landers' new booklet, "Straight Dope on Drugs" separates the fact from the fiction. Get it today. For each booklet ordered send a dollar bill , plus a long, self addressed, stamped envelope, with 16 cents worth of stamps to Ann Landers, Box 3346 Chicago, Ill. 60654.

The P.O.W. Wife Is Fictionalized Now

In a new novel, "Limbo," authors Joan Silver and Linda Gottlieb present a story version of the approximately 1,850 women whose husbands have been captured or are still missing in action (MIA) in the Indochina war.

"These are women who are liberated in spite of themselves," explained Mrs. Gottlieb, 32, a writer and former educational film producer. "They are the first wives to be caught in conflict because of the sexual revolution at home and the antiwar protesters. It's a unique pressure on the women."

In the authors' view, that pressure leads to such happenings as romantic love affairs, peace demonstrations and anti-government sentiments. It's not a view that appears popular with the Pentagon.

When presented with the script of a film adaptation of the novel — which Mrs. Silver, 36, wrote, and Mrs. Gottlieb is producing — the Pentagon refused permission to film on an Air Force base or at landing fields. And they said that they would lend no technical advice.

John E. Horton, who represents the movie company in the capital, said he thought the decision was "nothing political — they just didn't agree with the tone of the script as opposed to what they feel the actual situation is." He said that in most cases of movies requiring Pentagon cooperation, "usually they are very helpful."

A Pentagon spokesman, Don Baruch, of the Audio-Visual Branch, said the request had been turned down, but would only say, "We don't feel that we should discuss a property that we are not working with."

Amnesty Opposed By the Pentagon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amnesty for Vietnam draft resisters and deserters was opposed today by the Pentagon and the American Legion. They said it could wreck the armed forces and defame the millions who served honorably and without protest.

Advertising In Newspaper Pays

Jewell was introduced by David Bowman, president of the club.

"Advertising is a good lube job and is the lubrication that keeps the wheels of business moving forward," Jewell said.

Jewell told the club that a continuous advertising program based on the buying patterns within the community and the establishment of an advertising sales budget obtains the best advertising results. A "one-shot" ad often results in waste of the advertising dollar.

"A good ad brings cash register results and a poorly composed ad will have little pulling power and only waste the retailers advertising dollar," Jewell said, "that is why we try to create and set up ads that will attract attention and create sales."

Newspaper advertising, a $4.8 billion dollar industry, gets about one-third of the 14 to 15 billion dollars spent annually for advertising.

A survey conducted by the DuPont company on consumer buying patterns in self service stores showed that of the customers who recalled seeing or hearing store advertising 85 per cent of them read about it in the newspaper.

Guests of the club were Jerry Beckner, Boy Scout council exectuve and Jerry Grabtree, both of Cape Girardeau and Lt. Gov. Joe Watson of East Prairie.

Jim Stallings made a report on the progress of Pancake Day March 28. A divisional meeting will be held in Sikeston April 11 and will be a ladies night.

Charleston City Manager Speaks at Caruthersville

"Each city council must know what its town needs in a city manager. His abilities must fit these needs," Martin told the council.

The Charleston official explained that in order to establish a city manager form of government in third class cities such as Caruthersville, voters must pass a referendum asking for the change in city government.

Five councilmen are elected at large, and the mayor is elected from the council for a term of one year. The mayor has the same voting privilege as the councilmen. Aldermen or councilmen serve for three years. The city manager cannot vote, however.

Under the city- manager form of government, aldermen are the only elected city officials. All others, including the city- manager, are appointed.

One of the city manager's responsibilities is the hiring and dismissal of city employees. The Clerk, Assessor, and Treasurer are appointed by the council. The Police and Fire Chiefs and department heads are hired by the city manager.

Martin pointed out that the city council determines policy and it's the city manager's job to carry out the policy.

He mentioned the fact that Charleston has had only five city managers since it went to this form of government in 1947.

"Beginning salary for a manager for a city like Caruthersville would probably be around $12,000 per year," he said, "and a city manager need not have a college degree and may be a local businessman or someone from outside the area."

After a certain number of years, the city- manager form of government may be voted out by the people. Over 300 towns each year are voting in this type of government, however, and less than one town each year votes it out. "this is usually due to the personality of the city manager when a city votes it out," Martin continued.

One big advantage in having a city manager, according to Martin, is getting department heads off the ballot. "It is hard for a police chief to do his job and still try to be elected every two years," he said.

He also stated that a city can operate economically with the mayor- council form of government if the councilmen and mayor have the time to devote to the operation of the city. "It's very hard for a businessman to run his business and the city at the same time," Martin continued.

"A local man hired as city manager can be under a handicap due to people who may not like him but a stranger starts even," said Martin. He went on to say that a city manager could put a computer to good use in helping run a city and bill water users and keep salary records.

The city manager also has the responsibility of preparing a budget each year for the council's approval.

On Movieland, 1933

WEEKEND '33. By Bob Thomas. Doubleday. $6.95.

In the old days they used to call it movieland. That is the scene of the novel, and the time is Labor Day weekend of 1933, when the talkies were just replacing the silent films and the Depression still was young.

Much of the action takes place at the isolated, super-colossal estate — which outdoes the most colossal movie set — of a wealthy man who heads a newspaper chain, Harrison Clay Stembridge. He has invited an oddly assorted group of guests, most of whom haven't the faintest idea of why they have been invited.

Stembridge knows very well what he is doing. Dazzling his guests with his overdone hospitality, he talks confidentially with them, one by one. He offers to buy out the interests of a man who has built a major studio with a value of millions; to buy a small studio which has been set up by a man who still owes a big debt; a distributing and promoting agency run by a couple of has-been actors; a studio recently taken over by an Eastern banker (interested in its only leading lady) who happens to own a string of movie houses.

His excuse is that he wants to give his mistress, a fading actress, a combination plaything and economic cushion. Making his propositions separately, he secretly plans to put the whole package into a combine that would challenge the young movie industry. But the coup must be executed quickly. One of the victims discovers the scope of the plan and tries to upset the whole deal.

Few readers will have trouble identifying the real life person who served as the model for the fictional Stembridge; they also can guess at some of the other Hollywood types — a sexy starlet, an alcoholic writer, a playwright who hates capitalist oppressors, a leading man who no longer can make the grade, etc.

Mills' Plan to Cost $6.3 Billion a Year

By BRUCE BIOSSAT

WASHINGTON (NEA)

If Congress should adopt House Ways and Means Chairman Wilbur Mills' proposal for a 20 per cent boost this year in basic retirement benefits, the "first year" federal cost of all pending major Social Security revisions would be $9.9 billion—not $8 billion as widely reported at the outset.

The revisions, contained in the House-passed bill called H.R. 1, call for a first year added outlay of $3.6 billion plus, without the new Mills proposal. In their present form, as the Senate Finance Committee considers them, they include only a five per cent boost in basic retirement benefits. Thus the cost of the Mills' suggestions would be $6.3 billion in the initial year of the revised program.

Social security experts confirm that this sizable hike in benefits is "actuarially sound," meaning that anticipated revenues will more than cover the cost of the higher outlays.

H.R. 1 presently provides for a schedule of tax rate increases in the years ahead. It would also widen the tax base, that proportion of the individual's annual income from which the taxes are drawn. Mills suggests the base be raised to $10,200 this year and to $12,000 in 1973. He would delay higher rates.

What is now being proposed, then, fits well within the guidelines on tax contributions recommended last spring by a blue-ribbon advisory council which reported to Congress through HEW Secretary Elliot Richardson.

As a matter of fact, that council said flatly that, so long as U.S. citizens' earning continued to rise in future years as expected, higher and higher retirement benefits for more and more Social Security recipients could be financed entirely from a periodic widening of the tax base. It insisted that no new tax rate increases should be needed before the next century.

The council argued that to embark on a rising schedule of increases in both the tax rate and the tax base would be to build Social Security fund reserves to absurdly astronomical levels.

The council's judgment was that it is safe enough for the federal government to have on hand, at the outset of a given year, only those reserves required to cover the Social Security outlays for the year ahead. Obviously, that would not exhaust the fund, since new taxes would be collected steadily throughout the unfolding 12 months.

For a long time, Mills and others in Congress have resisted this approach and have clung to the "big reserve" philosophy as the only sound one. The suggested 20 per cent benefit boost as of this coming July 1 represents a departure from this concept.

There is no assurance, of course, that the new Mills' proposal will be accepted either by the Senate Finance Committee under Chairman Russell Long, or by the full Senate. But its chances of approval may be enhanced by the fact it is a presidential election year, and by the rumor that President Nixon himself may propose something similar.

32 Coyotes Bite Missouri Dust

PALMYRA, Mo. (AP) — Thirty-two dead coyotes were produced over the weekend at the conclusion of a coyote roundup in northeast Missouri.

The roundup was called by the Mark Twain Cattle men's Association with cash prizes awarded Sunday at the Palmyra Livestock Auction. Coyotes have been blamed for killing livestock in the area, although some conservationists dispute this

Joe Threlkeld of Palmyra received $25 for the largest male coyote—25 pounds. He has a pet coyote of his own, called Charlie, which got loose durimg the roundup and Threlkeld thought it might be killed.

He set a light trap for it and when Charlie was caught it caused him to lose a forepaw. Threlkeld and other coyote hunters use Greyhound dogs to run down the coyotes and kill them.

Dick Perry received $25 for the largest female coyote—40 pounds. A group of Palmyra hunters he was with turned in six pelts. Paul Shaffer with a group from Leonard, Mo., received $50 for turning in 14 pelts.

On hand was John Robinson, executive director of the Missouri Cattlemen's Association. He said livestock losses have been great because of coyotes, especially in southern Missouri. Some conservationists in the northeast Missouri area have called for a thorough investigation of the coyote problem to determine they are in fact responsible for the livestock kills.

It was reported that some of the coyotes taken in the roundup would be examined, including the contents of their stomachs, in at attempt to determine if they had killed any livestock.

Robert Cutsinger of the northeast Missouri Humane Society said "wild dogs" have been responsible for pig and sheep kills in the Saverton area.

Funds for Two Colleges Opposed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A bill to provide full funding for Missouri Western College at St. Joseph and Missouri Southern College at Joplin ran into strong opposition Tuesday and was temporarily shelved.

Sen. Truman Wilson, D-St. Joseph, sponsor of the bill, said operating the four-year colleges under two boards — a junior college district for the first two years and a board of regents for the junior and senior years — is cumbersome and creates administrative headaches.

But Sen. Albert M. Spradling, D-Cape Girardeau, opposed the bill on the grounds that splitfunding was the agreement when the colleges were converted from junior colleges a few years ago.

Sen. William B. Waters, D-Liberty, agreed, He said the bill was passed at that time with the understanding that local tax revenues would be used to support the first two years, and that sponsors of the new measure are reneging on that agreement.

Wilson said the costs of full state funding would range from $916,000 to $1.8 million.

No License For Slayer

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Dr. R. Bernard Finch has been denied a license to practice as an anesthesiologist by the state Board of Healing Arts.

Finch, convicted California wife slayer, was subject to a weekend meeting of the board, according to John A. Hailey, executive secretary.

The board's denial was based on an opinion by Missouri's attorney general holding no one could practice medicine in this state without a state license, which Finch does not have and has not applied for. The board contended the administration of anesthetics is a part of the practice of medicine.

Dog Saves Family, Loses Life

BOURBON, Mo. (AP) — A family was alerted by a dog early Tuesday and escaped a fire, but the dog died in the house.

She rounded up her three children and they escaped the smoke-filled house. Her son Anthony, 9, went back in to get the dog but he was overcome by smoke.

Neighbors rescued the boy and Bourbon firemen helped revive him. But the dog could not be saved.

Solid Waste Bill Provision Opposed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The state Board of Health apparently is not alone in its apprehensions concerning a Senate-passed bill to control solid waste disposal facilities in Missouri.

A lengthy parade of witnesses Monday night opposed an amendment, tacked on to it by Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, which would require a public vote before tax money could be used to finance disposal facilities.

The referendum proposal is so worded, according to the Board of Health, that it would take away Division of Health authority to protect the public health.

Robert M. Robinson, engineer for the division, told the House Puboic Health and Environment Committee of the board's failure to fully endorse the Senate bill with what he called "the crippling amendment."

The amendment "would seriously disrupt" cooperative efforts to plan and implement systems between cities and counties, Robinson said, because they would not be required to provide proper garbage and refuse disposal.

"The suggested amendment," he said of one submitted by the division, "simply requires a city or county to submit a tax levy for solid waste management to a vote of the people. The other provisions of the solid waste bill would remain in effect as proposed."

from Motorola for a base station for the new city hall. City Manager Richard Martin informed the council a 75 per cent fund grant from the Bootheel Law Enforcement Council would be available toward the purchase of the base station. The city's share of the cost would be approximately $3,486.

Martin told the council he was preparing the city budget for presentation at the April meeting. Included in the budget will be two proposals for raising additional revenue, a cigarette tax and an increase in the city vehicle stickers.

Council members were brought up to date on construction progress of the city hall. Martin said they expected to have the building enclosed by the end of the month. He asked for and was granted permission to contact an interior design consultant to coordinate the decorating and furnishings of the interior.

No action was taken on a city employe retirement program. The council instructed Martin to contact a representative of Missouri Local Government Employees Retirement System and arrange to have him meet with it for explanation of the program.

Martin informed the council that contracts for improvement in the industrial park had been signed with McMullins Construction Company and construction of the water tower is expected to begin by April 1.

The council was informed that the bureau of outdoor recreation must have an engineered design for restroom facilities before approval and funding could be granted for the Interstate 57 park.

Sikeston, East Prairie Favored

The spotlight falls on the area's track squads this Friday night as 17 district schools coverage on the Sikeston high school field house, in the qualifying round for the indoor track meets at Columbia later this month.

A sample of the kind of action this season has in store, was exhibited in last Friday's opening indoor track meet of the season, when five previous records were severed.

Sikeston's own Curtis Bean surpassed the old mark set in the long jump by Charleston's Wavie Reed of 21-1, by leaping to 21 feet 3½ inches. This mark stand up well beside the mark of 22 feet 7¼ inches set as the high in last year's indoor track and field meet at Columbia in the class L.

Records were set in the mile relay by Poplar Bluff which finished in two seconds less than the old mark set by Paducah, of 3:42.3, This is compared with the class and state record time of 3:28.3, set in the 1971 indoor track and field meet at Columbia.

Caruthersville's Chris Hoskins set a new shot mark after he exceeded his old record of 52-4½ with a throw of 55 feet 11 inches, surpassing the mark set in last year's state meet in class M, which was 55 feet 10¼ inches. Coach Wene's Hoskins is one of the promising thinclads and should go a long way for the Tigers.

Records were also cracked in pole vault and high jumping events by Cape Central's Mike Lee, who went to 12 feet, six inches, in the vault, discrediting his old mark of 12-3. In the high jump he went to six feet to top his old record of 5-10 These records compare favorable with the marks attained in the state meet of last year for class L, of 6 feet, 2 inches reached in the high jump and with a 13-6¼ mark in pole vaulting.

Among the favored teams are East Prairie and Caruthersville.

East Prairie ran all the way to the class M last year title, reigning supreme in the 880 yard relay, and with the Eagle's Henry Franklin also bringing home first in state for his performance in the 60-yard dash, having a time of :06.4 and tying the Class record.

Henry Franklin graduated and Annise Davis has moved in to take his place as the mainstay of the team. The track coach of the Eagles, James Emas, said that he is looking for a really good jump from Davis and he is optimistic that he will place in the top one or two in the long jump in the state, based on last last year's performance.

Davis also is expected to qualify in four other events including the shot put, low hurdles, 880 relays, and the 60-yard dash.

A confident Coach Emas commented, "The team this year is a lot more balanced overall. We have some inexperience, but that doesn't worry us."

Field events begin at 6:00 p.m.: Preliminaries are at 7 p.m. and the final events start at 7:40 p.m.

DAVID NEWBERRY, a standout track and football star for the Sikeston Bulldogs in 1967-69. assists in the opening indoor track meet of the season. Newberry is a student at Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau and is a two-year football letterman.

NEWARK, Del. (AP) — The University of Delaware Athletic Council has voted against allowing freshmen to play either varsity football or basektball, the university announced Tuesday.

CINCINNATI (AP) — A record purse of $40,000—up $10,000 from last year—will be offered at the 85th annual Western Tennis Championships here July 31-Aug. 6.

J. Howard "Bumpy" Frazer, chairman, announced Tuesday that the tournament will be moved to the new 4,000-seat Queen City Racquet Club. The tournament will draw 64 men and 32 women.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The MVC roster has now been completed for the Missouri Valley Conference-Southeastern Conference all-star basketball game in Memphis March 26.

Allen Walks Out Again

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON Associated Press Sports Writer

Richie Allen wants to be known as Dick but his name may be mud before he ever puts on a Chicago White Sox uniform.

The controversial slugger, who spent 1969 in Philadelphia, 1970 in St. Louis and 1971 in Los Angeles, lasted all of 15 minutes with the White Sox Tuesday.

Alen whizzed in and out of a brief meeting with General Manager Stu Holcomb at the Sox' Sarasota, Fla., spring training headquarters. He showed up 23 days late, turned down an estimated $125,000 contract, asked to be traded and said he was "going home to mother."

"We had a pleasant discussion, but he just wants more than we will pay," reported Holcomb, who traded pitcher Tommy John and infielder Steve Huntz to the Dodgers for Allen during the off-season. "There is no way at this stage we would free him to deal with another club.

"One of his complaints was that over the last few years in St. Louis and Los Angeles he was just being used as a gate attraction to sell tickets. He felt it would be the same way in Chicago."

Holcomb said he told Allen: "We want you as a player and for nothing else. I told him he would be with a professional club that was a good one, that it wasn't a bunch of misfits. The next move is up to him. I don't plan to try and contact him any more."

That sort of left matters at an impasse, because Allen left the Sox' hotel carrying a suitcase and said: "We're miles apart. Nowhere close. I'm not going to talk to Holcomb anymore. There's no use."

With three-hit pitching like the White Sox got from Stan Bahnsen and two relievers in Tuesday's 4-0 exhibition victory over the St. Louis Cardinals, who needs Allen?

And according to the Texas Rangers, no one needs Frank Howard, either. The large slugger returned his estimated $100,000 contract unsigned and owner Bob Short said, "That's it as far as the Rangers are concerned."

Home runs are Howard's department and the Rangers got them from Lenny Randle and Elliott Maddox but still dropped a 6-5 decision to the Baltimore Orioles, who got a three-run shot from rookie Jim Fuller.

The Chicago Cubs scored all their runs in a wild third inning—Ron Santo contributed his second spring homer and a two-run double—and defeated Oakland 7-4. Eleven of the Cubs' 15 hits came off Catfish Hunter.

Slick-fielding Bud Harrelson committed two costly errors— each permitted a run to score—and the Cincinnati Reds edged the New York Mets 4-3. The New York Yankees dropped a 5-4 decision to Montreal when Mike Marshall put down a ninth-inning uprising.

Mickey Stanley belted a two-run inside-the-park homer and an RBI triple and Ike Brown also homered as the Detroit Tigers downed the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-5. California edged San Francisco 5-4 on Bruce Christensen's sacrifice fly in the 11th inning.

Reggie Smith hit a two-run homer in Boston's 10-5 trouncing of Houston. Steve Carlton hurled five strong innings—one run, two hits—as Philadelphia turned back Kansas City 7-4.

Larry Stahl singled home the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning of San Diego's 3-1 triumph over Milwaukee. George Stone, Jimmy Freeman and Russ Dillon scattered six hits as Atlanta shaded Minnesota 3-1.

The Tokyo Lotte Orions of the Japanese League scored four runs in the eighth inning—the winner crossed on third baseman Kurt Bevacqua's error— and nipped Cleveland 4-3.

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Chamber of Commerce will be on hand next week in Honolulu to make a pitch for the Pro Bowl which matches National Conference and American Conference stars of the National Football League.

Cowboy owner Clint Murchison has said he is not interested in staging the Super Bowl in Texas Stadium because of the conflict with bond holders ticket options.

A deep-fat fried redhorse sucker is considered to be the finest eating this side of Paradise. Sucker grabbers stand high above the pools so they can see the swimming fish and they try to jerk treble hooks into the fish.Suckers normally don't take bait and are rarely caught by conventional methods.

Brock, Torre Named Captains

ST. LOUIS (AP) -- The St. Louis Cardinals Tuesday named Lou Brock and Joe Torre as co-captains for 1972.

Last year Torre held the honor alone. Last year he batted .315 and led the league in runs scored - 126.

Good Year Predicted

By JOHN NIMMO

As spring approaches, the Sikeston High School golf squad prepares to get underway and defend its district title. With six of his lettermen returning to compete in this year's sport, Coach Gene Dawson is confident that this will be a good year for the Bulldogs.

Seniors Joe Crenshaw, Tom Dawson, Jeff Porter, and juniors, Dennis Myer, Mark Shaw, and Billy Wake, are the returning lettermen,

Coach Dawson commented that this year's squad is slightly smaller than in previous years but he is expecting them to make a good showing.

The golf season officially opens in the first week of April with the team clashing with such schools as Cape Girardeau, Kennett, Poplar Bluff, Dexter, and Perryville. To date the schedule is incomplete.

The really big one that the SHS golfers are looking forward to are the district playoffs for state advancement at Poplar Bluff, May 8.

Coach Dawson said, "I am expecting this year's squad to be a strong balanced team and we do expect a winning season."

MSHSAA Delays Action On Central

COLUMBIA, Mo. — The Missouri State High School Activities Association MSHSAA Board of Control plans a special meeting to duscuss a disturbance following the Kansas City Central- Raytown South class L basketball tournament game last week.

MSHSAA officials announced today that at its regular meeting last Saturday, the board resolved to conduct the meeting after preliminary investigations have been completed. Reports have since been requested from the tournament manager and the Kansas City and Raytown schools superintendents and boards of education.

Besides those parties, administrators of the schools involved and representatives of Northwest Missouri State College, where the playoff game was held, will be asked to attend the hearing.

Fourteen persons, including four police officers, suffered minor injuries March 8 when scores of Central fans burst across the court after their team lost 52-50 in overtime and began hurling chairs at the Raytown South crowd.

On Monday, Central's student council recommendedto school administrators that the student body be placed on probation for the remainder of the year. Earlier, the northwest section of the MSHSAA proposed thaat Central be suspended from all association activities for the rest of the year.

Mizzou Bucking Odds

COLUMBIA — First-timer Mizzou meets the granddaddy of National Invitation Tournament entries -- St. John's University -- in an opening-round basketball game at 8 p.m. (CST) in Madison Square Garden this Saturday.

The Tigers (21—5) will be matched in their first N.I.T. adventure with a New York entry that has been to the tournament 20 previous times, winning four championships. The Redmen, led by 6-7 Mel Davis, were 17-9 this season.

One of St. John's assistant coaches scouted Missouri's final-season win over Oklahoma here Saturday -- but the Big Eight Tigers will be relying on a scouting service for their "book" on the Easterners. The Redmen averaged 85.3 points a game this winter (against Mizzou's 76.5) so they obviously are not bashful shooters.

"a very imposing ball-club" is Coach Norm Stewart's quick evaluation of St. John's. "They kinda remind me of Kansas State from a size standpoint."

"We're playing an experienced Garden team -- and an experienced N.I.T. team," he continued. "It's the home-town favorite -- and I know we will be bucking some odds. They'll have a little edge."

Two of Coach Frank Mulzoff's standouts have cut an impressive swath nationally. Davis, dubbed "Chairman of the Bards", was the leading scorer with a 21-1 point average -- but the lean jumper really lived up to his monkier by claiming an average of 17 rebounds a game. That mark was fourth-best in the nation last week.

Bill Schaeffer, the 6-5 forward who averaged 16.8 as No. 2 scorer, made 63.1 per cent of his field goals. This was the nation's sixth-best collegiate listing last week. Rounding out the Redmen's front line is 6-9 Greg Cluess at Center, a 16-point shooter.

If Tiger John Brown can neutralize Davis' shotmaking and boardwork, Ol' Mizzou will be off and running in this single - elimination tourney. The 6-7 Missouri standout battled taller foes all season en route to District Five and all-league honors. Brown honors. Brown averaged 21.7 points a game and 10½ rebounds.

Stewart doesn't expect his team to be awed by the "big city", or the Garden.

"Our team has played at Kentucky, UCLA -- and in our own tournament," he points out, "and they know we're not going back there just for the trip."

"It's not that big a deal. I told them a few days ago that they'd all seen tall buildings, ridden in an airplane, and seen a guy in a tie."

"I have not seen that much Eastern basketball," says Norm, "but I think there are probably three areas where we'll see different interpretations.

"They probably will permit more aggressive board play. The charging- blocking call may favor the offensive man. And I don't think traveling will be called quite so strictly as it is out here."

Winner of the Mizzou- St. John's clash will take on the Memphis State-Oral Roberts winner in a 6 o'clock Tuesday night game.

Missouri's travel party flies out of St. Louis Thursday morning for New York. Tiger headquarters will be the American hotel.

Pruitt Tops MIAA Stars

MISSOURI INTERCOLLEGIATE ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

ST. LOUIS -- LaMont Pruitt, 6 foot- 5, 200- pound sophomore from Pittsburgh, Pa., and a key player in Lincoln University's charge to the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association basketball championship, topped the voting of the coaches in the selection of the conference's 1972 All-Star teams.

Pruitt, who averaged 19.9 points a game in Lincoln's 21-7 season, also was named the Most Valuable Player by the league's 7 coaches who convened at Columbia Monday.

St. Louisan Andrew Reid of Southeast Missouri State College, a senior, was the only repeater from the 1971 selections.

Zack Townsend of Southwest Mo. State who led the MIAA in scoring with an average of 24.5 points per game and runner- up John Williams of Missouri U.- Rolla, who averaged 20.1 ppg, also were named to the first five as was Rich Peters of UMR who was on the 1971 second team. Peters also won the Sportsmanship Trophy for the 1972 campaign.

Boyer Looks For Offense

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Former Yankee Stan Bahnsen has joined the list of pitchers bolstering their morale in spring training against the St. Louis Cardinals.

Bahnsen, toiling now for the Chicago White Sox, worked five innings Tuesday and was the winner in a 4-0 game sending the punchless Cards to a fourth straight loss.

The three-hit shutout in which Bahnsen had the heavy hand caused Cards coach Ken Boyer to note, "Any hitting by us from now on will be noticeable."

The Sox added their other runs in the fourth and fifth innings off Al Hrabosky, who relieved Bibby.

Schatzley Bolsters Three Rivers Hopes

POPLAR BLUFF — Three Rivers Community College will begin defense of its 1971 baseball conference crown Tuesday when it travels to Jefferson County College for a double header.

If it repeats as conference champions, big shoes must be filled. Lost through graduation were five .300 plus hitters. Three of these made the all-conference and all-regional teams: Steve Coulson, pitcher-outfield; Gaylord Gregory, catcher; and Wilson Strong, shortstop. Two underrated players, Doub Bagby and Mark Ellis, are the other members of this quintet.

Only three lettermen returned from last year's team: Les Schatzley, who made the all-conference and all-regional teams; Ronnie Cude, and Larry Wills. Adding experience are two other sophomores: John McCulloch, a letterman from the 1970 team; and Zack Womack, a transfer from Union University in Jackson, Tennessee.

State Fair Loses Opener

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (AP) — The first round of the National Junior College Basketball Tournament—marked by a couple of upsets Monday—will be completed this afternoon with two games.

In Monday's action, Vincennes, Ind., top-seeded and unbeaten, had a fight on its hands before pulling away from Erie, N.Y., for a 107-83 victory, while second-seeded Dalton, Ga., and third-seeded Arizona Western suffered surprising defeats.

Dalton fell victim to Gulf Coast of Florida, 78-69, and Western dropped an 86-78 decision to Paducah, Ky.

In Monday's other games, it was Casper, Wyo., over State Fair of Sedalia, Mo., 79-65; Southern Idaho beating Ulster County, N.Y., 85-75, and Ferrum, Va., over Hutchinson, Kan., 82-72.

Vincennes had only a fourpoint lead midway through the second half before it rang up 16 straight points to clinch its 30th win of the year.

Dalton hit an eight-minute dry spell in the first half of its game and never recovered, which Paducah outdueled Arizona Western in the closing three minutes of a game that was close all the way.

NBA Returns To Missouri

After 14 seasons in Cincinnati, the National Basketball Association club announced plans Tuesday to move to Kansas City for the 1972-73 season, spreading home games among St. Louis, Omaha and the Municipal Auditorium here.

The decision still awaits approval by the league. But Joe Axelson, the Royals executive vice president and general manager, said the team expects no difficulty in getting it since attendance at Cincinnati has averaged only about 3,500 per game.

However, in Cincinnati, the players said late Tuesday they will refuse to play if the team management splits home dates among the three cities.

Tom Van Arsdale, team captain, called the move "bush" and added, "The players are going to fight it."

Van Arsdale said he had advised National Basketball Association Commissioner Walter Kennedy, through Players' Association attorney Larry Fleisher, of the possibility the players could "refuse to play next season."

The Royals said they would play 21 games in Kansas City and 10 home games in each of the other cities.

"None of us are happy," Van Arsdale said after a team meeting.

Another question still to be answered is the future of Coach Bob Cousy. Royals attorney Ambrose Lindhorst said that no decision has been made on whether the former Boston Celtics star will remain at the Royals helm.

Axelson indicated the club wants to retain Cousy, saying, "I think I can talk him into coming."

It wasn't any secret that the Royals were looking around. But their choice of Kansas City was surprising. Most talk of a move by the club centered on San Diego.

National Forest

Missouri's million and a half National Forest acres, long a fine home for wildlife, would be moving uptown for sure with the implementation of a bold new plan for wildlife management.

The plan, which stresses increased attention to providing water, food and cover for wildlife on the lands within the Mark Twain and Clark National Forests, administered by the U.S. Forest Service, is considered by conservationists to put Missouri ahead of any other state in federal- state conservation cooperation.

As yet the plan is not a reality, only a proposal. Needed is $418,000 from Congress to finance the first year costs. This is an increase of seven percent above the current budget for the two national forests.

Carl Noren, director of the Missouri Department of Conservation, says, "this change toward a better balanced forest environment is an important move to preserve fundamental ecological links in the Missouri Ozarks."

Key to the plan, devised by the Forest Service in cooperation with the Department of Conservation and the Conservation Federation (the state's largest citizen conservation group), is "diversity" and "edge."

Animals such as wild turkeys need forest openings. Deer need young trees on which they can browse. Most species live on the "edge" or the division between field and forest.

"Each animal has its own home requirements," says Ray Evans, Department of Conservation biologist headquartered in West Plains, who has worked closely with the Forest Service on the plan.

"There are some 65 fish species, 75 species of amphibians and reptiles, 175 bird species and 50 mammal species. The solution we've worked out will meet as many requirements as possible among these species," Evans said.

"Within each land unit of about 1,000 acres," he continued, "we'll try for 20 percent in productive forage for animals -- herbs and fruiting shrubs. Another 40 percent should be in mast producing oak and hickory and another 10 percent should be in old- growth trees which provide nest cavities and insects for food."

The plan becomes more complex in that these tree percentages must be scattered over different geological areas -- on south slopes, north slopes, bottoms and ridgetops. And the plan is to be carefully coordinated with timber management in these same lands.

In addition, the plan calls for small lakes and for emphasis on wildlife management.

It calls for protection of endangered and unique wildlife, for maintenance of grasslands and for such specialized recreation areas as walk- in turkey hunting. primitive weapons—only and recreation for wildlife enjoyment.

"This plan has been a three- way effort by the Clark and Mark Twain Forests and the Department of Conservation for 10 years," says Ed Stegner, executive secretary of the 20,000- member Conservation Federation.

Peanut Better A Pleasing Plentiful

Peanut Butter is one of the most flexible, economical and nutritious foods available to any homemaker. The best thing about it is that both children and adults like the flavor.

U. S. Department of Agriculture nutritionists say that the protein in peanut butter is of a higher quality than most vegetable proteins and is therefore a good supplementary food in the diet. Proteins are necessary for proper growth of children, and adults need them every day, too, to rebuild body cells.

Peanut butter also ranks near the top of the food list in food energy, fats necessary for body balance, phosphorus, thiamine and niacine.

This nutritious food is available in two styles: creamy smooth and chunk- style. It can be used in a variety of ways which will tempt everyone in the family.

*To get a little variety in the traditional peanut butter sandwich, try mixing with grated or finely- chopped carrots. Peanut butter with sliced bananas or honey also make good sandwich combinations.

*For a quick vegetable sauce, add two tablespoons of peanut butter to a cup of reconstituted dry milk and stir to blend. Season with salt, pepper and a little grated onion.

*How about a milkshake? Blend 2 tablespoons of peanut butter with 1 teaspoon sugar or honey. Mix in 1 cup of milk and 1 cup ice cream.

*Glaze four ham steaks with a mixture of 1/4 cup peanut butter, 1/4 cup orange marmalade and 2 tablespoons soy sauce. Spread over ham slices and broil about 10 minutes.

*For peanut butter macaroni, stir 2 cups milk gradually into 1/2 cup peanut butter. Cook until mixture thickens slightly, and salt to taste. Pour over cooked and drained macaroni and bake in a moderate oven 15 minutes.

*To satisfy a sweet tooth, try peanut butter marshmallow fudge. cook 1 cup granulated sugar, 1 cup brown sugar, 2 tablespoons butter and 1/2 cup evaporated milk to soft ball stage (234-238 degrees). Add 1 cup miniature marshmallows and 3/4 cup peanut butter just before removing from heat. Do not stir; cool to room temperature. Add 1 tesapoon vanilla and beat until mixture is creamy, thick, and will hold its shape when dropped from a spoon. Pour into well- buttered 8x8x2 inch pan. Cut into 1-inch squares. Makes 36 squares.

Who Was ThatMan With President?

Commercial Appeal

WASHINGTON — One of the best- kept secrets of the Nixon administration was blown during the President's recent trip to China. The American people discovered that there is a highly confidential organization advising the President on foreign affairs which is called the State Department. The head of this secret apparat is a lawyer named William Rogers, an old friend of President Nixon.

This is how the existence of this undercover agency was revealed. When President Nixon went to China, he was seen in the company of a sandy- haired man who rarely left the President's side. Most reporters on the trip assumed he was a Secret Service man and paid no attention to him.

But then the President went ot visit Chairman Mao Tse-tung, and the newspapermen discovered that the sandy- haired man did not accompany Mr. Nixon. This knocked out the theory that the mysterious person was a Secret Service agent.

When questioned about what the person was doing on the trip, Ron Ziegler reluctantly admitted that the man's name was William Rogers and he held the title of secretary of state, and he had something to do with foreign affairs, though Ziegler refused to go into it any further.

Meanwhile, back in Washington, reporters were trying to find out more about the State Department and where it fitted into the diplomatic picture.

The White House seemed very disturbed about the leak, and J. Edgar Hoover has been ordered to find out who blew Mr. Rogers' cover.

A White House spokesman told me, "It does no good for the security of the nation to talk about the role of the State Department in foreign affairs. The people who revealed the existence of Mr. Rogers and the agency he represents may believe they were reporting news, but in effect they are only giving aid and comfort to the enemy."

"Does the revelation of a State Department mean that Henry Kissinger is not running the entire foreign policy of the United States?"

"It means no such thing. All policies on foreign affairs are still made by the 'Department of Kissinger' or, as we call it here, the DOK. The State Department, and I'm not confirming there is one, mind you, is sort of a backup organization which provides the President with information he might miss from his usual sources."

"If this is true, why all the mystery about the organization? Why hasn't the country heard about the State Department before? And why has the identity of William Rogers, as head of it, been kept a secret?"

"The President believes that there are certain agencies that can operate better if they are not publicized. If people knew what Mr. Rogers did, he would not have the freedom of movement that he has now. He can go anywhere in the world without being recognized. The President can assign him missions that would be impossible for someone as well known as Henry Kissinger to take. The State Department, because of its anonymity, has been able to perform a great service to the nation."

"Will the State Department be dismantled, now that its role is out in the open?"

Historian's Ideas

UNCOMMON SENSE. By James MacGregor Burns. Harper. $6.95.

Historian Burns, the prize-winning biographer of Franklin D. Roosevelt and a reform-minded critic of American politics, presents here his own personal exhortations for a change in the American system, which he believes has failed to meet its goals.

Quite deliberately he has taken a stance like that of Thomas Paine — except that he feels sense must be "uncommon" to get results for the common good.

Being an idealist, he deplores the American tendency to be pragmatic, to value a means or an end if it "works."

One of his key words is "transform." He rejects violence as a means of change because it is destructive and ignores the constructive. He favors transformation rather than gradual reformation. He is for long range planning rather than muddling through.

Burns has some concrete suggestions for changes. Centering his attention on the antiquated, negative-oriented machinery of Congress and on the fragmented nature of government at all levels, right down to the local cemetery district, he proposes a stiffening of the executive branch. His idea is to create federal task forces, responsible directly to the chief executive, that would cross over the boundaries of local jurisdictions, and get on a regional basis some coordinated action to solve pressing problems.

SENSING THE NEWS

RALPH NADER: SUPERSTAR

Ralph Nader began his career as a gadfly of industry who won headlines for his allegations of defects in a rear-engine automobile. Today, he is in a league with Barbra Streisand, Richard Burton and the Beetles -- a genuine superstar. Like other superstars, he is pursued by autograph seekers and misty-eyed young women on college campuses who beg the star to sign his name. And like other giants of the amusement world, he apparently knows the mileage to be obtained in refusing a signature-- in shunning the fans who worship him.

In a few years, Ralph Nader has become a major force in American life. No longer is he content to charge that boxes of crackers aren't full to the top. He demands that thousands of automobiles be returned to their manufacturers and presumes to tell Congress how to do its work. He speaks before worshipful audiences at universities, and receives thousands of dollars for an appearance. He is a legend in his own time -- both a cult and a conglomerate. No longer is he a lone crusader with envelopes full of clippings. Scores of eager, young disciples staff his tax- exempt research and lobbying organizations.

Bright- eyed young liberals on campuses have an object for their hero- worship. A decade ago, this breed took off their white suede shoes and joined bands of "freedom marchers" before returning for the next semester at Harvard or Yale. Others of this type thought it was fun to follow old Dr. Spock and march on the Pentagon and call the President of the United States a warmonger. Today, the "in" thing is to get on the Nader bandwagon and organize Nader branches known as PIRGs (public interest research groups) on college campuses -- groups supported by compulsory student activities fees. The young liberals of 1972 get their kicks by copying Ralph Nader and portraying business as Public Enemy No. 1.

Who knows? The campus PIRG leader may grow up to be another Supernader. That's something that will excite the ambitions of the young law school student who finds the law a bore or the graduate student in sociology who is tired of "inner city" research. These types can dream of calling up U. S. senators and saying "this is Ralph," and having the senators know that it can be only one person -- the unelected arbiter of what is good and safe for the American people.

Then there are the visions of headlines in the metropolitan press and prime time on television, with platoons of reporters trying to get interviews. True, Supernader reportedly lives in a boarding house and doesn't even own a car. But there is the attraction of power -- power over people, companies and government agencies. And the anti- business organization provides the amenities, the travel by jet and limousine. There is the knowledge that an appearance at the National Press Club will outdraw a visiting king or premier. Even more attractive is the knowledge that the Critic of Everything has his loyal troops scattered across 50 states and aspires to reforming other countries when he is through with the United States.

The career of Supernader is the ultimate in dreams of juvenile glory. The career is sustained by an endless flow of publicity. But there are dangers, of course, such as threaten the careers of all superstars.

Supernader has to continue to manufacture sensations, precisely as a motion picture superstar has to be seen in new films that are enormously successful. The established superstar is in danger of being eclipsed by other aspiring stars. Finally, the public is fickle. Few superstars enjoy permanent stardom. Campus audiences are notoriously inclined to seek new idols every year or so. They may tire of the critic who tells them that almost everything in the world around them is unsafe or bad for them or unworthy of possession. That proposition can become tiresome.

One day Supernader may find that the audiences have begun to thin out and fade away and that the reporters and TV cameramen are covering other speakers, other events, other shows. Such is the special terror of the superstar.

POTATO PRIMER

Your family probably is quite content to go on feasting on your lovingly whipped-up mashed potatoes, or the easy -on- you baked spuds. But you there in the kitchen -- don't you sometimes wish you could do something different with them? Without too much trouble, of course.

Well, you can ...potatoes are as versatile as the alphabet is long. Perhaps you need just a hint to remind you of an old favorite you've temporarily forgotten. We follow with A to Z ideas -- some new to you, some old favorites -- to prompt you to make more and varied use of potatoes, which the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service says are especially plentiful these days.

B is for Potato Bread -- an old fashioned favorite made with mashed potatoes. Packaged instant mashed potatoes would be handy.

C is for Country-fried -- sliced or diced boiled potatoes fried in butter or drippings; plus a bit of minced onion perhaps.

E is for Escalloped -- vary your standard recipe by using, in place of milk, undiluted evaporated milk or a canned condensed cream soup plus 3/4 can milk.

F is for Fried -- French fried...cottage fried...American fries... you take it from there.

I is for Irish Potato Dumplings -- both grated, uncooked and riced, boiled potatoes in these fluffy dumplings.

J is for potatoes de Jour -- however you decide to fix them, they are the potatoes of the day.

K is for a Kid Pleaser -- hot dogs, split lengthwise and stuffed with mashed potatoes; top with grated cheese and paprika and heat in oven.

L is for Loaf -- mashed potatoes mixed with cooked celery, butter, an egg, seasonings (including a bit of onion) and chopped meat leftover or chopped peanuts; bake.

M is for Mashed potatoes -- perhaps with dairy-soured cream and chives instead of milk and butter.

O is for Omelet -- butter fried, diced, cooked potatoes and a bit of minced onion tucked into the omelet fold.

P is for Patties -- mashed potatoes made into little cakes, dipped in flour, browned in butter. Try egg, then cornflake crumbs for dipping.

Q is for Quick potato products -- the amazing variety of these convenience items will broaden your repertoire greatly.

R is for Roasted -- pared or just scrubbed, but or whole, add to roaster 1 to 1½ hours before meat should be done, baste occasionally.

T is for Twice -baked- baked potatoes scooped out of the skins, mashed and seasoned, then returned to the skins; may be frozen on a cookie sheet and packaged individually in foil.

U is for Unusual -- impress the family with some of the fancy names of ordinary dishes, such as, Gnocchi (a sort of potatoe dumpling), or Lyonnaise (slightly underdone boiled spuds cooked in fat and seasonings and sprinkled with parsley).

V is for Vichyssoise -- a rich cream of potato and leek or onion soup; serve hot or icy-cold.

W is for Whipped cream-topping -- 1/2 cup heavy cream whipped, with 1/2 cup shredded Cheddar cheese folded in, piled atop a casserole of hot mashed potatoes, browned in a quick oven.

Noranda Aluminum Plant's Performance Satisfactory

TORONTO, Canada — The Noranda Aluminum company reduction plant at New Madrid, Mo., a subsidiary of Noranda Mines Limited, reached commercial production in July of 1971 after a smooth start-up, and by the fourth quarter was operating at rated capacity, according to the 1971 annual report of Noranda Mines Limited.

The report stated that the plant cost was over 20 percent higher than the original budget of $85 million, but the operation of the plant has been satisfactory.

Construction of the reduction plant was completed in September of 1971 and rated production of primary aluminum totaled 37,000 tons during the year. The start-up of the facilities was accomplished in an efficient manner with several labor grade expectations, the report stated. Production during the last six weeks of the year was at the rate of approximately 82 per cent of capacity.

Sales of bare conductor products from the wire and cable plant showed improvement in volume and have been well received by several large utilities, the report said.

Competition was intense in the aluminum industry, despite cutbacks by the major producers to offset new production facilities. Product shipments in the U.S. were up six percent, but down over eight percent for ingot, where price discounting was severe. Excess capacity could continue the price pressure in spite of greater activity in construction and transportation.

The decline in demand for most metals which commenced in the second half of 1970 continued through 1971, the report said. The general lack of business confidence and lower rates of capital expenditures were reflected in a worldwide pause in metals consumption and growth which is expected to resume this year.

In what was a generally difficult year for mining, manufacturing and forest products, Noranda Mines earnings increased slightly to a record $61.5 million in 1971.

The earnings per share in 1971 compared to 1970 was $2.50 to $2.41.

1970 earnings were considerably below potential due to strikes and government control of the price of copper in Canada.

Throughout the year, operations were adversely affected by the continuing high value of the Canadian dollar, lower copper prices, and in the last four months, the U.S. surcharge, the report said.

The aluminum industry suffered during the year from excess supply resulting in a severe downward price movement. Industry inventory levels were in an all time high. Major U.S. primary producers curtailed production and ended the year with an operating rate

Reservoir Matter Of Renewed Controversy

WARSAW, Mo. (AP) — With about $64 million already funneled into the Harry S. Truman Reservoir and dam from the taxpayers -- and with the project about 25 per cent complete -- it suddenly has become a matter of renewed controversy as the result of a court suit.

The Environmental Defense Fund, in conjunction with the Missouri Wildlife Society and seven residents of the reservoir area, filed a petition last Monday in U. S. District Court, Kansas City, for an injunction prohibiting continuation of construction.

EDF, which has halted construction with court orders of two dams in Arkansas, claims the Army Corps of Engineers exaggerated the benefits of the massive project on the Osage River, 100 miles southeast of Kansas City. And EDF says, it could bring about the extinction in this country of the paddlefish -or spoonbill catfish -which is at home in the area and found outside the country only in China.

"It's a little too late," said Gordon Drake, mayor of the small city of Warsaw which has chartered a transition from agriculture to tourist-orientation the past six years.

Target date for completion of the Truman Reservoir in June 1979. The estimated cost approaches $300 million.

With the project so far advanced, it had generally been considered a fait accompli. What the suit did was to demonstrate the controversy remained deep-rooted in a sort of dormant state -even though most of the opponents expressed surprise at the development at this stage.

The most vocal opposition to the project was expressed several years ago by some farmers who would be forced to sell their land.

Most of the town will survive the floodpool waters, but some of the outlying districts will not.

Harry Mills, president of the Mo-Ark Basin Association and operator of a Clinton, Mo., insurance office, recalled 90 per cent of the area residents were in opposition to a proposal in 1954, when the Corps of Engineers was considering a 12,000acre lake.

"Then it became obvious that something was going to be done regardless and we'd better see if we could get a restudy and see if we could get some benefits for those of us above the lake," Mils said.

Support was gained for a redesign of the project that included a power project and the larger recreation lake--60,000 acres at normal water level and up to 309,000 acres at flood stage, Mills said.

That will make it the largest federal reservoir in Missouri or Kansas and nearly the size of the Lake of the Ozarks.

Any recent mass of families would be displaced by the dam is untrue, he said, because most of the farmers have already sold out. ... There would be a big problem of what to do with it then."

To date, 330 families have been forced to move from farm homes; 500 from nonfarm homes.

Marion Barnes, a plaintiff in the EDF suit and an Osceola farmer who purchased his land in the Osage valley 30 years ago, said he has yet to negotiate with government agents on the value of his land.

"All they think about is condemning it," he said. "I haven't seen an appraiser in two years. I just want them to buy."

He views the suit as the last chance to stop the dam, which would take 223 acres of his farm, leaving him with 17 acres and a house.

J. S. Whitaker, a director of the Deepwater State Bank and a fellow plaintiff, said:

"You can always build a dam; you can't build rivers. It will put me out of business in farming and I don't know what it's going to do to the bank."

Whitaker faces the loss of 429 of his 709 acres to the reservoir and some of his favorite fishing holes and deer runs.

Mahlon White, editor of the Benton County Enterprise, said the suit might have had some effect if it had been filed before the farmers were displaced. "But the area is becoming built-up and many of the town would be against it," he said.

If necessary, he said he would take an editorial stand against the suit.

O. C. Crudginton, president of the Osage Valley Bank in Warsaw, echoed some of the local sentiment that the suit was "late," and said, "All that money would be down the drain" if construction were halted.

Col. W.R. Needham, Corps district engineer in Kansas City, reviewed expenses on the project to date after the suit was filed:

"We have about $26 million worth of construction in place at the project and another $45 million under contract. We have spent about $27 million to purchase 115,600 acres of land, which represents about one-half of the land acquisition costs required for the project.

"The total investment by the taxpayers to date is approximately $64 million."

Ziegel W. Neff, Warsaw attorney who agrees with the feeling "if the project was going to be stopped it should have been long ago," said:

"I don't think Warsaw is going to benefit as much as most people think. Clinton will be the town that will benefit most. It will be the gateway to the Truman Reservoir."

One of those envisioning a merchant's paradise, Russell Weaver, realtor, said area residents are counting on the reservoir to bring in "missions of people" — a dramatic reversal for Henry County, where the population has dropped from 27,000 in 1890 to 18,000 in 1970.

As for environmental ramifications, people in Warsaw are "insensitive to clean water and wildlife and don't really care about the environment," said Rod Roberts, one of the directors of the area Headwaters Association. But he sees no reason to oppose the dam, which he views as a benefit to the city.

M.K. Chapman of Clinton, retired regional supervisor for the Missouri Conservation Department, feels EDF's concern for the paddlefish may be overreaction. The living example of prehistoric existence--with a body like a catfish and a long bill like a swordfish--is in the Warsaw area, he said, but it is also found in the Lake of the Ozarks below Bagnell Dam and in the Upper Osage above Osceola.

Less moved by the possible danger to the paddlefish was State Sen. William J. Cason, DClinton, majority floor leader, who promised the Corps of Engineers to throw his weight against any efforts to beat down the EDF suit.

"The Environmental Defense Fund, Inc., has already done more harm to the morale of pour pople than their paddlefish could make up for in the next 100 years," Cason told Needham in a telegram.

Five Famous Men

Despite a puerile and one-sided cynicism among the campus and postcampus young and a sour and obesely materialistic skepticism among the middle-aged and elderly, he says at the opening of his book, the truth remains that America sometimes is served by a rare, tough breed of truly responsible politicians.

He calls them "Responsibles because--even with their faults and weaknesses, and even though they often have been misunderstood and rejected, they have managed to do the right thing at the right time for the future good of their country.

He cites five examples: Harry S. Truman, Robert A. Taft, Dwight D. Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson in that order.

His five essays on these men are opinionated in a straightforward way, for he writes from a personal viewpoint, having known the five, and he colors his comment with intimate anecdotes.

In essence, he examines the 'Responsibles' for their personality traits and attempts to show what has made them tick. Inevitably, various readers will disagree with some of his evaluations and conclusions. Yet this book is a valuable reading experience for the light it sheds on the psychological makeup of five men he says "have given more than they have taken from the common human fund of the Great Republic."

Stamps In The News

AP Newsfeatures

By SYD KRONISH

The global a niversary of an organization which has won the plaudits of all mankind — because it deals with the welfare of children — is being honored on stamps, too.

The 25th birthday of the establishment of UNICEF is being marked by the issuance of stamps by various countries. One of these nations to join the philatelic tribute is Tunisia with a pair of interesting designs, reports the World Wide Philatelic Agency.

The two stamps hail the stages of UNICEF's program. In its first development cycle, UNICEF's emphasis was on health and nutrition. The second period, now in effect, dwells on education. The Indonesian government has been following this cooperative program and has placed great stress in publicizing its efforts via these stamps.

UNICEF was created by the United Nations General Assembly in 1946 and was originally concerned with youngsters in post-war Europe. Since 1950, however, the work of the agency has gone world-wide, specializing in long-term assistance to some 112 countries in Asia, Africa and Latin America. In 1965 UNICEF received its outstanding tribute — the organizational Nobel Peace Prize.

The U.S. Postal Service will soon announce the issuance of an attractive "mini-album" containing all the U.S. commemorative stamps produced during 1971. The albums will be on sale in all post offices. . . . and this is the first time in history that the annual booklets are being released at the local level.

The albums will contain 24 commemorative stamps, including the two latest Christmas stamps, and sell for $2.50.

There are some 34,715 price changes — mostly upward — in the 1972 Volume II Scott Catalog. Venezuela leads with 2,970 new prices. Russia has 2,746 revisions, all increases.

Others showing many changes are Spain, San Marino, Sweden, Liechtenstein, Switzerland, Luxembourg, Vatican City and Poland.

Topical collectors will be glad to know that nearly 5,000 stamps depicting a variety of topical subjects during 1971 are listed in a new handbook produced by the American Topical Association. The stamps are all arranged alphabetically, first by topics and then by countries under each topic. The valuable 48-page illustrated guide to topical collecting was compiled by Ruth Y. Wetmore and is priced at $2.

Requests for orders of the new book may be obtained directly from the American Topical Association, 3308 North 50th St., Milwaukee, Wis., 53216.

The Indian Ocean Republic of the Maldives which has issued many stamps featuring famous paintings has just produced another such set. This one depicts paintings of well known dance scenes.

MVP ON SPARTAN ICE

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Center Gilles Gagnon of Montreal was chosen as Michigan State's most valuable hockey player last season. He scored 27 goals and 26 assists for the Spartans.

Gambling in America

Editorial Research Reports

WASHINGTON -- Gambling is believed to be the biggest business in the United States -- a business in which eight out of ten Americans participate to some extent. There are no exact figurses on how much is wagered each year, but there is unanimous agreement that the amount bet illegally is many times greater than the amount bet legally. The President's Crime Commission estimated in 1967 that up to $50 billion was spent annually in illegal gambling on "numbers," horse racing, sports events and dice games. By contrast, federal officials calculated that in 1970 legal bets totaled $4.7 billion.

It is not surprising then that many financially hard- pressed states are looking to the legalization of gambling as a way of raising new revenues. At the latest count, 34 states allowed some form of gambling - from Nevada where just about anything goes to Kansas where only bingo run by charitable or non- profit organizations is permitted. Legalization measures have been introduced in virtually every state legislature that has met this year. About May 1, Massachusetts will become the sixth state - the third this year-- to start operating a lottery.

New Hampshire in 1964 started a lottery to raise public funds -- reviving a practice that disappeared late in the 19th century. Then came New York (1967) and New Jersey (1970), followed this year by Connecticut, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts. The money derived from lotteries -- minus prizes, promotion and other expenses -- is turned over to the state governments where most of it is used for education.

With the possible exception of New Jersey, profits from the first three state lotteries have been far less than initially expected. Richard Metzer, dean of New York University's Graduate School of Public Administration, contends: "You can't expect a lottery to produce vast amounts of money like you get in a broad - based tax like a sales or income tax. Lottery income amounts to about the same as a penny or so rise in a cigarette tax."

A number of states have eagerly been studying offtrack betting since New York City last April opened the nation's first offtrack parlors for placing legal bets on horse racing. The Offtrack Betting Corporation has had to scale down its original estimate of profits that would be turned back to the city. Nonetheless, OTB has tapped a betting market capable of producing tens of millions for the city treasury.

In the past few years, about a dozen states have had bills in their legislatures to legalize casinos. Perhaps the most intensive push for casino legalization has been in New Jersey, where Atlantic City is envisioned as a potential "Las Vegas of the East." Opponents, remembering that Atlantic City was a mecca for illegal casinos in the 1920s, fear that legal ones would be easy targets for mob takeover.

The President's Crime Commission reported that gambling is organized crime's chief source of income. And underworld informer Vincent C. Teresa told a Senate subcommittee last July that gang leaders, with their gambling profits, "have bought their way into police stations and state courts, legitimate businesses and lillicit sidelines such as loan sharking, stolen securities and counterfiet credit cards."

Gambling's propensity for corrupting public officials is used by both sides in the growing debate over legalization. Those in favor of legalized gambling assert that it would remove the incentive for much of the present corruption of policemen -- the need for protection from enforcement of anti- gambling laws. It is further argued that whatever corruption remained after legalization would be easier to ferret out. Finally, there is the argument that even if some corruption remained, the public would receive sizable tax revenues from legalization.

Foes of legalized gambling maintain that it cannot be controlled effectively by public officials and that sooner or later it will corrupt them. Rep. Wright Patman (D Texas), the populist chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee, contends: "Legalized gambling is the greatest form of regressive taxation that can be imposed on people. It socks the poor and lets the rich -- who do their gambling in stocks -- off the hook." Others point out that state revenues from gambling tend to be far less than initially expected.

Despite the opposition, it seems likely that more states will enact laws to legalize gambling. These laws may not provide as much revenue as proponents now project, they may not eliminate corruption and underworld influence, and they may even send some of the poor deeper into poverty. But they now appeal less controversial and more acceptable to both the public and the politicians than increased taxes.

Items Of Rail Nostalgia To Go On Public Sale

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Items of nostalgia from the early years, the golden years and the declining years of American railroading go on public sale here next Monday.

Among the 1,877 items to be auctioned off at the three-day sale are the rolltop desk once used by rail magnate E.H. Harriman and the steam whistle and a drive wheel from the locomotive John Bull, one of the earliest engines in American rail history.

The John Bull was built for the Camden and Amboy Railroad in 1831 and pulled its duty between Camden and Trenton, N.J., on a line that was the beginning of the rail connection between Philadelphia and New York.

Hundreds of rail buffs from around the country are expected to be on hand as the entire collection of the Pennsylvania Railroad Museum goes on the auction block.

"It is apparently the largest railroad auction and certainly the largest collection of railroadiana ever offered for sale," Lou Pardee, presi-ent of the National Railroad Historical Society, said after viewing the collection at a preview last week.

Sandwiched in between Item No. 1, "Scrapbook of Assorted Special Menus," and Item No. 1,877, "Famed Painting 'Passing Strangers' Signed Atherton," are hundreds of old photographs, a huge collection of official railroad guides and other bits of railroad history.

Many of the items have only a tenuous connection with railroading: cast iron deer heads, five counterfeit bills, and two wooden flag poles.

But most of the dusty pieces are of undoubted interest to rail buffs: Pullman car ladders, railroad headlamps, old telegraph keys, the battered top hat worn by the engineer of the first train into Indianapolis, a 6-foot-long clock that once was in the Newark, N.J., station, lanterns, baggage carts, and a $60 check paid in 1840 to one John Wagner for a month's service as a locomotive engineer.

Mixed Results In Return

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Six tax consultants here came up with six different results when asked for help in filling out a federal income tax return.

The maximum difference was $454. One consultant said the taxpayer owed $7. Another said a refund of $377 was due.

An Associated Press writer and his wi fe went to th consultants for advice on filling out their joint return with itemized deductions. The couple pretended to know little about possible deductions but gave the same information to each consultant when asked for it.

Some of the consultants found legitimate deductions, such as damage to the family car that was not covered by collision insurance.

Others listed deductions such as ordinary sunglasses, which the Internal Revenue Service says are only deductible if worn on jobs where they are an absolute necessity.

Some of the consultants say in their advertising that they will appear with the taxpayer if he has to go to court over his return.

David Kestler, chief tax auditor for the IRS office here, noted in an interview that "the person who signs the return is responsible for everything that's in it."

One consultant failed to suggest many legitimate deductions that the couple was entitled to, such as the husband's alimony payments.

Only one of the consultants went beyond the usual question about doctor bills and medicine costs to discover that the newsman was entitled to a deduction for the cost of crutches and special shoe supports needed because of a broken leg.

The deductions and the final figures weren't the only places where the tax experts differed. The fees ranged from $27 to $50.

One firm of a national chain charged $50, while another office of the same chain a mile away charged $35.

One IRS consultant was stumped by a question of whether the newsman's education expenses to better qualify him for his job were deductible.

"Gee," said the consultant. "That's a tough one. Let me ask someone else."

After 14 minutes of reading the IRS instructions and much debate among three consultants, it was decided that the education expenses might be deductible.

Mr. Sam Harbin,
Superintendent of Schools
Sikeston Public Schools

Dear Sir:

On Firday March 3, 1972 a copy of the enclosed letter, concerning the Shrine Circus was brought home by our two elementary age children (one 3rd and one 5th grader). I have given this matter a great deal of thought for over a week. I can not in good conscious let it pass without asking you to explain certain points.

1. Who decided to dismiss that many students from regular classes for a circus?

2. How many of those responsible are Shriners?

3. There are a number of children who receive free milk and lunches, are they expected to have a $1.25 to spend on a circus? If not, will these children be left at school while those who can afford the tickets are enjoying a circus? (This wouldn't be fair would it.) Will there be free tickets available for those who can't afford to pay? If so who will decide who pays and who goes free? Who would pay for the free tickets if they are made available?

4. What arrangements have been made for additional adult supervision? Even if we assumed each room had their own aid, obviously one teacher and one teachers aid to each 25- 30 students would be totally inadequate in case of a fire or other mishap.

5. What is the agenda for children in first - third grades who choose not attend the circus? The teachers and aids will all be at the circus.

6. Will the fourth and fifth graders have regular classes?

7. About how much money will you expect to be collected from this captive audience, does any portion of this money stay in the Sikeston School System?

Please understand, I am not against Shriners or circuses, I do place a very high value on a quality education for my two children. I do feel there should be a proper priority placed on things. I do not mean to insenuate that a few hours of classes being dismissed will cause our Public School system to fall apart at the seams, however, there is something wrong basically when a circus can demand this much time over regular classes for so many students. Quote from letter- "They will be writing stories, drawing pictures, and talking about the circus in classroom activities for days before and after the performance."

Your personal reply would be greatly appreciated.

Respectfully,
Mrs. Tommy Fraser, Jr.
Concerned Parent

PS: We plan to attend the Saturday afternoon performance of the circus with our two children.

SIKESTON PUBLIC SCHOOLS
Sikeston, Missouri

Dear Parent:

On Friday and Saturday, March 24th and 25th the SEMO Shrine Circus returns to Sikeston. We feel that it would be a valuable experience for our small children to attend as a group with their teacher. We do not think it wise to attempt to take ALL elementary children, since transportation facilities are not adequate to get all children to the circus in time to see the opening performance and then back to school in time to catch buses for home, etc. It was decided that grades 1, 2, 3, and Special Education students would go to the circus this year with their teachers. This represents a little over half of our total elementary enrollment or approximately 1300 students. These students will attend the afternoon performance on Friday, March 24 from 1:00 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. We hope every student in grades 1, 2, 3, and Special Education will be able to attend.

Tickets for the circus are $1.25 for school children. You may send this amount to your child's teacher. She will write the child's name on the back of his ticket and keep it for him to avoid loss. Children should bring their ticket money to the teacher no later than Friday, March 17th.

It will not be necessary for children to bring extra money, since the concession stand will not be open during this performance. Only programs and circus novelties will be sold. Intermission time will be cut so that the children can get back to school by the regular dismissal time.

Each classroom in grades 1, 2, 3, and Special Education will be accompanied by the teacher and a teacher aide. The students of these grades will sit in reserved areas for their particular school for purposes of safety and crontrol. If you do not want your 1st, 2nd, 3rd, or Special Education child to go to the circus with his classmates, please inform the teacher or principal by phone or note.

Kindergarten children enrolled in the afternoon session will not be counted absent if the parent will call and notify the Kindergarten Office that the child will attend the circus. Students in grades 4 and 5 will be permitted to attend the circus with a parent, an adult relative, or neighbor (and will not be counted absent) on Friday afternoon, March 24th. Fourth and fifth grade students should bring a note to their teachers stating "who" will pick them up at the school between 12:00 and 12:30 a.m. on Friday, March 24th. Tickets for kindergarten students and students of grades 4 and 5 may be obtained from their teachers.

We think this will be an enjoyable experience for children in the primary grades. They will be writing stories, drawing pictures, and talking about the circus in classroom activities for days before and after the performance.

A small number of tickets for parents are also available at each elementary school. Price $2.50 each.

MATTHEW

One of the most colorful disciples, next to St. Peter, was Matthew, son of Alphaeus. Earlier known as Levi, the tax collector, he changed his life and his name to become a disciple of Jesus. As a Jew who had worked for the despised Romans, he was considered a turncoat. Yet the call of Jesus was met with genuine and eager acceptance.

Matthew brought a level of brilliance not matched by the fishermen and tradesmen in the ranks of the Twelve. His education and advanced business experience lead many to believe that he is the author of the first gospel, the Gospel According to Matthew. It is Matthew who preserved some of the most powerful and convincing messages of Christ, like the Sermon on the Mount. As an Apostle, he used his resourcefulness and dedication to bring the life of Christ to a waiting world.

Coffee Corner by Cherie

It's always suppose to be the women who do all the gossiping, who eat too much, and who always take more than they need when packing to go someplace, but that's just simply not true! I never yet have heard a rumor on someone that when I've raced home to inform Charles of some juicy tidbit he's said, "Oh, that's old, the boys and I discussed all this at coffee two weeks ago." Ha, with men its discussions, but with women it's gossip! Anyway, not only do they talk the most, but they also pack the most and I can prove it. This weekend Charles and one of our esteemed doctors took eight little fellas on an overnight camp out and I kid you not, with what they took they could have made a six month safair to Africa and lived in luxury. For a week they went about gathering tents, sleeping bags, pots and pans, fishing equipment, first-aid equipment, assorted sized flash lights, (I never could figure out why so many of those) and enough food and clothing for Cox's army. Example: for Charles and Lee for one lunch, one dinner and a breakfast they packed twenty-four biscuits, jelly and butter, five lbs. of potatoes, 1 dozen eggs, coffee, potato chips, candy bars, six dozen cookies, 6 ham sandwiches, steaks, mayonnaise, salt and pepper, lettuce and salad trimmings, corn on the cob, sodas, one lb. of bacon and one of sausage, loaf of bread, and that's all I got to see because I begin to laugh so hard they took the rest of the sacks out in the car and wouldn't let me look in them. Anyway, off they went and since Charles had a doctor traveling with him I figured I didn't have to worry cause he could pick Charles up out of the holes he was bound to fall in and take care of sprains, broken bones and burns without resorting to first reading the Red Cross kit. Anyway, they left and all returned exhausted but otherwise in fine shape and after unloading everything the only bit of food they handed me was one potato. Now, the sixty-four dollar question — do you really think they ate all that, or do you think they threw it out so I couldn't say "I told you so" when they returned home with all those groceries. I haven't figured out yet, but with the price of food these days if I find out they pitched it, they're both going on bread and water for a week!

Air Force To Give More Pilot Ground Training

NEW YORK (AP) — There was little surprise in the simulation industry when the Air Force decided to give more of its pilot training on the ground. "It makes sense," was the general reaction.

Sense? How do you teach a man to fly a plane if he doesn't leave the ground? In the same way you teach a man to be at home on the moon or to run a nuclear power plant that hasn't been built. By creating "reality."

This industry has now developed an eerie capacity to produce substitute environments through the use of computers and videotape. So real are they that those exposed to them are often convinced they are involved in the real thing.

While the real thing often is difficult to monitor, the simulation permits a variety of visual and electronic checks.

Little wonder then that with equipment and operating systems becoming more sophisticated and complex, operators of plant equipment, tankers, earth-moving apparatus, locomotives and even automobiles are taught on simulators.

A relatively small industry until World War II, it is now reliably estimated to amount to $250 ,million of business a year, worldwide. And as space vehicles and larger aircraft are built, its future seems assured.

About one-third of the total is claimed by the Link Division of The Singer Co., which have large segments held by Canadian Aviation Enterprises, Redifon Ltd., of England, and McDonnell Douglas.

The most dramatic demonstration of the value of simulators was given to the world when a malfunctioning Apollo and its three occupants were brought safely to earth.

Unable to experiment with their craft because of an inability to predict results, the astronauts relied on simulators assembled at the Manned Spacecraft Center in Houston and at other points.

Every situation that was likely to confront the malfunctioning ship was worked out on the simulators. Land-based astronauts went through all the possibilities and then relayed their experiences aloft.

However, in more common situation the simulator is also playing a bigger role. At the very time complex pieces of equipment are being designed, a simulator often is being assembled as well.

An exact replica of the control room of a nuclear power plant, for example, was used to train the men who would operate the real thing. The simulator was coupled to a digital computer programmed with mathematic models for nuclear, thermodynamic and electrical phenomena.

Jews Leaving Russia

May Approach 30,000

MOSCOW (AP) — About 5,500 Soviet Jews have emigrated to Israel so far this year, informed sources reported today.

They said if the present rate of departures is maintained, an unofficial target of 30,000 for 1972 could nearly be attained. This total was passed on by unofficial Soviet sources to Israeli officials and is believed to reflect the Kremlin's intentions, they said.

In 1970 an estimated 1,000 Soviet Jews were issued exit visas. Last year, replying to pressure from the Jewish community and foreign criticism, the Soviets allowed 13,965 Jews to leave.

Sources in the Jewish community said Soviet officials are maintaining the ban on emigration of Jewish scientists who have worked in defense-related industry or research.

Sources who follow the question closely said the Soviets appear to have several reasons for their present policy on Jewish emigration.

By allowing larger numbers to leave, the Kremlin is attempting to counter damaging criticism of its handling of the "Jewish question."

Yet the Kremlin rids itself of a lot of troublemakers by insuring that the preponderance of the emigrants are the least educated, the most backward and the most recalcitrant of the Soviet Jews who want to leave.

The problem of Taiwan was the main cause of this.

The joint communique said the two governments decided to raise the level of their diplomatic representatives from charge d'affaires to ambassadors as of today.

The communique said: "The government of the United Kingdom ... acknowledging the position of the Chinese government that Taiwan is a province of the People's Republic of China, has decided to remove their official representation from Taiwan on March 13, 1972."

The communique also said: "The government of the United Kingdom recognize the government of the People's Republic of China as the sole legal government of China."

The three-paragraph statement was signed by China's deputy foreign minister, Chiao Kuanhua and Charge d'Affaires J. M. Addis of Britain.

The Peking broadcast said Chiao and Addis, "duly authorized by their respective governments, held negotiations and on March 13, 1972, reached an agreement on the exchange of ambassadors between the two countries."

China, Britian Agree To Exchange Ambassadors

TOKYO (AP) — China and Britain have agreed to exchange ambassadors, a joint communique broadcast by Peking announced Monday.

The communique ended a 22year tussle between Peking and London over the problem of Taiwan, seat of the Nationalist Chinese government. It reflected a reversal of Britain's original stand that the status of Taiwan remained to be internationally determined.

Britain and China have been in a diplomatic relationship since 1950 but each is represented in the other's capital by a charge d'affaires.

Literary Curiosity

GLORY. By Vladimir Nabokov. McGraw-Hill. $6.95.

Essentially this novel is a literary curiosity.

Nabokov, who later was to become famous for his works in English, wrote nine novels in the Russian language. They were published between 1926 and 1952. "Glory" was the fifth in the series, coming in 1932, but it is the last to be translated into English.

This is a story about a young man named Martin, who is 16 when the narrative opens. Of Swiss descent, he comes from a broken home. He is one of those uncertain young men of no particular talent. He doesn't know what he wants to do and has little confidence in himself.

So far as the plot is concerned, nothing very vital happens to Martin. He gets away from Russia at the time of the Revolution. He is sent to Cambridge for his education. He has a frustrating experience with a flirtatious young woman named Sonia. He flubs around, seeking an occupation, and finally takes off on a pointless mission into Russia

CHANGES IN TOMATO HANDLING AND PROCESSING

To keep pace with the changing methods of tomato product handling and processing in the U. S., Department of Agriculture has proposed a revision of U. S. Standards for Grade Evaluation of Tomatoes for Processing.

The proposal was submitted after a year of study and consultation with the National Canners Association, the American Agricultural Marketing Association, and other growers and processors.

The proposal provides for inspection procedures for determining quality on the basis of color measurement and classification of defects. The method of color measurement would be optional, either by use of USDA's tomato colorimeter or by subjective visual evaluation.

Classification of tomatoes would be in three categories — A, B, and Culls — and would be decided on the basis of color, firmness, evidence of freezing injury and freedom from mold or decay and other defects.

To allow time for testing during the next crop season, comments on the proposal will be received through November 30, 1972. Submit comments to: Hearing Clerk, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Room 112, Adminkstration Bldg., Washington, D.C. 20250. Comments will be available for public review during business hours.

MISSOURI LEADS VETERANS EMPLOYMENT DRIVE

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Missouri has been a leader in providing jobs for its young citizens who are returning from active duty in Vietnam and elsewhere since the Federal government initiated a major campaign to reduce high unemployment among veterans last June.

We are all aware that far too often returning veterans have been unable to find work because of continued high unemployment — almost 20,000 veteran applications are currently on file with the Missouri State Employment Service.

The employment drive for veterans in Missouri is encouraging, however, and could well serve as a model for other states. This success is due in large part to the interest and commitment of Missourians in business and government.

The National Alliance of Businessmen, which has taken on the task at the federal level of finding jobs for 100,000 Vietnam- era veterans, gave particular praise to the enthusiastic local efforts led by United Utilities, Inc. President Paul Henson in Kansas City and Bank of St. Louis President Jack Minton.

"We are particularly proud of the successes achieved by the Alliance in Missouri. Kansas City was our first Metro to take the leadership in a major job fair. This was also the first NAB organization to add a Vietnam- era veteran to their staff. Approximately 1300 veterans were hired as a result of the job fair. Based on this successful experience St. Louis followed with 8000 hires recorded."

The Kansas City program received additional recognition in the NAB publication "Onboard" which described the veterans job fair there— the first jobs fair sponsored by NAB — and the community-wide effort which contributed to its success. The NAB has recommended the Kansas City fair as a model for other cities.

In the four- state NAB region of Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas and Iowa, 2200 of the 3000 jobs found by veterans since June are in Missouri, almost half of the total regional goal of 5000 in Fiscal year 1972.

Although much remains to be done in assuring job opportunities for returning veterans, we can be proud of the progress to date in our state.

At any rate, young Dennis Batich whipped up a main dish that's high in nutrition and low in cost, also easy for aspiring cooks in the household to master.

For those interested in authentic New Mexican cookery, there's a fantastic new book available, authored by Mrs. Fabiola C. Gilbert. During the next several weeks I'll be using some of the goodies. You might want to try such delicacies as homemade tortillas, chile sauces and native corn dishes. Promises to be good reading, at least. Complete instructions for grinding your own meal accompany recipes.

Oily Secrets

BALTIMORE (AP) — When it comes to cars, Mrs. Jackie DePaul knows a thing or two about their oily secrets.

"Men aren't so smart when it comes to automobiles," Mrs. DePaul says.

For the past 18 years, the white-haired auto expert has worked in the traditionally all-male province of the junkyard. She quickly denies that any motive of women's liberation led her there.

"Men will come in here and be surprised to find a woman," Mrs. DePaul said as she explored the innards of a carburetor. "But mostly I don't mind the kidding.

Mrs. DePaul started repairing cars 26 years ago when her husband, Louis, began working in a garage. Later, the couple decided to start their own auto junkyard and sell auto parts and a few used cars. Mrs. DePaul worked beside her husband to get the family enterprise in full gear.

Now Mrs. DePaul spends most of her time in the business office, selling auto parts and handling bookkeeping.

"You've got to be able to look at a wrecked car and figure just how much you can get out of it before you buy it," she explained.

"Most people — especially women — know how to drive a car and that's all. So what happens when they break down a hundred miles from nowhere?

"They're helpless."

Civil War Memories

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — Jannie Peppers Carmichael remembers when Abraham Lincoln was president. She was 5 years old then.

No she is 115 years old but she still remembers the days of slavery when, at the age of 6, she was put in the fields to plow.

"In those early days I used to farm, cut grass, plow with mules and cut tobacco," said Mrs. Carmichael, who moved to Yonkers seven years ago.

"It was hard work but without it I wouldn't be here today," she added. "Seems like I plowed those fields every day of my life.

"And when the snows came up to our knees we didn't really mind it too much cause we could play in it and build big snowmen."

Mrs. Carmichael was born Oct 3, 1856, in Lumberton, N.C., and she remembers the Civil War with "fires, ruined land, houses torn down and people getting killed all over the countryside."

"In my day the boys and girls used to stand by the side of the railroad track and as the train was passing by, we would swing onto one of the cars and go for a ride," she said.

When she saw her first automobile, a Model-T in the early 1900's, she thought it was a wagon. "I didn't know where the mule was," she said.

Her husband, "Doc," died "three years before he was 100." Mrs. Carmichael has four children, seven grandchildren, 27 great- great- grandchildren, 26 great-great- great and 15 great- great- great - great - great - grandchildren.

She moved to Yonkers in 1964 to live with her daughter, Mrs. Mary Graham. "But I'm always longing to go back to North Carolina and I really like traveling," she said.

Mrs. Carmichael has lived through 23 presidents, the invention of the airplane, automobile, color photography, dynamite, telegraph, zipper, washing machine and electric stove.

"Things aren't anything like they used to be," she said, "but people are just about the same,"

Does she have a secret for long life?

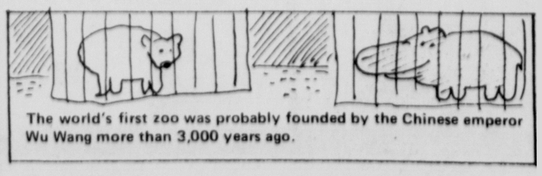
Her age makes her one of the oldest persons living today.

But she is not really old. Every afternoon she walks up and down three flights of stairs to take her daily stroll. In mind and spirit, Mrs. Carmichael is young.



The world's first zoo was probably founded by the Chinese emperor Wu Wang more than 3,000 years ago.

For a long time the need of a woman on the school board has been felt and many voters have called on Mrs. Edith Blanton, wife of Dr. Frank Blanton, to make the race this time and she has consented. Mrs. Blanton has two small children in school and is deeply interested in school work.

We fail to see why some Democratics papers find fault because the President takes so many trips away from Washington. The Standard has failed to note where he has accomplished anything for the agricultural sections of the country while on duty and we just leave him in Florida or Alaska as in Washington.

Something Must Be Wrong With The Television

in the
Commercial Appeal

WASHINGTON -- It was two days after President Nixon's return from China and the family went into the living room after dinner to watch television.

My wife turned on the set and said, "That's funny. There seems to be something wrong with the TV. I can't get Nixon on the tube."

She switched to another channel and got a private- eye program. "He's not on this channel either."

I rose from my chair and started fiddling with the dials myself. I tried all the channels — no Nixon. "Who has been messing around with this set?" I shouted.

The kids were very defensive. "We didn't touch it," my son said.

My daughters also denied having done anything with it. "Dammit," I said, "we could turn on this set any time day or night on any channel and get a picture of Nixon. Now we can't even get him on educational TV."

Fuming, I called up my TV repairman, George Cury.

George came over with his tool kit. "I can't understand it," I said. "Nixon has been coming in loud and clear on prime time every evening. But tonight all I can get is a movie, Dean Martin and a Lucy rerun."

Mr. Cury said, "Let me try." He flipped the dial back and forth. "You're right. There's something definitely wrong. Maybe it's in the aerial."

Mr. Cury climbed up on the roof and came back down. "The aerial seems to be all right. It's pointing toward China. You say you have had no trouble up until this week?"

POLLY'S POINTERS

Moist Air Cuts Down Static Electricity

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—I am answering Sally's problem regarding a Dacron polyester dress that clings. I have found the following things work satisfactorily for this: Wear a cotton slip under the dress, line a lightweight Dacron with cotton batiste to add body and prevent the cling, use a fabric softener in the final rinse when washing and do not overdry, and try to keep the air moist.

My experience has been that keeping the air moist does the most good. Dacron clings because of static electricity build-up as it rubs itself or a nylon slip and there is less of that in moist air. We have a humidifier on our furnace but, in addition, I keep a pan of water on low heat on the stove all day and night during the winter. As a result we have no more shock from rugs, no clinging clothes, no fly-away hair after washing and fewer colds.—A CHEMISTRY INSTRUCTOR

DEAR GIRLS—If you keep a pan of water on your stove, do set your timer or an alarm clock as a reminder to refill it or there may be a lot of burned pans.—POLLY

Polly's Problem

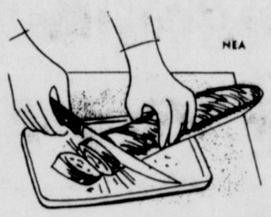
DEAR POLLY—I am giving a bridal shower and would like some ideas for inexpensive souvenirs the girls could pin on their dresses. I bought four dozen little watering cans and ribbon. I do hope some of the readers can help me with suggestions.—MRS. M.

DEAR POLLY—My Pet Peeve is with those companies that send bills without including an addressed return envelope for the payment. It is such a nuisance to have to address an envelope, especially when the needed address is not on the return stub of the bill and you have to look somewhere for it.—MARGARET

DEAR POLLY — I have been using the plastic meat containers that meat is placed in before it is wrapped at the supermarket for throw-away cutting boards. They are great for slicing meat, French bread, etc., and can be thrown away so there is no cleanup afterwards. — J. M. J.



DEAR POLLY — I tried everything that both friends and enemies suggested as a remedy for the terrific odor that developed in my orthopedic shoes but nothing worked. I finally asked my obliging druggist, who gave me some pieces of rock camphor. That night I put some in each shoe, dropped a towel over them and two days later the odor was gone. Hope this helps someone else who might have the same problem.—GENEVIEVE

Tax Bite Takes Priority in Law

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Peter was a firm believer in honesty, but he was too busy embezzling his company's funds to practice it. A real conflict in principals developed, however, when the Internal Revenue Service discovered his predilection for pilfering. Since Peter failed to include the stolen money in his income tax return, he was charged with the federal offense of evading the payment of taxes.

"Under the 16th amendment of the U.S. Constitution," a government attorney pointed out in court, "Congress has the right to levy and collect taxes on income derived from any source whatsoever and to require the reporting of same. And, embezzled funds are taxable."

"That may be true," responded Peter, "but under the 5th Amendment a person can't be compelled to be a witness against himself. If I reported embezzled funds in my income tax returns, not even Perry Mason could save me from going to jail. Consequently, to convict me would be tantamount to finding me guilty of exercising my rights under the 5th Amendment and, obviously, that's unconstitutional."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you jail Peter for being reluctant in reporting embezzled funds in his income tax returns?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that while there may be a conflict in constitutional amendments, it must be resolved, as a practical matter, in favor of the 16th Amendment. For after all, noted the judge, if a person could refuse to report a substantial amount of income under the protection of the 5th Amendment, the income tax system would ultimately fall in shambles with catastrophic effects upon the whole nation. Based upon a 1971 United States District Court Decision)

? Consumer's Question Box ? By Margaret Dana

Q. Having read that common table salt is a deterrent to sleep, I have been trying to cut down on the use of it and substitute monosodium glutamate. Are the properties of MSG much different from sodium chloride? I would be interested to know the chemical formula of MSG -- or is that just a trade name?

A. Monosodium glutamate is not related to sodium chloride. It is derived from a natural compound present in many foods -- its basic name is glutamic acid.

In human bodies monosodium glutamate is produced from glutamic acid in the course of ordinary digestion. The amount used as a seasoning in food preparation, in the home kitchen or commercial kitchen, is only from 1 per cent to 3 per cent of the actual amount normally present in many of our foods, especially meats.

Intensive research by impartial scientists has found MSG not harmful in any way used as a seasoning except to those allergic to it. Other research studies which reported it to be harmful were based on feeding huge does to mice, by injection under the skin. These tests and methods are not valid.

Q. I have been buying half-hams from a mail order company which states the half-hams will weigh from 6½ to 8 pounds, and they are all priced the same, no matter how much the actual half- ham finally weighs. This means I often may pay for a pound or so I don't get. Is this legal?

A. I have checked with the Chief of the Office of Weights and Measures at our National Bureau of Standards, and am told the way of selling hams you describe is illegal. Meat must be sold by "net weight." There are no provisions for a range of from 6½ to 8 pounds. Price per "unit," or pound, is also required by the Model Packaging Law.

Q. Since there is so much talk these days of the safety or harm of food additives, and so little agreement, shouldn't there be some way they could be tested so consumers would feel sure they have had impartial and truly scientific evaluation?

This would put a stop to a lot of the guesswork that the news media does, telling us first something is deadly then that it is really O.K.

A. Gaylord Nelson, D. Wisc., has introduced legislation which would do just what you suggest. It would require that food and color additives be tested by a neutral "third-party," competent to study the chemical additives. Testing would not be done by laboratories connected with any firms which developed the chemicals. Any company wanting to introduce a new additive would have to submit its application to the Food and Drug Administration and have it impartially tested before approval.

Consumers who approve of this proposed law might write their Congressmen to tell them so, or write to Sen. Nelson's office, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

Q. What is the difference between salad dressing and mayonnaise? Which has the most calories?

A. Salad dressing is usually a boiled sauce, depending chiefly on flour for thickening with milk and the usual condiments -- mustard, salt, cayenne, etc. (Mayonnaise is not cooked and depends on a large quantity of olive oil for its thickening with egg yolks. Boiled salad dressing is rated as having 25 calories per tablespoon, mayonnaise, 100 per tablespoon.

HALIFAX (AP) — Two Nova Scotia nursing sisters will spend the next six months looking after lepers, abandoned children and people dying destitute in Calcutta.

Joe Frazier Story

COME OUT SMOKIN' By Phil Pepe. Coward, McCann & Geoghegan. $6.95.

This is an interesting story on the life of Joe Frazier, the world's heavyweight boxing champion who has won every fight he's had in the professional ring.

Frazier was the champion nobody knew and Pepe pulls no punches in getting across the fact that Joe, before he handed Muhammad Ali his only beating, called Ali, whom he calls Cassius Clay, a loudmouth.

"He (Clay) had it easy in boxing," Frazier tells Pepe. "A white man in his corner, those rich plantation owners to back him and a white lawyer to keep him out of jail and he's going to Uncle Tom me. I have a black man in my corner, my manager and both black and white people backing me."

Pepe goes right through Frazier's career from the time he was the second youngest of 13 children of a sharecropper and his wife in Beaufort, S.C., to his March 8, 1971 victory over Ali.

He tells how Frazier worked out as a youth in a makeshift gym in an old wagon shed, pounding a flour sack filled with sand, and how his subject married at 16 and became the father of a son, and worked eight hours a day in a Philadelphia slaughter house.

The story is one of the most interesting ever written on a boxer.
